PREFACE

Wouldn't Peter and George Coan be astounded if they could read this book! To have so many known descendants (many more who are unknown)--people from all walks of life, who have lived in most of these United States and in many foreign countries--would be to them, I'm sure, absolutely unbelievable.

A few of us many descendants have found fame; but most of us have been just honest, decent, hard-working individuals--trying to make a good life for ourselves and our families, doing our jobs, serving our country, worshipping our God, helping our neighbors, and contributing to our communities as best we could. It is in large part because of the interest and genealogical contributions of these fine descendants that I have been able to compile this Coan book. I wish I could name all of you who helped, but the list would be too lengthy. I must, however, mention those living descendants and non-descendants who have given this project an extraordinary amount of time and assistance.

First and foremost in this list is Virginia Catherine⁸ (Coan) Wiles, who has so graciously shared her years of research; has contributed all the data and the many illustrations in the Charles Wattles⁵ Coan section of Chapter 2; and has in every way supported and encouraged me in this undertaking. Second, my thanks go to Theodore Hunter Smith⁷, who has spent many years researching the Coans, especially the Jacob² Coan line, and who generously contributed his findings, as well as his careful editing and proofreading, to Chapter 2. Third, to Margaret Stallman Ruth, wife of Roger A. Ruth⁸, I am deeply indebted for her assistance, suggestions, and carefully researched data on Sylvanus³ Coan in Chapter 8. To her husband, Roger, I owe nearly all the photographs in that chapter. And finally, to my typist and good friend, Nancy A. Merrill, I will be forever grateful for her painstaking work, for the many hours she spent beyond what was expected, and for her patience with the numerous additions and revisions she had to make right up to the final hour when the book went to the publisher.

To the following I am also greatly indebted:

Edward M.⁷ and Barbara Coan
Darlene Hogue Coan, wife of Norman Allison⁷ Coan
Frances S.⁸ Coan

My thanks go also to many city and town libraries, state libraries, historical association libraries, town offices--especially to those who work there--for their wonderful cooperation and the facts they discovered. I am also very grateful to a number of newspapers, as well as to the following universities, seminaries, colleges, and schools whose staffs have searched the archives, special collections, and alumni files to send me Coan data that exists nowhere else:

Finally, to my three children, Pam, David, and Bob--thank you for your sympathetic support and continued encouragement. To my husband Bob--to you I will be eternally grateful for driving me many, many miles on this Coan hunt; for helping me find and check innumerable graveyards; for traveling by plane and bus to distant places so I could do the necessary research; and for being ever patient and understanding during the hundreds of hours I've spent in the last four years reading, writing, and typing.

I wish I felt that in this book all facts were accurate, all Coan lines complete; but I know better. Many errors, unfortunately, will be found. Some records were hand written and hard to read. Others were incorrect and differed in names, spellings, places, and dates. Also, people who sent information did not always write clearly. There were many Coans I was unable to trace at all for lack of data. What I have managed to assemble is a good start--one upon which I hope others may someday build.

When, however, you readers do find errors, omissions, and misinformation, I hope you will write me the correct facts. If I receive enough additional information, in a year or two I will issue a supplement with an errata section and any new data.

To those of you non-descendants who read this book, I trust meeting the Coan family in print will be an interesting experience. To you who are descendants, I hope after reading the story of your family, you will feel as I do--proud to be related to the Coans, proud to be a Coan!

CHAPTER 1

PETER AND GEORGE, IMMIGRANTS: THE SEARCH

According to tradition, who were Peter and George Coan, and where did they come from? Fred Welby⁶ Coan and Jeffery Prescott⁹ Coan, both descendants of Peter through Shubael⁴ Coan of Maine, were told that the Coans came from Holland and were Dutch. The Genealogical and Family History of the State of Connecticut (New York: Lewis Historical Publishing Company, 1911), Vol. 1, p. 90, edited by William Richard Cutter and others, in the article on the Coan family stated:

The Coan family is of German descent, and has long been established in New England. In 1715 three brothers came from Worms, Germany. Their parents, who accompanied them on the emigrant ship, died on the voyage, and the boys consequently landed in America in a destitute condition. The two older brothers were apprenticed to Deacon Mulford, of East Hampton, Long Island, where they remained until their marriage, after which they removed to Guilford, Connecticut, where they passed the remainder of their lives. The other brother, Abraham, left no record of his life or family.

Alvan Talcott, writing of Peter in his four-volume compendia on Guilford, Connecticut, families, said more or less the same thing.

The article on Ralph Alonzo⁶ Coan, descendant of Peter and grandson of Abraham⁴ Coan of Maine, in the National Cyclopaedia of American Biography (New York: James T. White & Company, 1955), Vol. XL, p. 149, explained that Peter came "from Hesse (later part of Germany) in 1715 and settled in Massachusetts." D. Hamilton Hurd in his History of Fairfield County, Connecticut (Philadelphia: J. W. Lewis & Co., 1881), between pp. 804 and 805, in a resume on Albert Stone⁴ Coan, a great grandson of George, wrote:

It is related that a great many years ago a wealthy German by the name of Coan left Germany in company with two of his sons who were small boys. On their way to this country Mr. Coan was murdered, his body thrown overboard, and all his money stolen. One of the boys went South, and nothing has been heard of him or any of his descendants; the other boy lived with a man on Long Island by the name of Mulford. In due time he married and had a family of children, one of whom he named Mulford Coan, which has since continued to be a family name.

(There was no mention at all of Peter, and so far as I know, besides George's son, there was only one other Mulford--Milo Mulford⁴, son of Sylvanus³.)

Howard Radcliffe Coan, discussing the origin of the Coans, wrote:

When my brother Frank was general secretary of the English-Speaking Union of the United States, he went to England and in Norfolk discovered quite a few Coan names there in church and cemetery. We know that the migrants went to Europe (Germany) to get passage to the United States and that the three brothers, having lost their father during the voyage, seem to have begun as Americans in Guilford, Connecticut, where I have seen some of their graves.

Virginia Catherine⁸ Coan Wiles, a descendant of Peter through his son Jacob, said in her manuscript, History of the Coan Family of America, that it was "our family legend that the Coans came from Isle of Man, but were Welsh in descent."

Finally, Wesley Burgess⁵ Coan in his Genealogical Notes stated:

The progenitors of those who bear this Coan name in the United States were a family consisting of a father, mother, and three sons, natives of Worms, Germany, who in 1715 left Germany in an emigrant ship bound for New York. The names of the parents have not been ascertained.

In the light of all this somewhat conflicting tradition, what are the facts? What do the records say?

What facts? What records? In trying to find documented proof of Peter's birth, his parents' names, Peter's and George's arrival in America, I first of all had to realize that the name of these people then might not have been spelled C-O-A-N. In the 1930s the Media Research Bureau in Washington, D.C., published a series of genealogical and historical sketches on family names; one of them was The Name and Family of Coan from which I quote:

The names of Coan, Coen, and Cone are said by some authorities to have been Cohen or Coh(a)n in origin, while other authorities claim they were derived from the ancient Irish name of Caomhan, meaning "a noble person," which was also to be found at an early date in Scotland in the form of Coane. These names were to be found on the ancient British and early American records in all of the various forms above mentioned and were probably interchangeable in many cases, with the German names of Cohan, Cohen, Cohn, Kohn, Kohen, Kohan, Koen, Koens, Cohem, Coham, Coen, Coens, Koan, Koans, etc.

My first thought was to check New York State records to see if I might find some facts on apprentices of 1715. In E. B. O'Callaghan's Documentary History of the State of New York (Albany, N.Y.: Weed, Parsons & Co., 1850), Vol. III, p. 566, there was a record of the names of Palatine children apprenticed by Governor Hunter 1710-1714. The date was one year too early, but I decided to look at it anyway; and there I found two boys who must be Peter and George. (See copy of this record which follows.) The two boys were listed thus:

1710	Sept. 22	Hans Jerick Coons	Age 6	Orphan	Bound to Saml. Mulford of East Hampton
1710	Sept. 22	Hans ffellacoons	Age 15	Orphan	Bound to Caleb Heathcote of Scarsdale

There were quite a few discrepancies between this information and tradition, but tradition was often not exact. The date was 1710, not the 1715 of tradition. The second boy's name was more likely Philip, not Peter. In 1710 Peter would have been 12 or 13 years old, not 15, if the 1697 birth date was accurate. The second boy was bound to Heathcote, not Mulford. And Samuel Mulford was not tradition's Deacon Mulford. Deacon Mulford was Captain Samuel's brother John.

Another source that included information on New York apprentices of that period was Professor I. Daniel Rupp's book, A Collection of Upwards of Thirty Thousand Names of German, Swiss, Dutch, French and Other Immigrants From 1727 To 1776 (Philadelphia: I. G. Kohler, 1880), with German Translation. In the appendix, page 445, there was a list of male children apprenticed by Governor Hunter 1710-1714 (See list that follows). Here George was 8 years old, not 6; and the 15-year-old boy was definitely Philip, not Peter. Their last name was Kuhns.

Were these boys really Peter and George Coan? If so, how could the discrepancies be explained? Some couldn't. The date of their arrival was definitely 1710, not 1715. Tradition was wrong. How could Philip be Peter? Mr. C. Frederick Kaufholz in his lecture, "Keys to a Search for Your German Ancestors," delivered before members of the New England Historic Genealogical Society in Boston in October of 1980 said that one difficulty genealogists encountered in researching German names was that one man might be called by two names. One name he would use formally and legally in records and documents; the other he would be known by. Thus, Peter could be Peter to family and friends, but legally be Philip.

As to the Mulford who took George as an apprentice, tradition could be wrong; and it was Captain Mulford, not Deacon Mulford, who took George. Or tradition could still be right. Samuel Mulford was a sea captain, a whaler, and for many years a member of the Provincial Assembly of New York. He was away from home a great deal, so he could have turned his young apprentice over to his brother Deacon John and wife to care for. Caleb Heathcote, to whom Philip Peter was bound, was a very wealthy and important gentleman. He was a judge, a colonel in the militia, mayor of Westchester, and for many years Receiver General of Customs of North America. Since his apprentice and George were brothers, he might have made arrangements with Mulford to keep the boys together. Philip Peter might then have worked for the Deacon. Or, Philip Peter could have served his apprenticeship to Heachcote and then gone to East Hampton to be near George. At any rate, we know he was there in the 1720s because his marriage was recorded in 1726 in the East Hampton church records kept by the minister, Nathaniel Huntting. In these records, which also contained the baptisms of four of his supposed twelve children, his name was Peter Coen. In the same church records George's name was recorded as Coen for his marriage, and Coens for the baptism of his daughter Jane.

It would have been helpful if I could have examined the original records of indentures of Palatine children, for these records probably would have contained more detailed information. But as Winifred Holman, an eminent genealogist employed in the 1950s by Mrs. Folwell W. Coan to trace the Coan ancestry, stated in her Coan Lineage, p. 4, these records were "lost in the Capitol fire in Albany, New York, in 1911." From this same manuscript came the following bit of interesting data on Peter and the Coan name:

It seems possible that the Peter Covan who was a witness to the will of John Wheeler of East Hampton, 5 Sept. 1726, proved 3 Aug. 1728, may have been our Peter Coan. The other witnesses were Theophilus Willman and John Davis. (Unrecorded Wills before 1796, N.Y. Historical Society Collections, 11:83.)

After noting all the various spellings of Peter and George's surname, one might wonder when the C-O-A-N finally appeared. The first record of the C-O-A-N spelling appeared in 1735 in a deed dated November 10 for property purchased in Guilford, Connecticut, Northern Parish, by George (see deed). December 4 of the same year he purchased a second piece of property in the same town; and this he sold to Peter November 11, 1737 (see deed). From this time on the name was Coan. Was the register of deeds responsible for this spelling, or did George spell his name that way? No one will ever know. There have been many spellings of the name since that time, not by the owners of the surname, but by others. The one that was probably the most unfortunate because of the importance of the document in which it occurred was the 1790 Federal Census of the State of Massachusetts, town of Truro, where the name was spelled K-O-H-A-M. All Truro gravestones, however, spelled it C-O-A-N. There were two Coans who did spell the name differently. Mabel , grand-daughter of Peter through his son John, spelled the name C-O-W-A-N, and her grandson had a middle name with that spelling--Lester Cowan Hall. Ezra T.⁵, a descendant of George, spelled his name C-O-A-N-N to secure a correct pronunciation. He had two children who carried on the same spelling.

Another interesting sidelight on the Coan name came from Ambrose Cone who was born in East Haddam, Connecticut, April 6, 1781, the son of James Cone.

Upon arriving at the age of 21 years, Ambrose conceived the idea that the name would "look better" if spelled "Coan." He therefore changed his name to Coan, and his descendants have followed this spelling. (William Whitney Cone, Some Account of the Cone Family in America [Topeka, Kans.: Crane & Company, 1903], p. 175).

Ever since, thanks to Ambrose, there has been an occasional mix-up between the descendants of Daniel Cone from Scotland and the descendants of Peter and George Coan from Germany.

Now that we have traced George and Peter, the Palatine orphans, to the point where they have begun their adult lives in Connecticut, let's turn our attention to their parents who died en route to America with the Palatines. But first, who were these Palatines? They were people living in the Palatinate, two regions of Germany; one, the Rhenish or Lower Palatinate, which extended on both sides of the Rhine River and west from the Rhine to France and the Saarland; the other, the Upper Palatinate, a province of Bavaria. It is the first in which we are interested since this is the region of Worms where Peter was born in 1697.

The Reverend Sanford H. Cobb in his book, The Palatine (Wilkes Barre, Pa.: printed for Wyoming Historical and Genealogical Society, 1897), p. 6, describes the Lower Palatinate:

as fair a land as all Europe can show. The burghers of its cities were wealthy merchants. Its fertile fields and vine-clad hills brought competence and comfort to its people, and sent abundance of corn and wine to other countries of Europe. Religion and knowledge were so well diffused that there was no other people of their day to whom in these respects the Palatines stood second.

About 1618 the Thirty Years War began, and the people of the Lower Palatinate were victims of:

unspeakable horrors from fire and sword, as well as from pillage and plunder. After only twenty years of peace, war broke out again in 1668 and the French, under Louis XIV, invaded the Palatinate seeking to utterly destroy the hated Protestants and to make their land a desert. (William Solyman Coons, Koon and Coons Families of Eastern New York [Rutland, Vt.: The Tuttle Publishing Company, Inc., 1937], p. xxi).

Louis' army consisted of:

50,000 men with orders to its commander to ravage the province with fire and sword.... The invasion took place in winter. The French went through the length and breadth of the country destroying cities, burning villages, stripping the people of their possessions, compelling them to pull down their walls, to stand by and see their wealth perish in the flames, killing such as endeavored to save anything from the ruins, and then driving them into the fields to there perish with hunger or cold.

In the following Spring the peasants were forced to plow under their crops. The whole land was filled with mourning. Many thousands were killed. Many were starved or frozen to death. In one day the Elector, standing on the walls of Manhein, counted twenty-three villages in flames. The ferocity of the war and the sufferings of the people can not adequately be described. (Cobb, The Palatine, p. 7).

In 1689, eight years before Peter's birth, the city of Worms was burned. In 1704 Joshua Kocherthal, a Lutheran minister, visited England in behalf of the Palatines to seek their removal to other countries. In 1705 England, Holland, Sweden, and Prussia intervened and demanded the French cease this terrible persecution. But the outbreak of the War of the Spanish Succession came at about this time, and in 1707 Louis sent an army to the Palatinate to repeat as far as possible the carnage of twenty years before. The Palatines could bear no more, and thus began their exodus. In 1708 Kocherthal took fifty-three of his followers to London, and Queen Anne gave permission for this small group to go to New York. They reached their destination in January, 1709, and settled near Newburg on the Hudson.

The severe winter of 1708-09 in the Palatinate destroyed the remaining orchards and vineyards; and the people poured into England by the thousands.

The fact that most of them had come down the Rhine into Holland and sailed from Rotterdam to England caused the tradition among many of their descendants in America that their ancestors came from Holland and were Dutch. (Coons, Koon and Coons Families, p. xxi).

Thus, we see why Fred Welby⁶ Coan and Jeffery Prescott⁹ Coan believed their ancestors came from Holland. Some Coan an-cester heard it said that Peter and George sailed from Holland to England, and then to America. He assumed that Peter and George were, therefore, Dutch. Thus, the tradition that the Coons were Dutch began.

It is claimed that about 30,000 of these unfortunate people went to England, and, though the English did the best they could for them, their sufferings in some of their camps were horrible, and thousands of them died there. Eventually most of them were sent to New York, Pennsylvania, Maryland, the Carolinas, or other American Provinces, and to Ireland. (Coons, Koon and Coons Families, p. xxii).

In 1709 Queen Anne arranged that about 3,000 of them should be sent to New York with Kocherthal, who had returned to take more of his people to the new world. Although names of the ships in which they sailed are not recorded, indications are that "the Globe, Berkley, Castle, Bedford, Lyon and Herbert were among the number" (The Palatines of New York State [The Palatine Society, Inc., 1953], p. 24).

Kocherthal and his 3,000 Palatines left London in January, 1710....They encountered fierce storms which scattered their ships and they were tossed about on angry seas for five or six months. With a deadly disease raging among them, the horrors of the long voyage can scarcely be imagined. The only doctor on one vessel reported that he had to care for over 330 patients at one time. They finally reached New York, the ships arriving between June 12 and July 24, 1710. Four hundred and seventy of their number had died on this voyage and 250 more died in quarantine on Governor's Island. In September, 1710, about 357 being left in New York City and 55 orphans and other destitute children being bound out, the rest began a movement up the Hudson River to the five camps arranged by Governor Hunter. (Coons, Koon and Coons Families, p. xxii).

That then was the story of Peter, George, and their parents. They were among the "D.P.s" of the 1700s. These "displaced people" soon prospered in America since they were a hard working and highly respectable group. Most of them had some education as well. Peter and George "made it," but their parents did not. The reason that nothing was ever known of their parents was probably that the boys, particularly Peter, like many of the Jews of World War II who lived through the concentration camps, didn't talk about their experiences--couldn't talk about them--because what happened was too painful to remember. George was young, maybe only six years old, so he would not have remembered too much. But Peter was older and would never forget the whole experience; but apparently he never talked of it to his children.

And so, even the names of his parents were never known.

What about the legend in the family of Virginia Coan Wiles--that the Coans came from Wales? Mrs. Wiles said that it was her belief the Coans left Wales for England and then probably fled from England because of religious persecution and settled in Germany. To go along with Mrs. Wiles, Mrs. Norman Allison Coan of Vancouver, Washington, (1982) wrote: "Our branch of the family has always claimed Welsh ancestry." Her husband was a descendant of Jacob² through Jacob's son Augustus. Ralph Gorman⁷ Coan, Sr., who lived in Lake Oswego, Oregon, (1982) and was a descendant of Abraham², said:

Dad told us he understood that when the English... finally conquered Ireland that our ancestor of that time had to flee the country and went to the low countries finally serving the local princeling in the area of Frankfort and Worms in what is now Germany. His son, who was named Peter, became a sailor and was a privateer sailing out of Louisburg in French Canada when his ship was wrecked upon the Maine coast, near the present site of Rockland, in 1645. It took him about four years to get back into contact with white men again, but he continued his seafaring life.

I always assumed that his recontact with civilization was in New England, but if there is any substance to the story, it could just as well have been back in French Canada; and he could have returned to Germany eventually to sire a grandson who was our Peter.

Originally, if any part of these traditions was correct, the Coans started in the British Isles. But of this beginning there has been no proof. The only documented evidence was that Peter and George arrived with the Palatine immigration of 1710. Where their forebears came from was anybody's guess. Were they English, German, Welsh, or Irish? Someday some Coan may find a documented answer.

Walter Knittle in his Early Eighteenth Century Palatine Emigration (Baltimore: Genealogical Publishing Company, 1965), p. 251, listed the Palatines who sailed from Rotterdam to England in the spring and summer of 1709. The family that impressed me as possibly being that of Peter and George was recorded on the "Second Sailing, May 23, 1709":

"Koen Koenraet & vroux

Hans Veldekoen, Hans Deterkoen,

Hans Jurgekeon, & 1 ch." (Note two spellings of "koen.")

The problem with this family was that there was one boy too many--Hans Deterkoen (probably Dietrick). He, however, might have died between May, 1709, and January, 1710, when the family sailed for America. Hans Jurgekeon was George; the "1 ch." was Abraham and Hans Veldekoen would have been Peter. I was also impressed with the similarity between Hans Veldekoen and Hans ffellacoons of the New York State list of apprentices 1710-1714. Anyone recording Hans Veldekoen from sound might have written Hans ffellacoons.

The New York Genealogical and Biographical Record (New York: New York Genealogical and Biographical Society, 1909), Vol 40, p. 96, listed the Palatines arriving on the "Second Sailing" to England May 27, 1709. On this list was:

"Kuehn, Conrad, age 40, wife, sons 14, 11, 8, 2, Ref., a 'husbandman and vinedresser.'"

The fourth boy was still mentioned. On this list the oldest son's age compared to the age of Philip given by Rupp on the male Palatine apprentice list in the appendix of his book, and George was the same age as George on Rupp's list. Ref. stood for Reformed Church.

In the lists of Palatines in New York in 1710 (Knittle, p. 282-291) a Conrad Kuhn was found, but not the Conrad Kuehn or Koenraet Kuhn with three or four children. Maybe this Conrad Kuehn family never sailed, and so couldn't be that of Peter and George; but if they did sail, the reason for their not being on the New York list would be, of course, that neither parent ever arrived; they died en route. Usually names were repeated in families; and thus there should have been a Conrad or two among the early Coons. There weren't. There were no Philips either. Conrad could have been the father's legal name just as Philip evidently was Peter's.

William Solyman Coons in his book on the Koon and Coons families, page 29, from which I have already quoted several times, gave two possibilities for the father of Philip and George. The first was Johannes Coens or Cuntz, widower, who married Maria Catharina Vogelezang (Hupman) and had a son Ludwig by her. Coons wrote:

Johannes was probably the same as Johannes Kuatz (or Kuntz?), a. 40 yrs. and without family whose name appeared on the list of Palatines remaining at N.Y. during the winter of 1710-11. Whether he was a bro. of Matthias Kuntz from Bischmisheim...and the father of the 2 boys, Hans Philip Coons, a. 15, and Hans Jerick Coons, a. 8, cannot be clearly determined, though such seems likely to have been the case. These boys were bound out Sept. 22, 1710, and if this John was their father and the widower who m. late in Jan., 1711, he would be alone early in the winter as reported in this list of Palatines at N.Y.

At all events this John who was m. in Jan., 1711, was evidently a German and a little later we find him living among German Palatines of 1710 at East or West Camp, where the birth of a son occurred. He d. at some time during 1713 to 1721 or 1722, and his widow and son located in the Mohawk Valley.

Somehow I do not believe Johannes Coens was the father of Peter and George. His name would have been recorded as their father, and they would not have been listed as orphans on the lists of Palatine apprentices 1710-1714. The second suggestion Coons made on page 230 was that:

John Cunitz, a. 33, who was listed among the Palatines at St. Catherine's, England, in May or June, 1709, with wife and 2 boys then a. 15 and 5, could have been the father of this H. Philip and H. Jerick. This John Cunitz was a Roman Catholic and his older son appears to have been a yr. or 2 older than this H. Philip. Still he could have become a Protestant, as a few of the Catholic Palatines did, and could have died on the way, though we think this very doubtful. We do not know what became of this Hans Philip.

Well, we know what became of Hans Philip, and I'm sure John Cunitz was not his father. The name Cunitz was not too much like Coen, Coons, Koen, Kuhns--a strong reason to question this theory. And, more important, Coons did not mention that besides two sons, Cunitz also had a year-old daughter. ("List of Germans From the Palatinate Who Came to England in 1709," New York Genealogical and Biographical Record [New York: New York Genealogical and Biographical Society, 1909], Vol. 40, p. 93). I feel Cunitz definitely was not the father of Peter and George.

In an effort to find Peter's parents, I wrote Stadterwaltung, Worms, Postfach 440, 6520 Worms, West Germany. They checked for Coen, Cahn, Coons, Koen, Kuhns, etc. of the late 1600s in Catholic and Protestant church records with no luck. I also wrote Heimatstelle Pfalz, Benzinoring 6, 6750 Kaiserlautern, West Germany, to search the emigrants of the early 1700s for Peter and his family and received no reply. No response may mean no information. The following records in the Genealogical Department Library, Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, Salt Lake City, Utah, were searched by Horst Scharffs, an accredited genealogist and specialist in German language records, whom I employed:

Worms, St. Johannis Church: birth 1683-1709; marriages 1695-1697
 Worms, St. Lambert Church: birth 1685-1707; marriages 1686-1689 (marriage register 1690-1701 missing)
 Worms, St. Paul's Church: 1700-1708 (registers start with 1700)
 Worms, St. Peter's Church: 1695-1712
 Worms-Abenheim: 1684-1707

He found no reference to Peter or George, nor to people who might have been their parents. Mr. Scharffs said that these were all Catholic records and written in Latin. The Mormon Library had no copies of records of the Evangelical (Lutheran) churches. Both Protestant and Catholic records were supposedly checked when I wrote Stadterwaltung in Worms. However, if the library at Salt Lake City ever does have copies of the Lutheran records, it might be worthwhile to have them checked.

I quote again from Mrs. Norman Allison Coan:

We even went to the Kulture-institute in Worms, Germany, but no luck. The curator told us there were 27 places around the area where a birth could be registered and called "born in Worms."

Richard Hogue⁸ Coan, son of Mrs. Norman Allison Coan, in a letter to the compiler said:

While in Germany, Marilyn and I visited Worms to do some searching. We visited the "Stadt Archive" and Jewish and Protestant (not Catholic) cemeteries. In the archives were records back to the 1400s which recorded visits by travelling merchants and others as they entered the gates of Worms. No Coan or anything similar in the late 1600-early-1700 time frame. The records at the Jewish cemetery were extensive also, going well beyond the time frame of interest. Again, no Coan or anything really close.

We were told by the Archivist that, in the vicinity of Worms, there were several other similar repositories of early records. I did not pursue the matter further--a fact I now regret deeply.

It certainly would be a satisfying coup to unravel the mystery. I'd love to return to Germany one day and be able to spend a month or so doing nothing else but investigating.

Many people have tried to find the names of Peter and George's parents without success. I am including all this information to help some future Coan solve the puzzle. Someday some Coan may do it. I hope so. In the meantime, I believe that Peter and George's father could have been Conrad Kuehn, but I will continue to search for documented proof.

PETER COAN

PETER COAN was born in Worms, Germany, in 1697, according to tradition. He came to America in 1710 with his parents and two brothers, George and Abraham. The parents did not survive the trip; so when the boys arrived in New York as part of the Palatine emigration of 1710, they were alone and destitute. Under Governor Hunter's plan for taking care of the orphans and other destitute minors, Peter was bound out to Caleb Heathcote of Scarsdale, New York, a wealthy and important gentleman of the state. George was bound to Samuel Mulford of East Hampton, Long Island. No one knew what happened to Abraham. Peter moved to East Hampton probably after his apprenticeship was completed, although tradition said that he and George were both cared for by Deacon Mulford, who was Samuel's brother. At any rate, in the 1720s Peter was in East Hampton where on December 8, 1726, he married Hannah Davis. Hannah was baptized in East Hampton October 29, 1727; Peter, February 4, 1728. Their first four children were born in East Hampton.

No records have been found that indicate who Hannah's parents were. Some suggest she was a descendant of Fulk (Faulk) Davis of Long Island. Those who think she might have been descended from Fulk possibly have in mind his great granddaughter, Hannah Davis. This Hannah was born probably in the early 1700s, as was Hannah Davis Coan. However, she could not have been Peter's wife Hannah, since in the Long Island will of David⁴ Davis (Benjamin³, Joseph², Fulk¹) David instructed his son William to "maintain my father Benjamin and my sister Hannah." Hannah Davis Coan was living then (1760) with her husband Peter in North Guilford and would have had no need of being "maintained." David's sister Hannah was no doubt living on Long Island with their father Benjamin. But Fulk had four other sons besides Joseph--Samuel, Jonathan (who died before 1675), John, and Benjamin. I have been unable to find any records on them, so Hannah Davis Coan might have been a descendant of one of them. The best discussion of Fulk Davis I found in Ancestors of James Wilson Yates and His Wife Nancy Davis Terry by Josephine C. Frost (New York: Frederick Hitchcock, 1926), p. 25.

Two other possibilities for Hannah's parents were John and Hannah (Latting) Davis, who were married before 1687; or John Davis, who married Mary Banbury, widow of Edward Banbury, at Oyster Bay, Long Island, September 28, 1687. According to Hannah (Davis) Coan's gravestone, she was born in 1709--twenty-two years after either of these Davis marriages. So one of the pairs could have been her parents; but so far, no records have been found to verify she was a daughter of either pair.

I think that the John Davis whom Winifred Holman mentioned as being a witness, along with Peter Covan, to the will of James Wheeler of East Hampton in 1726 might have been Hannah's grandfather. According to Edward Doubleday Harris' "Ancient Burial Grounds of Long Island" in the New England Historical and Genealogical Register, Vol. 54, p. 429, there was a gravestone for a John Davis who died in East Hampton, aged 90, in 1766. Were he and the witness one and the same? Who these John Davises were I have been unable to discover. No wife was buried near the man in the cemetery. She might have died before he came to East Hampton; or, of course, he might never have been married. In that case, he couldn't have been Hannah's grandfather--maybe an uncle or great uncle. But I feel that somehow he might have been connected to her and that he and John Davis, witness, might have been one and the same. This is a clue that perhaps some later genealogist may be able to use in tracing Hannah.

In 1737 Peter purchased from his brother George some property with a small dwelling in the North Parish of Guilford, Connecticut. George had been living in Guilford, North Parish, since 1735 when he bought a home there. Peter became a prosperous farmer and bought several more pieces of property as is indicated by deeds on file in Guilford. He and Hannah were communicants of the Congregational Church in North Guilford. The inventory of Peter's estate follows. It contains only his personal effects since Peter gave his son John the land and house in Guilford, North Parish, October 7, 1771.

Hannah died in North Guilford March 30, 1776, in her 68th year; Peter died there October 31, 1779, aged 82. They were both buried in the cemetery in North Guilford.

Children (2) COAN

- i. Jacob, b. Jan. 24, 1728
- ii. John, bpt. Jan. 4, 1730
- iii. Abraham, bpt. Aug. 6, 1732
- iv. Hannah, bpt. Apr. 20, 1735, East Hampton
- v. Martha, b. Nov. 28, 1737
- vi. Mabel
- vii. Elisha, b. Nov. 29, 1739
- viii. Lucretia
- ix. Rebecca
- x. Submit
- xi. William, b. Feb. 24, 1747; d. June, 18, 1748
- xii. Mary, b. July 13, 1750

Note: It has been suggested that Mabel, Lucretia, Submit, and Rebecca were not Peter's children, but were confused with John's children. I emphatically endorse this theory. I have listed them as belonging to Peter since several reputable sources assign them to him; but I feel he definitely did not have twelve, but rather eight children. There were no records of any kind on any of these girls, and I find it strange that Peter would carefully record his other children but not the four of them.

Some authorities say Peter's children were recorded, all twelve of them, in Peter's Bible. He definitely had a Bible; it was listed in the inventory of his estate, but it no longer exists. Catharine Coan Smith (Mrs. Frank L.

Smith) was thought at one time to possess both the Bible and Peter's will. Mrs. Smith died in 1982. Her daughter wrote the compiler that neither the Bible nor the will were in Mrs. Smith's possession; and, so far as she knew, never had been. Peter's will was never probated. The Office of Probate in Guilford, Connecticut, had only the inventory of his estate. So unless the Bible and/or the will are found, they cannot be used as a record.

There were two records which were thought might pertain to Peter's daughter Mabel. The first was from Hales Grave-stones, Guilford, Connecticut: Mabel Coan, b. ca. 1738; d. 5/2/1787. That Mabel was Mabel Chittenden Coan, John Coan's wife, who was born November 5, 1737, and died May 2, 1787. The other Mabel--Mehitable Coan who married John Gilbert April 26, 1768 (Frederick W. Bailey, Early Connecticut Marriages As Found in Ancient Church Records Prior to 1800 [New Haven: Bureau of American Ancestry, 1896], Vol. 6, p. 122) was Mahitable Cone, daughter of George and Mahitable (Emmons) Cone as found on page 15 of Some Account of the Cone Family in America, compiled by William Whitney Cone, source already mentioned in this chapter. So neither record pertains to Peter's daughter Mabel.

Therefore, I am convinced that these four girls--Mabel; Submit, Lucretia, and Rebecca--were not daughters of Peter and Hannah.

ADDENDA TO THE SEARCH

In September, 1982, through an ad in the magazine, The Genealogical Helper, I got in touch with Henry Z. Jones, Jr., an authority on the Palatines of 1709-1710, especially those who settled in Ireland and New York. He was a 1963 graduate of Stanford University and by profession an actor-singer who co-starred in many TV productions, as well as acted in many commercials. In his article, "Emigrants from Laubenheim, Germany, to New York in 1709/10," Genealogical Society Quarterly, June 1982, Vol. 70, No. 2, p. 97 he stated:

For the past twenty-one years I have been gathering documented data from original sources only on those

"Palatines" who left their homes in Germany in the great exodus of 1709. My first publication on the subject (The Palatine Families of Ireland, published 1965) concerned those emigrants who settled near Limerick, Ireland, in 1710. Since 1965 I have been collecting 17th- and 18th-century materials on those 1709ers who settled in colonial New York, and posting this historical and genealogical information on family group sheets (now approaching 17,000 sheets). I now am in the process of writing a multi-volume, fully documented study of all the 800+ Palatine families who arrived in New York in 1710.

I asked Mr. Jones two questions:

1. Do you know the names of the parents of the two Coan (Kuhn) boys who were apprenticed in 1710?
2. Have you ever found a listing of those Palatines who left England in January, 1710, for New York?

In Mr. Jones' first letter, he answered my second question.

I have had a researcher in London and Rotterdam on retainer for years, going through the various archives page by page, year by year, looking for those missing passenger lists. We have found some (Unpublished) dated 1710, but these are those who went back to Germany from England. However, these lists you seek may never have existed as you hoped: the Palatines were rarely listed by name, but rather by "numbers", as they were thought of as "cargo." This dehumanizing trend is terrible by our 20th-century standards, but common for the 18th century!

Regarding his knowledge of the parents of the two Coan boy immigrants, Mr. Jones wrote:

I am at present typing my mss. from my 17,000 sheets. If you wish the short article (one page or a bit less) on this family, giving the names of the father of the boys you mentioned, his appearance on Holland sailing lists, etc., from my mss. my fee for a xerox of same would be $12.50.

I'd love to send this on gratis, but with my German expenses alone at $90,000 on this hobby, I need some support from fellow-descendants of the 1709ers. ...Your family has not yet been documented in Germany.

Needless to say, my check was in the next mail. I received promptly the following:

CONRAD KUHN now his son VALENTIN (Hunter Lists #413)
Koenraet Koen, his wife (sons) Hans Veldekoen,

Hans Deterkoen, Hans Jurgekoen, and one (other) child were in Holland in the 2nd party of 1709 (Rotterdam Lists). Conrad Kuhn aged 40, his wife, sons aged 14, 11, 8, and 2, Ref., husbandman and vinedresser, were in the 2nd arrivals in England in 1709 (London Lists).

Conrad Kuhn made his first appearance on the Hunter Lists 4 Aug 1710 with 2 over 10 yrs. and 1 under 10. Although the heading in the Ledger section notes his son Valentin, the Journal entries mention only Conrad Kuhn: he had 2 over 10 on 25 March 1711, 1 over 10 yrs. on 25 March 1712, and 2 over 10 on 24 June 1712. The ch. of Conrad¹ Kuhn were:

- 1) Johann Veltin² (Rotterdam Lists & Hunter Ledger), the Hans Ffellacons aged 15, orphan apprenticed to one Caleb Heathcote of Scarsdale on 22 Sept 1710 (Apprenticeship Lists).
- 2) Johann Peter² (HJ), probably the Hans Deterkoen at Rotterdam in 1709 (HJ).
- 3) Johann Georg² (Rotterdam Lists). Hans Jerick Coons aged 6, an orphan was bound to Saml. Mulford at East Hampton also on 22 Sept 1710 (Apprenticeship Lists).

An article "The Coon (Coan) Family of Guilford, Conn.", a letter from Virginia Coan Wiles, published in Connecticut Ancestry (The Stamford Genealogical Society), Vol. 17, No. 4, May 1975, notes that both Georg and Peter Coan md. well, and raised large families and d. in Connecticut: Peter md. Hannah Davis in East Hampton, and George md. Jane Leek of East Hampton, L.I.

As you can see from my sketch of the family, the father of the Peter² and Georg² Coans was Conrad¹ Kuhn, the emigrant 1709er. The Rotterdam Lists are emphatic on this point, as you can see, in that they list the names of three of his four children. You may have seen this in Knittle, but missed the entry, as the secretaries at Rotterdam were English and Dutch, and often wrote down a German name phonetically (i.e. Johann Valentin Kuhn became "Hans Veldekoen" in Holland, and then "Hans Ffellacons" on the Apprenticeship Lists in N.Y. ("V" and "F" interchange in the German sounds of that time). Then your Peter Coan was enrolled as "Hans Deterkoen" in Rotterdam; in my experience, the German Christian names "Dieter(ich)" and "Peter" often interchanged in the old records, due to their obvious sound-alike quality.

I have studied all the arriving Kuhn-Cuntz families in great depth for the past 13 years, and have eliminated all other potential emigrants who might have been parents of your two orphans, Georg and Peter. The case is extremely strong that Conrad¹ Kuhn was indeed the father of the boys (note how his death is implied in the Hunter Lists, where the listing for the family is transferred to the eldest boy listed at Rotterdam)

(and these Rotterdam Lists were in order of age), namely his son Johann Veltin². The only slight problem is that the age of Johann George on the apprenticeship lists does not agree with the age of a child at London (although Johann Veltin's does): very often, in my experience, ages on Palatine mss. were "right on the money"; othertimes, off as much as 30 (!!!) years. It's so frustrating sometimes.

I was delighted that Mr. Jones and I agreed on the father of Peter and George. However, I questioned the existence of an older brother Valentin since I felt Veldekoen, Ffellacoons was Philip Peter and that if there were an older brother, he would have been mentioned in our family tradition. To me what appeared in the Hunter Lists (lists compiled for Governor Hunter of New York on the Palatine group in his state) did not refer to our Coan family, but rather to another Conrad Kuhn and his son Valentin. William S. Coons in his Koon-Coons Families of Eastern New York, p. 388, said that Valentin, son of Conrad Kuhns, married Anna Catharine Wies shortly before or after coming to America and had a daughter Johanna Elisabetha Margretta Kuhn, born November 1, 1711. Coons also said (p. 289) he thought there were two Conrad Kuhns: one, the son of Samuel, Jr.; and the other, his brother who had a son Valentin. I think there were three Conrad Kuhns--those two and one more who was never listed in America because he and his wife died at sea, and this third Conrad was the father of Peter and George. All this data I wrote to Mr. Jones, not because I did not value his experienced opinion, but because I did have access to family tradition--Peter born in Worms, Germany in 1697; parents died en route to America; and three boys left: Peter, George, and Abraham, the latter lost after arrival--information which he probably did not have. I mentioned too that on Rupp's listing of apprentices as well as in Coons' references to the Coons boys in his book, the two were Philip and George. I also explained my theory that Philip was Philip Peter. Mr. Jones wrote an excellent reply to my suggestions and questions, but remained firm in his opinion. His letter in its entirety follows:

11 October 1982

Ruth Coan Fulton
11 Loraine Street
Portland, Maine 04103

Dear Mrs. Fulton:

Thank you for your letter of 27 September.

I really appreciate the material and thoughts expressed in your letter. If only all descendants were as concerned as you are at getting at the truth in a muddled family structure! Your points are interesting, and I want to reply to them:

- 1) I have never seen the German Christian name Johann Valentin transposed to a variant of Johann Peter; I have only seen Johann Dieter(ich) transposed to a variant of Peter in my experience with the 800 families. Thus, if this did happen in your family, it would certainly be a first.
- 2) As to family traditions: I'm trying hard to think in all the 800 families of where a family tradition was 100% true--and I really can't. They usually have the germ of truth in them, but usually are so "fouled up" over the years that they invert generations, change names, transpose lines, etc., making them difficult to accept as Gospel. Therefore, I utilize them in my project as "guides" but not "absolute truths."
- 3) The Hunter Lists were full of errors when compared to actual baptisms, etc. they supposedly reflected in their numbers. Remember that the secretaries were paid out of the money doled out to the 1709ers, so they appear to have pocketed as much as they could before the Palatines ever saw the funds! In addition, in my experience in nearly every instance when a surname was represented by several Palatine families (i.e. the many Schmidt, Muller, Schneider, Kuhn-Cuntz families), the Hunter secretaries mixed up the families. This is easily seen by studying the originals in the Journal section, when members of Valentin Kuhns' family, for example, are moved around in juxtaposition to names from the Samuel Kuhn family, the Philip Launhardt family (his wife was a Kuhn), etc.--all of which show the secretaries were confused with just whom they were recording. This happens again and again on the Schmidt and Muller families! The "Ledger" section was taken from the "Journal", and--out of nowhere--with no basis in the writings in the Journal, the Ledger adds that entry reading "Valentin Kuhn--the son of Conrad Kuhn" to a family which the juxtaposition of names (i.e. Bellinger, Bender, etc.--all of whom originated in the home of Samuel¹ Kuhn at Langenselbold, Germany) show firmly that this particular Valentin Kuhn was a son of Samuel¹!! Remember that the Hunter secretaries did not know the 1709ers as a whole group, especially in 1710 when they first arrived, and the errors in the Hunter Lists reflect this. This is hard for someone (like you and I) who are steeped in using documentation to accept, but it was true: that sometimes a source contemporary with the event was dead wrong. I think of Pastor Kocherthal's church-books themselves in this regard: in several instances, he gives a specific ancestral village or town for a certain emigrant, and in several cases, he was wrong as to locale and spelling of the town, even though he was writing about the emigrant who probably was standing right in front of him. This has been proved many times in my German searches. But Kocherthal also didn't "know" his entire flock that well, and also had to deal with some pretty terrible German dialects when writing down entries in a churchbook.

- 4) BEWARE OF RUPP!! He is a whiz at Pennsylvania which was his area of expertise, but was dead wrong quite a few times in his coverage of N.Y. data and families. For one thing, he attributed N.Y. origin for certain Pa. families who never have been documented in N.Y., and also mis-copied N.Y. lists in the case of other families besides your Kuhn group. I use him with respect but caution.
- 5) The Hunter Lists sometimes do not reflect apprentices one way or another! Also sometimes, the head of a family on the Hunter Lists continued to be named the head, even though he may have died shortly after his arrival. (This is true in quite a few cases).

I do agree with you that no one should ever be "locked in" to one train of thought. And just because I eat, breathe, and dream Palatines doesn't mean that I am always right: God help me if I ever get in that position in my own mind! So I am open to your suggestions and thoughts. I just wanted you to know how "the big picture", studying all the other 846 families for these 13 years, and also being familiar with just how reliable the various Palatine mss. are in their original states (they all seem to have quirks, really!!) have made me arrive at my conclusions on your Coan family.

I am alerting my researcher Carla Mittelstaedt-Kubaseck overseas of the high priority of finding your Conrad Kuhn and his sons (hopefully in a village near Worms), and will advise you the moment something turns up. Let's hope the registers are still extant!

Cordially,

/s/ Hank Jones

P.S. William S. Coon's book unfortunately didn't have access to German material on Samuel¹ Kuhn.

All data presently available has been presented. I believe there might have been a fourth brother, Hans Valentin or Hans Philip. In favor of there being this fourth brother are two points:

- a. Hans Veldekoen was listed on the London lists in 1709 as 14 years old, too old for our Peter who was born in 1697. If Peter were Hans Deterkoen, his age in 1709 could have been 11, just as was recorded on the London lists.
- b. There was no mention of Hans Deterkoen on any apprentice list. Apparently, his name was omitted; so he could have been apprenticed not to Heathcote but to Mulford as our tradition said.

One strong point against Mr. Jones' reasoning in my mind is that no fourth brother was mentioned in our family tradition. The youngest brother, Abraham, was mentioned even though no one knew what happened to him. If there was a fourth brother Valentin, he probably died during his apprenticeship since there was no further record of him. But if Abraham were mentioned, why wasn't Valentin? Finally, I question that the Conrad Kuhn of the Hunter Lists was the father of Peter and George.

I am delighted that Mr. Jones is trying to find information on Conrad Kuhns in a village near Worms. I feel if the information is there to be found, his researcher will find it. In the meantime, however, it is important that we all keep on searching!

JACOB² COAN (Peter¹) was born January 24, 1728, in East Hampton, Long Island, New York, the son of Peter¹ and Hannah (Davis) Coan. He was baptized February 4, 1728, in the first church in East Hampton by the second minister of that church, Nathaniel Huntting. Peter was baptized the same day as his son. There is no official record of the date of Jacob's birth except for a copy of a page from Jacob's Bible where he recorded the births of his children, his wife's date of birth, and his own. This copy was found among some old papers by Claudius Collins Coan, Jacob's grandson. Claudius sent it to his daughter Phoebe who was interested in genealogy and wrote an account of the Coan family. On the copy was written: "I send you grandfather's family record as it was recorded in his own hand in the Holy Bible."

About 1737 Peter Coan moved his family to North Guilford, Connecticut, where he purchased a farm. It was here that Jacob grew up. In August, 1757, he participated in the expedition at Fort William Henry in the Old French War. He is listed on "a muster Role of Men Detacht out of ye 7th ridgment and put under ye Command of Nathil Johnson Capt of ye 2nd Company in the present Expedition at fort Wm Henry" (Bernard Christian Steiner, A History of the Plantation of Menunkatuck and of the Original Town of Guilford, Connecticut [Baltimore: by the author, 1897], p. 423).

Jacob responded to the "Alarm for Relief of fort Willm Henery and Parts adjacent" and served 15 days. There were 80 men in Captain Johnson's Company, 61 of whom "rode horses from Guilford." In all probability he was one of the 61. (Collections of the Connecticut Historical Society, Vol. IX, p. 212).

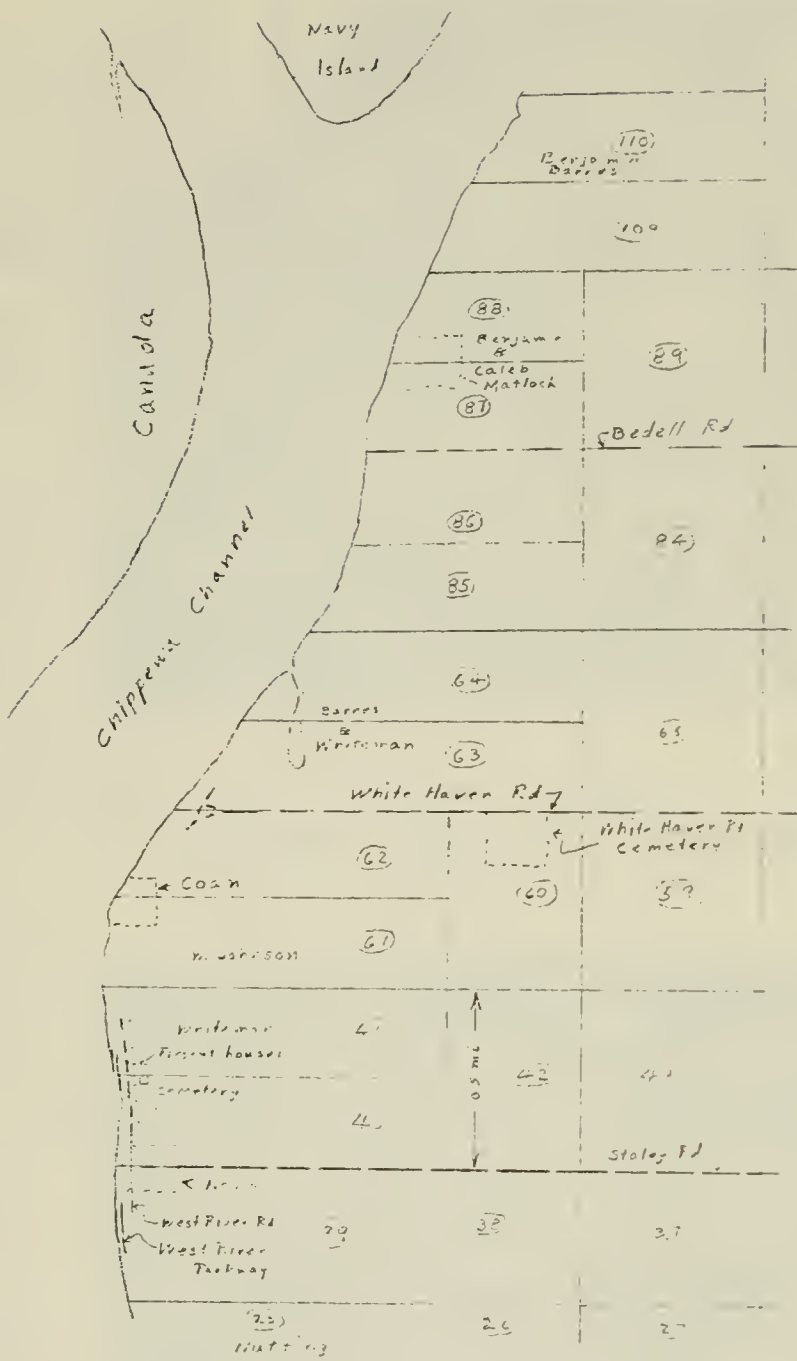

On May 5, 1754, Jacob married Luranda Collins, born December 25, 1733, daughter of Oliver and Elizabeth (Hall) Collins. Luranda was a lineal descendant of Governor William Leete of the Connecticut Colony; her great grandfather, John Leete, the son of Governor Leete, was the first free white child born in Guilford, Connecticut. Luranda, through Governor Leete, was a direct descendant of Charlemagne and King John of England.

Jacob, like many people of that time, wanted to get away from the "crowded" coastal areas. He moved northwest to Massachusetts to the Lenox-Stockbridge area. He and Luranda were members of the Congregational Church in Lenox. His cattle brand was a swallow tail on left ear and half penny on both sides of right ear. Although Jacob enjoyed living in an undeveloped area, he was still concerned about the education of his family. In 1792 he enrolled one of his children, probably Augustus, in a private school in Lenox and was prompt in his payments, as indicated by an account sheet kept by the teacher (see copy of listing of parents with children in Azariah Egleston's school as found in Thomas Egleston's article, "Major Azariah Egleston of the Revolutionary Army," New York Genealogical and Biographical Record [New York: published by the Society, July, 1892], Vol. 23, p. 120). Jacob's slow trek west continued into eastern New York. Here he died February 7, 1813, aged 85 (86, according to his gravestone). Luranda died October 14, 1814. They were both buried in Vail Mills Cemetery, near Mayfield, New York. This small cemetery was located in the center of Vail Mills. In 1982 when the graveyard was visited by the compiler, it was back from the main street about 125 feet, behind a mobile home. It was visible from the road, however; and Jacob's stone was at the southwest corner. His stone was intact, but leaning backwards; and the inscription was still clear. Luranda's stone, next to Jacob's, was broken in half with the top half stuck into the ground. Her inscription was still quite legible; and her date of death was October 14, not 15, as given in some records. The year read 1811, but the spacing between the two 1's in 1811 indicated the final 1 was probably a 4 (see picture of gravestones).

ELIZABETH³ COAN (Jacob², Peter¹) was born February 20, 1755, the first child of Jacob and Luranda (Collins) Coan. She married Nathan Hinckley. She married second Richard Ely, who was born in 1752, son of Richard and Mary (Pearson) Ely of Hector, New York, as his third wife. (Family tradition has her marrying Major Ezra Smith of Burlington, Vermont. [Wesley Burgess Coan's Genealogical Notes]. The compiler has been unable to find any records to support this marriage.) Richard died in 1840; Elizabeth, in 1845.

WILLIAM³ COAN (Jacob², Peter¹) was born in North Guilford, Connecticut, October 14, 1757, son of Jacob and Luranda (Collins) Coan. William had a long service in the Continental Army in the American Revolution. He enlisted from both Stockbridge and Lenox, Massachusetts, and served continually 1777-1783. He served in Captain Ezra Whittelsey's Company, Captain Stoddard's Company, and Captain Jeremiah Miller's Company--all in Colonel Vose's Regiment. He was based at a camp near Valley Forge, reported sick at Fishkill, then served at Providence and Cumberland.

In 1780 he was a private in Captain Charles Dibble's Company, Rossiter's 3rd Berkshire County Regiment. In 1781 he was with the same company and was described as "age, 23; stature, 5 ft. 10 in.; complexion, light; hair, light; occupation, laborer; residence, Lenox." Between 1781 and 1782 he served at West Point, Phillipsburg, Dobbs Ferry, Peekskill, and New Hutts; in August of 1781 he was promoted to corporal. (For complete service record see Massachusetts Soldiers in the War of the Revolution, [Boston: Wright and Potter Printing Co., 1897], Vol. 3, pp. 658, 659.)

William married Roxana Chadwick, sister of Asa and Cornelius Chadwick, and in 1785 they lived in the village of Northampton, Montgomery County (now Fulton County), New York where their eldest son, Jacob, was born. By 1798 (and probably by 1790), they lived in the town of Mayfield, which is immediately south of Northampton. On July 19, 1798, William and Roxana sold to John Anderson thirty acres of land in lot 242 in the eastern division of Kingsborough, town of Mayfield; on February 4, 1805, they acknowledged the deed before a judge of the Court of Common Pleas of Montgomery County, and the deed was recorded on October 29, 1808. In the meantime, on February 28, 1798, William Coan (spelled "Coon" in the deed record book) and his brother-in-law, Asa Chadwick, both of Montgomery County, New York, had bought 600 acres of land in the township of Locke, Onandaga County, New York (Cayuga County after 1799). On April 30, 1805, Asa Chadwick of Locke sold 106 acres of land to William Coan of Locke. Thus we see that William and Roxana had moved to Cayuga County by April, 1805. Their fifth son, Collins was born there in 1806. It is believed that Roxana died soon afterwards, perhaps in childbirth, but no proof has been found.

William Coan does not appear in Locke in the census of 1810, although his brother-in-law, Asa Chadwick, was there.

It is believed that he had taken four of his sons, Jacob, William, Asa and Collins (Charles probably remained in Johnstown with his uncle and aunt, Caleb and Phebe³ Coan Johnson when his parents moved to Cayuga County) to Upper Canada, where Jacob⁴ Coan's second child, Roxana, was born on August 29, 1810. They probably all moved back to the United States as the War of 1812 loomed up, because Jacob's third child, William P. Coan, was born in Cambria, Niagara County, New York, on November 24, 1812, and William⁴ enlisted for service in the New York State militia at Bloomfield, (near Victor, where his Uncle Elisha³ Coan and family lived), Ontario County, New York, on September 15, 1813. Asa⁴ Coan's daughter, Sabra A. (Coan) Cox, in a Bounty Land War-rant claim, stated that her father had served in the same company with William⁴ but his name was not found on a company roll. William³ may have lived in Cambria with his son Jacob--it is only about fifteen miles from where he spent the last ten years of his life--but it was stated in Coan Record by George R. Coan of New Haven, Connecticut, that William went to Victor, New York; if that is so, this is the most likely time.

By 1817 William had moved to Grand Island in the Niagara River between Buffalo and Niagara Falls. In September, 1821, he applied for a pension for his military service in the American Revolution, stating that he had "resided for the last four years on the unsold lands belonging to the State of New York lying on Grand Island in the town of Niagara and the County aforesaid." His family consisted of his wife, aged fifty-eight and his wife's granddaughter, aged eight years. He stated that he had property worth twenty-seven dollars but that he owed a debt of fifty dollars; that he was a farmer but was not able to perform much labor because of an injury he had received the previous spring while logging. William gave a detailed list of his service, beginning January 1, 1776, at Lenox, Massachusetts, and ending in the autumn of 1783 at West Point, New York. He stated that he had taken part in the battles of Princeton, Saratoga and Monmouth. Although William stated that he was sixty-eight years of age, he was actually only sixty-four, since he was born in 1757. He was given credit for three years' service and received a pension of eight dollars per month.

Grand Island was acquired by the State of New York in the peace settlement of the War of 1812. It belonged to the Seneca Indians and was purchased from them by New York in 1815. In 1824 it was made a part of the town of Buffalo and was annexed to Erie County, which had been set off from Niagara County in 1822. In 1824 the state arranged to have it surveyed by S. D. Kellogg and James Tanner in the months of October and November. At that time there were many "squatters" on the island; the survey notes mention about twenty "improvements" which were inhabited, including one in Lots 61 and 62 on the western shore which belonged to Mr. and Mrs. Coan. Lot 61 also had an improvement by W. Johnson, who may have been related to Mrs. Coan.

On August 7, 1827, William made his will (a copy of which is included herewith.) He probably died soon afterwards and his will was probated in the town of Lewiston, Niagara County, New York, on November 28, 1827. Most of his property (which consisted principally of livestock, crops and household goods) was left to his wife Salome, and some to Susan Johnson (probably his wife's granddaughter) and to his sons Jacob and Collins Coan. Since all he left to his sons was livestock and crops,⁴ it would not have been practical to have left such to Asa⁴, who lived in Adams County, Ohio, or to William⁴, who lived in Knox County, Indiana. His son Charles had died June 7, 1822, in Johnstown, New York.

³ William Coan has never been found in a census under his correct name. He is thought to have been the William Coone listed in the 1790 census in the town of Caughnawago, Montgomery County, New York, with one male sixteen and upward, two males under sixteen, and three females. He certainly had two sons under sixteen but he is not known to have had any daughters. Perhaps two of his sisters or two of Roxana's kin were living with him. The Montgomery County census of 1800 had many pages on which names are now missing, and William's name may be one of them. He was not found in Cayuga County in 1800. He was not found in the New York census of 1810, and he is believed to have been in Canada at that time. He did not appear in the census of 1820 because apparently Grand Island was not covered in it.

Children (4) COAN

- i. Jacob, b. July 15, 1785
- ii. Charles, b. 1789/1790
- iii. William, b. April 25, 1791
- iv. Asa, b. July 24, 1795
- v. Collins, b. 1806

NOTE: As late as 1789 Montgomery County, New York, comprised the western sixty percent of the state. In 1790 it consisted of eleven "towns," of which four later became counties of the same names. The town of Caughnawaga included one third of the present Montgomery County and all of Fulton and Hamilton counties; it included the present towns of Johnstown, Mayfield, Broadalbin, and Northampton, which are of interest to us. Thus in 1790, William may still have lived in Northampton or may already have moved to Mayfield. The deed showing his purchase of the land in Lot 242 is not on record, so it is no help.

JACOB⁴ COAN (William³, Jacob², Peter¹) was born July 15, 1785, at Northampton, Montgomery County (since 1838, Fulton County), New York, about fifteen miles from Vail Mills. He was the son of William and Roxana (Chadwick) Coan. On August 15, 1807, at Locke, Cayuga County, New York, he married Rhoda Wattles, who was born January 19, 1788, at Ballston, Saratoga County, New York, daughter of William, Jr., and Eunice (Parke) Wattles. Jacob drowned in Buffalo Creek, Buffalo, New York, November 19, 1834, aged 49. Rhoda died October 9, 1850, at Waukesha, Wisconsin. The many places Jacob and Rhoda lived can be noted from the places in which their twelve children were born.

CHARLES WATTLES⁵ COAN AND DESCENDANTS

The following material on Charles Wattles⁵ Coan and his descendants has been taken from the manuscript, History of the Coan Family of America by Virginia Catherine⁸ Coan Wiles with her permission. It is the history of her line of descent. The information has been reorganized and rearranged by the compiler to correspond with the format of this book, but the facts were researched, recorded, and detailed by Mrs. Wiles. She also contributed all the illustrations for this section except for two whose donors have been noted.

CHARLES WATTLES⁵ COAN (Jacob⁴, William³, Jacob², Peter¹) was born at Locke, Cayuga County, New York, August 13, 1808, the son of Jacob and Rhoda (Wattles) Coan. In his teens he went to sea on a whaler out of Nantucket. According to an Erie County, New York, deed, dated April 11, 1836, he married first Mary Ann _____. About 1846 he returned to the Buffalo area of New York State, and March 9, 1848, he married second Cecelia Vaughn of Buffalo. (There was no record of what happened to Mary Ann.) Cecelia was born in Thompsonstown, New York, August 27, 1815, the daughter of George and Betsey (McKee) Vaughn of Thompsonstown and East Hartford, Connecticut. Charles was a saloon keeper in Buffalo. Cecelia was very religious, and brought their children up strictly. The all-boy family was well educated for the times and had the social graces. By the 1860s Charles had moved his family to Cleveland, Ohio, where he purchased another saloon. He died in Cleveland in 1887; Cecelia died there also.

HENRY VAUGHN⁶ COAN (Charles W.⁵, Jacob⁴, William³, Jacob², Peter¹) was born in Buffalo, New York, April 20, 1851, the son of Charles Wattles and Cecelia (Vaughn) Coan. Henry, along with his brother Albert, was an accomplished soft-shoe dancer. He also was very athletic and enjoyed baseball especially. In 1875 in Cleveland, Ohio, he married Harriet Isobel Bullock. Her mother died when she was born in 1854, and a wealthy aunt brought her up. This aunt did not like Henry and would have nothing more to do with her niece when she married him.

Henry operated a small bakery in Cleveland; and despite her wealthy upbringing, Hattie did her share in the bakery and was a good wife. She loved to entertain. When her Grandfather Gould died, she inherited some money; but neither she nor Henry could hang on to money, and they went through it.

Harriet was never well after her fourth son Frank was born. On September 19, 1905, in Cleveland she died of consumption and was buried in Lake View Cemetery. Frank was then twelve years old.

After her death Henry took Frank and went to visit his son William who was married and living in New York City. Through William's wife Fanny, a pianist, Henry met Eudora Parkhurst, a violinist, who was playing a summer engagement in a New Jersey hotel with Fanny. Henry courted Eudora and persuaded her to go with him to Isle of Pines south of Cuba where he had invested in a citrus grove. They were married in Havana on their arrival July 7, 1909, and lived on Isle of Pines. Here they had three sons, the first two, twins. Henry took up Christian Science; and when Sydney, one of the twins, developed diphtheria, Henry would allow no medical aid. Sydney died.

When World War I broke out, Henry took his family back to the States. They settled in Royal Oak, Michigan, where at age 67 Henry worked as a brick layer. He could outwork all the younger men on the crew. At age 70 he was doing handsprings on the shore of Lake Erie. He died at Royal Oak April 17, 1950, aged 99. Eudora died at Royal Oak May 26, 1961.

WILLIAM FORD⁷ COAN (Henry V.⁶, Charles W.⁵, Jacob⁴, William³, Jacob², Peter¹) was born November 25, 1872, in Cleveland, Ohio, the son of Henry Vaughn and Harriet (Bullock) Coan. He had a fine tenor voice; and with his brother Edward, who was a bass, plus a friend, he made up a trio which sang at various functions. The trio won first prize in a Welsh singing contest, quite an honor since the Welsh were considered top singers in Cleveland. William and Edward sang in the Baptist choir and belonged to several singing societies.

William went to New York to pursue his singing career. He married Fanny Sweetzer October 4, 1904, in Cobleskill, New York. She was a talented pianist and organist.

After a long singing engagement in 1910, William came home ill. His little daughter Fanny kissed him. He had diphtheria which she contracted also. Both were in the hospital, and Fanny, his wife, couldn't see them since she was pregnant with her third child. Little Fanny died, and William lost his voice. He turned to auditing and worked in New York Trust Company until he retired in 1941. He died in New York City March 16, 1949; his wife died in 1961.

November 22, 1936, he married Frances Chemworth who was born March 5, 1910. In 1963 he was Assistant Manager of Dry Docks Savings Bank in Yonkers, New York, and his daughter Frances was studying at Potsdam School of Music. She inherited her grandfather William's singing voice.

EDWARD MILTON⁷ COAN (Henry V.⁶, Charles W.⁵, Jacob⁴, William³, Jacob², Peter¹) was born June 2, 1877, in Cleveland, Ohio, the son of Henry Vaughn and Harriet (Bullock) Coan. Edward never finished high school. He had to leave at the end of his junior year to go to work in his father's bakery. He was very much disappointed to have no more education. He was a very talented pianist and accompanied the singing trio he and his brother William had with a friend. At the age of 22 he was composing music. He also had real artistic ability. He did water colors and was excellent in portraits. Along with William he sang in the Baptist church choir where he met his wife.

April 21, 1904, he married Marie Lovena Schwind, who was born in Cleveland September 27, 1876, daughter of Charles Lincoln and Catherine (Hopp) von Schwind. (They'd dropped the von by this time.) They had a large social wedding in the Parmley Hotel ballroom in Painesville, Ohio. It took three dressmakers three weeks to make the wedding gown. It was later the bridal gown of Marie's second daughter Virginia Catherine. Marie wore the hourglass gown to a ball shortly before the premature birth of their first child Marjorie Isobel December 22, 1904, in East Cleveland, Ohio. Edward was working then as an accountant at the New York Central Railroad office in Cleveland.

August 11, 1906, before Marie had really recovered from the birth of the first baby, Virginia Catherine was born. Work was slow, and Edward's finances were at a low ebb, so they had to move to another apartment. It was very inconvenient--upstairs, no sink, no drain, and all water had to be carried up and down. Here they stayed three years.

Henry, Edward's father, was doing so well at Isle of Pines that Edward, Marie, and Marie's parents purchased land there and had it planted with acres of pineapple, oranges, and grapefruit. In 1909 when work was slow in Cleveland, Edward and his family moved to Isle of Pines.

The boat from Havana to Isle of Pines had only a rope rail, so the parents had to hold the two children. When they landed, they were taken by mule team to the hotel, a very poor accommodation. Ed's father met them and took them to his house at Neuva Gerona. It was a large house, but had flimsy construction. The groves were beautiful, but the feel of the jungle was all around.

At Henry's they slept under net canopies after the beds were searched for snakes. One morning Edward found a scorpion in his shoe. Marie decided she'd never live here; she was homesick. However, after vowing to herself to return to the States, she set about having a good time while she was there. At a ball she and Edward attended they met Cleveland people who discouraged them. These people said that the Island schools were poor; that the land was not what it was reputed to be; and that Edward and Marie should just have a vacation and keep their things in storage in Mobile.

After three weeks they returned to New Orleans and visited an aunt of Marie's who urged them to stay. Marjorie and Virginia contracted the measles and were cared for by a colored nurse while Marie and Edward went sightseeing. Edward found a job at the post office, but a month later he was offered his old job at the New York Central in Cleveland; so the family returned to East Cleveland. Edward and Marie were soon in the social swing there. Marie joined the Sewing Club; and they both joined the Mozart Choir, the Fortnightly Music Club, and were charter members of the Twenty-Forty Club. Marie sang contralto, and Edward had a fine bass voice.

To help financially because the trip south had wiped out their savings, Edward and Marie made chowchow (chili sauce and piccalilli). It was bottled, labeled, and sold at Chandler and Rudd Company. Also, Marie boarded teachers. Edward enrolled at International Correspondence Schools and studied every phase of auditing and related subjects. He became an authority and lectured at meetings and conventions.

In 1912 Helen Marie was born, and the New York Central moved its offices to New York. Ed was asked to go, but he didn't. He obtained independent jobs, but had to travel a great deal. He and Marie decided to move to Mentor Headlands, Ohio, near Marie's parents where she owned a three-acre lot. Here, overlooking the lake, Edward built an eight room house. Next, Edward became a traveling auditor for Cleveland Trust Company, and Marie began to take summer boarders. They lived three years at the Headlands. Then Edward was made assistant head of the auditing department of Cleveland Trust Company and all its branches. In 1918 the family returned to Cleveland, but still spent summers at Mentor Headlands.

Edward died March 18, 1946, at Painesville, Ohio. Marie died there August 18, 1954. They were both buried in Mentor Cemetery, Mentor, Ohio

MARJORIE ISOBEL⁸ COAN (Edward M.⁷, Henry V.⁶, Charles W.⁵, Jacob⁴, William³, Jacob², Peter¹) was born December 22, 1904 in East Cleveland, Ohio, the daughter of Edward Milton and Marie (Schwind) Coan. She inherited her father's musical ability and her mother's voice. While the family lived at Mentor Headlands, she and Virginia attended a one-room country school with fifteen pupils. She went on to graduate in 1925 from the College for Women (later called Flora Stone Mather College), Western Reserve University. She received her master's degree in psychiatric social work from the school of Applied Social Sciences at Western Reserve University. Marjorie worked for the state welfare association in Florida, was associated with the Cleveland Child Guidance Clinic, and for a time was a social worker for Children's Services in Cleveland.

November 28, 1934, she married her childhood sweetheart Arthur Wetzel, born November 30, 1906, at Bellevue, Ohio, the foster child of William and Eliza Wetzel of Mentor Headlands, Ohio. Marjorie and Arthur were married in Morgantown, West Virginia, and settled in Vero Beach, Florida where they bought several orange groves. After a year they returned to Cleveland, and Arthur went to work for Lincoln Electric where he stayed until 1945 when he bought a bulldozer and went into business for himself. Although he never went beyond the eighth grade, since his foster parents did not believe in education, he educated himself and became a very well-informed and financially successful business man.

After World War II Marjorie and Arthur bought the west section of the Schwind farm at Mentor Headlands and built a house there. When Arthur's foster mother died, they moved into the Wetzel house to care for an aged aunt. They were both very active in community affairs. Marjorie was for many years Sunday School superintendent for the North Mentor Church. They were sponsors and supervisors for the community building for teens; and Arthur offered his services and those of his machines to help build the church and community center. He died suddenly of a heart attack August 18, 1960.

Marjorie operated nine rental cottages at Mentor Headlands. On May 24, 1964, the Mentor Headlands Community Association presented to her, and posthumously to Arthur, a plaque dedicating the new addition--the children's recreational hall--to them for their work in organizing the center, for their continual efforts over the years to keep it running, and finally for their help with its building. She was general manager and head of the Building Fund Committee, a member of the Mentor School Board, the Mentor Marsh Committee, and the National Mental Health Association. She died June 23, 1967, in Cleveland.

VIRGINIA CATHERINE⁸ COAN (Edward M.⁷, Henry V.⁶, Charles W.⁵, Jacob⁴, William³, Jacob², Peter¹) was born August 11, 1906, in East Cleveland, Ohio, the daughter of Edward Milton and Marie (Schwind) Coan. She was a blue-eyed, blonde baby, sensitive and dreamy in direct contrast to her dark-haired, vivacious sister Marjorie. She inherited her father's artistic talent; and in high school, before she had any advanced training, at the Lake County Fair she won many prizes for her paintings. She was graduated from Western Reserve University; and one term while she was in college, she took courses at the Cleveland School of Art. Later, while she was teaching school, she studied at the same place under Carl Guertner, a modern water color artist. She had gone into teaching at her parents' insistence, but did not like her job; so she changed to social work. She was employed by a Cleveland family agency for awhile, and then went into children's work.

On July 15, 1935, Virginia married Berlyn H. Wiles, who was born November 13, 1909, in Irondale, Ohio, the son of James R. and Nan (Stillwell) Wiles. They were married at the home of her parents at Mentor Headlands. Dr. Frank H. Ferris of the Fairmont Presbyterian Church, Shaker Heights, officiated. Virginia was married in her mother Marie's heirloom wedding gown of 1904. After their marriage she and Berlyn worked for six months as house parents at the model orphanage, Beechbrook. They worked with Bob and Mona Manners (Manners Drive-in Restaurants) and with Dr. and Mrs. Bliss Shaeffer of University Hospital. They then moved back to Cleveland where Virginia was soon called to work again at the Family Service Association. She worked there until her son was born. Berlyn worked first as a drill press operator and then as an assembly man at the North American Manufacturing Company.

In 1943 Berlyn and Virginia moved to the small town of Minerva, Ohio, because of Berlyn's health. They had lived there once before when they were first married; and they both preferred small town life. They were both active in the Methodist Church and served for many years on the official board. Virginia belonged to the Women's Society of the church, acted as secretary, and for three years as president. She also was a busy worker and officer in the Parent-Teacher Association. It was there in Minerva that she and Berlyn wrote the history of the Wiles family, Pennsylvania Dutch pioneers who settled in Jefferson County, Ohio. Then Virginia began the gigantic task of writing the Coan history and profusely illustrating it with her interesting drawings. She entitled her work The History of the Coan Family of America and completed the manuscript in 1963. She updated it later, so that it carried the facts of her immediate family until 1966. It was put on microfilm and made available under #525,726 at the Genealogical Department Library of the Church of Latter Day Saints in Salt Lake City. The Presbyterian Historical Society in Philadelphia controlled reproduction rights of the microfilm.

In 1979 Virginia completed Volume II of The History of the Coan Family of America, updating her first manuscript and adding new Coan data. She was a member of the Daughters of the American Revolution; she was D.A.R. genealogist for Carroll County, Ohio, from 1975 on and continued in that office in 1982.

CHARLES⁴ COAN (William³, Jacob², Peter¹) was born about 1789/90 in Montgomery County, New York, the son of William and Roxana (Chadwick) Coan. He served in the War of 1812 and his pension number was 1183. He was a silversmith. He was the Charles Coan mentioned as assisting Phebe (Coan) Johnson in administering the will of her husband Caleb in 1818. Charles was Phebe's nephew; his father, William, was Phebe's brother. According to the records of the Episcopal Church in Johnstown, New York, Charles died June 7, 1822. The Freeman's Journal of Cooperstown, New York, June 10, 1822, stated that he was aged 32 at the time of his death. His wife, Sally Coan, was appointed administratrix of his estate. Soon after Charles' death, his widow moved away from Johnstown. It is not known whether or not they had children.

It is believed that when William³ and Roxana Coan moved from Mayfield, Montgomery County, New York, to Locke, Cayuga County, New York, between 1798 and 1805, they left Charles with his uncle and aunt, Caleb and Phebe³ (Coan) Johnson who lived in Johnstown, New York. Caleb was undoubtedly a silversmith and probably Charles learned the trade from him. Caleb and Phebe's son, George Johnson, was also a silversmith. Caleb made the seal for the Village of Johnstown in March, 1809. When Caleb died February 4, 1818, in his 45th year, he left hardware, gold, silver, and military goods to the value of $1675, and tools belonging to the shop of a value of $235.66. Charles⁴ Coan as one of Phebe Johnson's two next of kin (the other was her brother-in-law, Ashbell Cornwell of Vail Mills) helped her take the inventory.

Caleb Johnson and Charles⁴ Coan were in the same militia regiment (34th Regt., Montgomery County, Lt. Col. Abraham J. Vosburgh, commanding). Caleb was promoted to lieutenant in 1811 and Charles was promoted to lieutenant in 1814.

By 1817 Charles⁴ Coan was in Cooperstown, New York, when he is said to have been a silversmith in partnership with John Frederick Ernst. He later moved back to Johnstown, perhaps by September, 1818, when he signed the inventory of Caleb Johnson's estate.

WILLIAM⁴ COAN (William³, Jacob², Peter¹) was born April 25, 1791, the son of William and Roxana (Chadwick) Coan. He served in the War of 1812 under Captain Dunks and General McClure in the New York Militia. He enlisted as a private at Bloomfield, Ontario County, New York, September 15, 1813, for three months' service; and he was discharged December 15, 1813, at Fort Niagara. About 1814 he married Mary Chadwick, his first cousin, near Buffalo, New York. She was the daughter of Cornelius Chadwick, his mother's brother, and Mary (Sparks) Chadwick.

On April 16, 1855, William, aged 64, applied for bounty land under the Act of 1855. His application was accepted. He died November 27, 1862, and was buried in Upper Indiana Cemetery, Knox County, Palmyra Township, three miles north of Vincennes, Indiana. Mary died in 1869 and was buried in the same cemetery.

LUOLIN ELIZABETH STOREY⁸, daughter of Olin Kurgeon and Luella Bernice (Coan) Storey, was born April 12, 1913, in Denver Colorado. She was graduated from high school in Vernon, Texas, valedictorian of her class. She attended Rice Institute (now Rice University) in Houston, Texas, and received a B.A. degree with distinction in 1935. On January 12, 1936, in Richmond, Texas, she married Edgar Altenburg, who was born in New York City June 11, 1888. He had a Ph.D. degree from Columbia University, taught at Rice Institute, and was an eminent scientist.

Luolin returned to Rice in 1945, at which time she began work on fruit fly genetics. In 1947 she was invited to be guest investigator at Indiana University in Dr. H. J. Muller's laboratory (he's a former Nobel Prize winner in fruit fly genetics). In 1948 she got a three-year pre-doctoral fellowship from the Atomic Energy Commission, to work in one of four radio-biology laboratories set up in strategic areas in the nation for the study of peaceful uses of isotopes.

She made medical history in New York City in 1950 when she announced at the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science the development of a test to detect and possibly classify the viruses that cause such diseases as colds, smallpox, flu and polio. After getting her Ph.D. at Rice in 1951 she did graduate work on viruses at the University of Oxford through a three-year fellowship.

Back to Houston--and continued experiments. She left Rice and was sponsored by Baylor University College of Medicine until 1964, when she moved to St. Thomas (University of St. Thomas, Houston.)

(Martin Dreyer, "Fruit Fly Lady," Texas Magazine, Sunday, January 9, 1966, pp. 18-29.)

In 1959 Edgar and Luolin were divorced and that year she married second Henry Browning. They were divorced June 1, 1961.

To quote again from Martin Dreyer's article on Luolin--in 1966:

she and her long-time associate, Dr. Edgar Altenburg, will package 2000 adult fruit flies aboard a bio satellite. It will be one of 14 biological experiments to be flown on the satellite. Three of them will be genetics experiments, of which hers will be the principal one and the largest.

The bio satellite--first of a series--is slated for a 3 1/2 day orbit. The flies--the kind you see gathered on rotten bananas--will be tested for the genetic effects of weightlessness.

Said Dr. Browning: "We should be able to detect genetic hazards to man in space through studying the effects on fruit flies--because they're small and breed rapidly and more is known about their genetic make-up than any other organism."

The slim, blondish scientist knows her fruit flies. She's been doing continuous experiments with them since 1945. That's 20 long years with the tiny, winged creature that's known in scientific circles as 'drosophilia.'

Luolin Browning conducts her research program in the spacious genetics lab at University of St. Thomas. The research is supported by funds from the General Medical Sciences of the U.S. Public Health Service and from NASA's bio satellite program.

"NASA is also supporting our research on the genetic effects of ultraviolet light," she said. (Her associate and former husband, Dr. Altenburg, an internationally known scientist, discovered in 1931 that ultraviolet light produces mutations.)

The lab, in a two-story building, truly hums with action. Lab assistants and technicians peer through microscopes, poke at the flies, make up individual matings, record data, etc., etc. There are six full-time workers and eight part-timers--one from Rice and the rest from St. Thomas.

The lab has a larger fruit fly population than Houston has people. At the latest count it was 2 million, give or take a few. They live in half-pint milk bottles, male and female, and they lay eggs like mad.

About 4000 of the bottles crowd the shelves, each holding some 500 flies and tasty meals of cornmeal syrup, yeast and sugar.

Also there are 15,000 vials of the flies in special breeding boxes.

Dr. Browning moves around, touching a bottle here, fingering a vial there, and there's an affectionate--as well as scientific--gleam in her eye. This is her project. She has lived with it through the years, seen it grow, knows its importance to man.

"Our object is to increase the knowledge of the basic genetic principles that would probably apply to all forms of life," she explained.

"One of our objectives is to try to determine the nature of the gene and the mutation process. A result of this would be more knowledge of the cause of cancer.

There is definitely a relationship between cancer and mutations. Whatever causes mutations in a wide variety of organisms also causes cancers, and vice versa. If we find out what causes mutations, then others will use the information to find ways to avoid the mutations."

Dr. Browning said the experiments include the study of radiation hazards and hazards from noxious chemicals in the environment.

Luolin Browning also teaches courses in genetics and evolution at University of St. Thomas, is associate professor of biology. (Martin Dreyer, "Fruit Fly Lady," Texas Magazine, Sunday, January 9, 1966, pp. 17-21.)

ASA W.⁵ COAN (Asa⁴, William³, Jacob², Peter¹) was the son of Asa and Mary (Jones) Coan. For his biography I will quote an article that appeared in the Herald of Gospel Liberty, Dayton, Ohio, in July, 1898.

November 13, 1833, Asa W. Coan was born near the village of Rome, in Adams Co., O. He was one of a family of twelve children, seven of whom were sons and five, daughters. His paternal grandfather, Colonel Wm. Coan, was of German descent. His maternal grandfather, Dr. John Jones, was of Welsh extraction. Both grandfathers were soldiers of the Revolutionary War. Both his parents and grandparents were members of the Christian Church.

His educational advantages in boyhood were limited, but in 1853 he entered Clermont Academy, Adams Co., of which Prof. James K. Parker was principal. He gave Prof. Parker great credit as an educator and felt his personal obligations to be peculiarly great to the man; that he had generously helped him to become what he was in life.

In 1855 he divided the year between teaching and work in the Academy. In 1856 he opened a private school for advanced scholars, which he continued for two years, with a good degree of success. He continued in his profession as teacher until 1862, but meantime sharing his strength and time with a higher calling, one that he intended should be his life work. As a teacher he was making himself more fully ready for his greater work.

Jan. 12, 1852, when in the nineteenth year of his age, he united with the Christian Church of Stout's Run in Adams Co. and at once began the work of the ministry. He had remarkable success in evangelistic work, so much so, that his elders in the ministry discouraged his ambition for further scholastic advantages. But properly measuring the demands of the age on the ministry, he entered school as student and teacher, for a fuller preparation for the work. Meantime, he regularly served the people of his choice by pulpit labors.

In 1857 Bro. Coan married Miss Mary Morton. Three sons and one daughter were born to them.

His intense opposition to Slavery made him a marked man in the councils of the Republican party, and at the earnest solicitations of his political friends, he became a candidate for the legislature and was elected for the term of 1855-57 [actually, 1865-67]. He had qualified himself for this new sphere by a course of legal reading and study of parliamentary tactics.

Retiring in 1857 [1867] from the political arena, he was chosen pastor of the Enon, O. Christian Church. He continued in that relationship for two years, when a broader field opened to him in a call from the Providence, R. I., Christian Church. There, for a time, in connection with his pastoral work he engaged in the publication of the Living Christian, a weekly religious newspaper of real merit.

In 1873 Bro. Coan removed to Marion, Ind. taking pastoral charge of the church in that city, in which relationship he continued for two years. In 1875 he took pastoral charge of the Jamestown, O., Christian Church, which he served for one year, when he removed to Yellow Springs and became pastor of that church, which he served for a period of five years.

In 1881, being elected to the editorship of the Herald of Gospel Liberty, he removed to Dayton and entered upon the last vigorous work of his life. For nearly four years he gave himself with intense devotion to the editorship. In June, 1884, he received a slight paralytic stroke, but despite the warnings of wise and devoted friends, refused to lay down the heavy burdens of his position. On Friday, Feb. 6, 1885, a second stroke came while he was at work in his office; under that stroke he fell as one dead. For some time he was completely disabled and felt compelled to relinquish his editorial responsibilities. After a time he rallied from the shock and removed to Enon, O., his old home, and resumed there the pastoral work, but on Saturday evening, June 26, [1886] at 9 o'clock, when the preparations for one more Sabbath's labor were all complete, a third stroke fell upon our brother. He lingered in a helpless and almost speechless state until the early morning of Wednesday, the 30th of June, when at 4:20 the spirit of Asa W. Coan departed from this earthly life. Only the week before he had taken part in the Commencement Exercises at Antioch College. In a brief speech on the occasion he had said, "This is the last Commencement I ever expect to attend....I am only holding on by the willows." Alas! How feeble was the hold! How speedy was the going!

Bro. Coan had been honored greatly by his people. His positions of trust and responsibility were many and honorable. He had for years been a trustee of the Publishing House and of the Christian Biblical Institute. For many years he had been president of the Central O. Conference; was a member of the Educational Board of Antioch College; and for one term was president of the Quadrennial Convention. He was a born leader of men. His counsel was with wisdom and his devotion to the work of his Church whole-hearted. His was a commanding presence. Few men looked the leader more completely than did he. Few men, perhaps, of nobler appearance ever graced our council chambers. He looked like one built for a hundred years of toil. He was a man of generous heart, magnificent physique, fine mental ability, and large pulpit power!

In 1881, Bro. Coan published a book of 434 pages, entitled Gospel Sermons by Christian Ministers. The volume contains twenty-six sermons, with portraits and biographical sketches of each contributor. No volume was ever issued from the press of the Christians, of greater, if of equal value. It is a rich monument to the name of Rev. A. W. Coan.

The funeral services of Brother Coan were at Enon, his last home. Twenty-four ministers were present. Addresses were made by Elders Long, Black, and Summerbell and Elders McWhinney, Weeks, Warbinton, and Coil conducted other portions of the service. While the clergy encircled the casket, a verse of Sweet Bye and Bye was sung, and each man felt that a noble brother had entered into rest; indeed, that a mighty prince had fallen in Israel! The interment took place at Yellow Springs, O., where many of his best years had been given to the Church.

His memory will be cherished by a large circle of friends, as one of the heroes of truth!

The following is from his obituary by O. W. Powers in The Antiochian:

Antioch College had no truer friend. He stood firmly by its interests, in good fortune or ill, and, with his associates in the Board, omitted no effort to carry out the designs and realize the hopes of the founders and friends of the college. And when, at the last Commencement, the Trustees announced the brightening outlook, none were more hopefully glad than he. His words at the Commencement dinner will ever seem to those who heard them as at once a prophecy of the future prosperity of Antioch, and a sadder prophecy of his own approaching end. In one week from that day he was no more.

From a beautiful memorial essay by Rev. G. D. Black, we take the following:

"Asa W. Coan was an earnest and a thoroughly conscientious man. What he believed he believed with his might and he was fearless in his advocacy of it. He was not a cringer. His mind dwelt constantly and loftily on the great themes respecting God, man, and duty; and they were to him stern, solemn realities.

Only today a man of distinction in politics, who sat next to Coan in the Ohio General Assembly in 1866-67, told me he never knew a man in his life more conscientious and terribly in earnest than A. W. Coan. He said that his own party could not depend on his vote if the measure was one that he conceived to be questionable as to its character; that the moment he saw a disposition in his party to play fast and loose with a principle of right or truth, he was sure to bolt. He also said that his ability to grasp questions, and his strength and courage in debate, easily made him a leader on his side of the House."

Asa's wife, Mary Morton, was born July 13, 1838, in Ohio. She married Asa August 26, 1857, in Adams County, Ohio. She died January 27, 1924, in Massachusetts.

On May 2, 1887, he married Sarah Margery Hanger who, like John, was the child of a minister. They met while attending Antioch College. CHARLES FLORUS⁷ COAN (John L.⁶, Asa W.⁵, Asa⁴, William³, Jacob², Peter¹) was born in Dayton, Ohio, April 30, 1886, the son of John Leet and Sarah Margery (Hanger) Coan. Charles attended high school in Dayton and worked after school in his father's printing office and in the Dayton Public Library; A cousin, probably William⁶, (Charles⁵, Asa⁴, William³, Jacob², Peter¹), who was a teacher at Whitman College in Walla Walla, Washington, persuaded him to go West to college. He was graduated from the University of Washington in 1908. He did graduate work there for a year, but was threatened with failing eyesight; so he decided to try homesteading. He settled on 160 acres of government land in southeastern Oregon in the Burns district, 150 miles from the nearest railroad. After an unsuccessful year, he returned to Seattle and was offered a teaching position in the Tung Wen Institute at Amoy, China. He got the job on Wednesday and sailed on the following Saturday from Vancouver on the Empress of India. In 1912, after two years in China, he returned to Seattle.

Next he taught in a grammar school in Port Townsend, Washington; in January, 1913, he became director of Collins

Field House, a municipal social center in Seattle. At this point he decided to return to college and spent the next two years at the University of California doing graduate study in history. From 1915-1918 he taught history in Alameda High School in Alameda, California.

At the beginning of the United States' participation in World War I, he enlisted for service in the Second Hospital Corps at the University of California, but was disqualified because of his eyesight. In the summer of 1918 he succeeded in enlisting in the National Guard in Seattle. When the war ended, he returned to the University of California where he received his Ph.D. in history in 1920. That fall he accepted the position of associate professor of history at the University of New Mexico. He became a full professor in 1922.

March 9, 1924, he married Mary Leonor Wright, the daughter of Clarence Wright of Springer, New Mexico. She attended the University of Missouri, the University of New Mexico; and was a teacher at Union High School in Grants, New Mexico, at the University of New Mexico, and at Stephens College.

Charles was the author of A History of New Mexico. He died September 19, 1928.

The following material on Mary Alice⁵ Coan and her many descendants was written for this genealogy by her grandson, Theodore Hunter Smith. He also contributed all the pictures for this section.

MARY ALICE⁵ COAN (Asa⁴, William³, Jacob², Peter¹) was born September 2, 1835, in Rome (now Stout), Green Township, Adams County, Ohio, the daughter of Asa and Mary Alice (Jones) Coan. She died July 3, 1918, in Marshalltown, Iowa. Mary married:

- (1) John H. Jarvis, May 5, 1852, in Adams County, Ohio;
- (2) Isaac Tichenor Smith, June 2, 1864, in Marshalltown, Iowa; divorced in 1868;
- (3) Moses S. Curtis, September 20, 1868, in Marshall County, Iowa.

- (1) John H. Jarvis was born in Lewis County, Kentucky, September 16, 1823. He went to California in the Gold Rush and was listed there in the census of 1850. Near him was a man named Henry Sturdevant, with whom he became a close friend. They agreed that each would name a son for the other. Although John is said to have met with success in his search for gold, he lost all in a hotel fire in San Francisco as he was ready to return home. He went back to the claim before he returned to Ohio, but he was not so successful as before.

After he and Mary were married, they lived for a time in Buena Vista, Ohio (about seven miles east of Rome), then in Manchester, Ohio, about twelve miles west of Rome. About 1856 they moved to Jefferson Township (later called Timber Creek Township), Marshall County, Iowa. On October 2, 1861, John enlisted in Company H, 13th Iowa Volunteer Infantry in which he became a corporal. After he entered the army, John rented the farm and moved his family into Marshalltown. He was missing in action, presumed killed, in the Battle of Shiloh, Tennessee, April 6, 1862. After John's death, Mary took up nursing to support her children. One of her patients was Isaac T. Smith.

- (2) Isaac Tichenor Smith, a widower from Wisconsin, was born May 17, 1817, in Ellery, Chautauqua County, New York, the son of Farrinton and Lucy (Smiley) McNitt Smith. Isaac, his father, three brothers, a half-brother, and a half-sister and half a dozen first cousins settled in the Territory of Wisconsin between 1834 and 1845. By his first wife, Nancy De Jean, who died in 1859, Isaac had nine children, seven of which were living when he and Mary Jarvis were married. Isaac had sold his farm in Rock County, Wisconsin, in October 1862, and the next summer moved with four of his children to Marshalltown, Iowa. While he was living there, he took sick; and he was nursed by Mary Jarvis. They were married in Marshalltown June 2, 1864.

Soon after their marriage they moved to Boonsborough, Iowa, where Isaac went into the coal mining business, selling coal to nearby railroads. Isaac was not a good business man, and he did not have written contracts with the railroads, so when the latter secured their own coal mines, he lost his business. At that time four of Mary's Jarvis children (Emma had died) were living in Boonsborough with Isaac, Mary, and their son, Arthur Morton Smith. Mary took her five children to her farm outside of Marshalltown and Isaac went back to Janesville, Wisconsin, working as a carpenter.

In 1868 Mary secured a divorce, and on September 20, 1868, she married Moses S. Curtis. By June, 1870, Isaac was back in Iowa, living in Fort Dodge with three of his children by his first wife and with Arthur Morton, his son by Mary. He was a dealer in agricultural machinery. In July, 1870, he had a fire in his store that completely wiped him out and left him deeply in debt. For a period he became interested in Iowa lead mines, but he decided that he would do better in the Far West.

In May, 1873, he left Iowa with a group of covered wagons, taking with him his oldest daughter, Flora and his youngest son, Arthur. They crossed the Great Plains, following the line of the Union Pacific Railroad through Nebraska and Northeast Colorado to Greeley where they left the wagon train and went to Fort Collins, Colorado. (Their adventures there will be described under Arthur M. Smith). In January, 1875, Isaac went to Saugauche and the Sangre de Cristo mountains and later to Hinsdale and Gunnison Counties, all in Colorado, prospecting for gold, silver, lead and iron. In 1888 Isaac returned to Iowa and lived for a time with his daughter, Ida S. Farrell, then moved back to Wisconsin. He spent his last years with his son Scott Smith and family in Rock County, where he died January 12, 1898.

- (3) Moses S. Curtis, born in New York state about 1817, was a widower with at least four children when he and Mary were married. In 1870 they lived in Timber Creek Township, Marshall County, Iowa; in 1875 they lived in Newton, Jasper County, Iowa. Moses Curtis died August 10, 1904, in Lemoore, California. By June, 1907, Mary was living in Marshalltown, Iowa, with her daughter, Emma Curtis.

HENRY STURDEVANT JARVIS⁶, son of Mary A. (Coan) and John H. Jarvis, was born March 2, 1857, in Jefferson Township, Marshall County, Iowa. After his mother married Isaac Smith, her four Jarvis children (Emma was dead) lived with Isaac and her, and two of Isaac's daughters for a time. After the divorce and Mary's marriage to Moses Curtis, the children lived with the Curtis family for a year and a half, but by June 1870, only the Curtis children (including Emma Curtis, b. Jan. 28, 1870) lived with Moses and Mary. Henry lived nearby with Benjamin and Mary Crabtree; Lizzie lived with James and Amanda Crabtree. John Charles probably lived with one of his uncles, and Sabra was dead. Henry was always very fond of the Crabtree families and had no use for any of the Curtis family except his mother and his half-sister, Emma Curtis. Some time after his grandmother, Mary (Jones) Coan, widow of Asa⁴ Coan, married William Cox, Henry went to live with them in Bath Township, Greene County, Ohio, where he went to high school. He also lived for a while with his uncle, John A.⁵ Coan, near Vanceburg, Kentucky.

By July, 1880, Henry was back in Timber Creek Township, Marshall County, Iowa, running his mother's farm. On November 2, 1882, he was married to Kattie Allgiers, daughter of John and Mary Allgiers of La Moille, Iowa. In 1884 Henry and his wife moved to Northern Nebraska and Henry took out a homestead claim near Brocksburg, Keya Paha County. He soon bought a store and post office in Brocksburg. Later he moved to Springview, where he was county clerk of Keya Paha County in 1888 and 1889. His marriage to Kattie Allgiers ended in divorce because she could not stand the loneliness and the primitive conditions of the life on the homestead and in Brocksburg. On July 2, 1891, Henry was married to Mary L. Wood, the daughter of Frank B. and Elizabeth S. (Allen) Wood. She was born November 21, 1867, in Hamburg,

New York, and moved with her parents and three brothers to Nebraska in 1882, where the parents took a homestead and a timber claim, each good for one hundred sixty acres. On the homestead they built a very good sod house, which they lived in for many years. Mary was married in the "soddie."

Henry and Mary moved to Salt Lake City, Utah, in 1891, where Henry worked for a wholesale fruit company for three years; then they returned to Springview, Nebraska, where Henry ran a store. In 1902 they moved to Ainsworth, Brown County, Nebraska, where Henry again had a store, and was elected county clerk in 1905. In 1909 they moved to Herrick, South Dakota, where Henry again had a store, which he kept until 1923. In August of that year he, Mary, and their son King Coan Jarvis (the only child at home at that time) moved to Los Angeles where Henry bought a store, which he kept until 1926. In the meantime King, who was a veterinary doctor, had started to work for the California Department of Agriculture. In 1927 Henry bought a store and post office in El Dorado, California, which he ran until October, 1929, when he sold it and moved back to the Los Angeles area. He died late in December, 1929. Mary lived in Eagle Rock, Los Angeles, until she died in April, 1963.

JOHN CHARLES JARVIS, son of John H. and Mary Alice (Coan) Jarvis, was born November 15, 1861, in Marshall County, Iowa. About five months after he was born, his father was killed in the Battle of Shiloh; and his mother was left a widow with five children. They stayed with her during her short marriage to Isaac Smith; but soon after she married Moses Curtis, the Jarvis children were sent to stay with friends or relatives. John Charles (hereinafter called Charles or Charles J., because he called himself that in his adult life) was said to have gone to live with his uncle, Asa W.⁵ Coan, but he was not listed with that family in the 1870 census, possibly because the census was taken before he had arrived. He was possibly the Charles listed (no surname given) as a nephew with the family of John and Sabra⁵ (Coan) Cox in Bath Township, Greene County, Ohio, in the 1880 census, although it stated that he, his father and his mother were all born in Ohio, whereas he was born in Iowa, and his father was born in Kentucky. At any rate, during his adult life he lived in Marshalltown, Iowa, where he had a grocery store. His mother and his Aunt Emma Curtis lived near him in their later years. He died in 1924.

On October 8, 1884, Charles married Emma Margaret Landahl, who died in 1932.

CHARLES RAYMOND JARVIS⁷, son of Charles J. and Emma (Landahl) Jarvis, was born May 29, 1897, in Marshalltown, Iowa. He was a chiropractor and practiced for many years in Pasadena, California, where he died October 19, 1974. He was married to Helen Andrews, who in 1982 lived in a retirement home near Pasadena. They had no children.

FLORENCE R. JARVIS⁷, daughter of Charles J. and Emma (Landahl) Jarvis, was born in Marshalltown, Iowa, on May 29, 1897. After receiving an A.B. degree, she attended Columbia University, where she received a Ph.D. degree in education. In 1982 she lived in Des Moines, Iowa, where she had taught school for many years.

ARTHUR MORTON SMITH⁶, son of Isaac T. and Mary A. (Coan) Jarvis Smith, was born December 25, 1864, in Boonsborough, Iowa. After his parents separated, he lived with his mother and the Jarvis children in Timber Creek Township, Marshall County, Iowa, until after his mother married Moses Curtis. In the spring of 1870 he was taken to Fort Dodge, Iowa, to live with his father, two half-sisters, and a half-brother. In May of 1873, he left Fort Dodge with his father and his half-sister, Flora Smith, and joined a small caravan of wagons bound for Colorado Territory. They crossed the Missouri River by ferry at Council Bluffs, Iowa, then headed north and west to the Platte River, which they followed west to North Platte, Nebraska. They then followed the South Platte River southwest, then west, to the Cache la Poudre River. At Greeley, Colorado, they left the party and headed north to Fort Collins, Colorado.

Near Kearney, Nebraska, where they had camped at noon because of the presence nearby of about one thousand Pawnee Indians who were off their reservation on a hunt, Arthur was resting in a tent when two Indian braves lifted up the side and back and entered, picking up things they fancied. Arthur sped out to the main camp and gave the alarm and the men of the party came over to the tent with their guns ready while one unarmed man went forward and took the stolen things away from the braves, who offered no resistance.

Another interesting experience took place one evening while they were traveling along the South Platte River. They looked across the river and the hills had turned black and seemed to be moving! What they saw was a tremendous herd of buffalo moving on to new pastures. Arthur afterwards saw many herds of buffalo, but never again one of that size.

Isaac worked for a time as a carpenter in Fort Collins, then went trapping along the Cache la Poudre River while Arthur stayed with Flora on a ranch along the Big Thompson River. In the winter Isaac took Arthur up the Cache la Poudre River and across the Medicine Bow Range and the Continental Divide into North Park, a natural park in north central Colorado. Isaac hunted, trapped, and prospected. In the spring, Arthur went to live at another ranch along the Big Thompson River, and spent several weeks in a cabin up Red Stone Creek, near Horsetooth Mountain, helping with cutting poles and hauling them down the mountain with a yoke of oxen. Near the cabin was an abandoned lumber camp which was used by "road agents" (highway men) in between depredations. The men did not bother their neighbors as long as nobody informed on them, but they were a source of worry.

About a week before Christmas, 1874, Arthur was sent back to Wisconsin so he could go to school. He lived with his half-brother, Scott Smith, near Janesville, until the summer of 1878, when he ran away. He worked at various farms in the area until 1882, when he went to Fort Dodge, Iowa, to live with his half-sister, Ida (Smith) Farrell, and her family. There he graduated from high school in 1885. That summer Arthur went to Chicago, where he had several jobs. In 1887 he moved to Duluth, Minnesota, where he worked for the Duluth and Iron Range Railroad. He started as a stenographer, then was chief clerk, passenger train conductor, and assistant superintendent. He later worked for a number of other railroads, including the Pere Marquette, the Southern, and the Coal and Coke, ending his active career in 1934 as superintendent of the Hagerstown (Maryland) Division of the Western Maryland Railway.

Arthur married (1) December 27, 1899, in Cleveland, Ohio, Nancy Jane Dempsy, daughter of Marshall L. and Sarah E. (Hunter) Dempsy, who was born September 1, 1867, in Cleveland, Ohio. Nancy died September 19, 1906, in Cleveland. Arthur married (2) January 21, 1909, in Rock Hill, South Carolina, Emma Jane Roach, daughter of John J. and Margaret (Watson) Roach of Rock Hill. Emma was a wonderful mother to Nancy's children and was very much beloved by them. The Smith family lived in Elkins, West Virginia, from 1909 to 1919 and in Hagerstown, Maryland, from 1919 to 1943. Arthur died January 19, 1943, in Hagerstown; Emma died June 22, 1943, at Rock Hill, South Carolina.

ARTHUR MORTON SMITH, JR.⁷, the son of Arthur Morton and Nancy J. (Dempsy) Smith, was born December 30, 1902, in Chicago, Illinois. After growing up in Elkins, West Virginia, where he graduated from high school at the age of fifteen and a half, he went to Cleveland, Ohio, and for three years lived with his Grandmother Dempsy while attending Western Reserve University. (After three years he moved to his fraternity house and his brother, Theodore, took his place with his grandmother.) Arthur received his A.B. degree in 1922 and his M.D. degree in 1926. He stayed in Cleveland as intern and resident in several hospitals, specializing in surgery, until 1932. He then moved to Charlottesville, Virginia where he practiced surgery until 1975. He then went to Yale University where he received an M.S. in mechanical engineering in 1928. From 1928 through 1950 he was an engineer with Consolidated Edison Company of New York (and predecessor companies) specializing in efficiency testing and design of steam power plants. In 1951 he moved to California and went with Bechtel Corporation as a project engineer in their Power and Industrial Division in San Francisco. His work was supervising the design of power plants for public utilities and private companies. He also supervised the design of non-nuclear elements of three large nuclear power stations, one of which was in India. On June 23, 1933, he was married to Catherine Wilkins Haugh, the daughter of George and Jennie (McBee) Haugh. Catherine was born in Atlanta, Georgia; received an A.B. degree from Agnes Scott College in Decatur, Georgia, in 1922; an M.A. degree in history from the University of Chicago in 1927; and studied for and passed her oral examinations for a Ph.D. degree at the University of Chicago, but never finished her dissertation. They were later divorced.

EMMA CURTIS⁶, daughter of Moses S. and Mary A. (Coan) Jarvis Smith Curtis, was born in Timber Creek Township, Marshall County, Iowa, on January 28, 1870. Little is known of her early life, but she became a beloved school teacher in Marshalltown, Iowa, in her adulthood. She taught in, and for years was principal of, the Glick School in Marshalltown. Her mother lived with her until Emma died July 1, 1916, after an operation. Emma never married.

GEORGE CURTIS⁶, son of Moses S. and Mary A. (Coan) Jarvis Smith Curtis, was born ca. 1875, in Marshall County, Iowa. He died ca. 1955 in Seneca Falls, New York, where he had lived for many years; he was a metal worker. He married Kate _____.

SABRA A.⁵ COAN (Asa⁴, William³, Jacob², Peter¹) was born in Ohio February 25, 1838, the daughter of Asa and Mary Alice (Jones) Coan. The date of her death is not known, but she was living in Dayton, Ohio, in June, 1908. She married John Cox of Bath Township, Greene County, Ohio, on December 23, 1872. John was the son of William Cox of the same place and the stepson of her mother, Mary A. (Jones) Coan Cox. John and Sabra had no children of their own, but they had an adopted daughter. They also raised two nephews, the younger of which (and perhaps the elder, also) was a son of Charles⁵ Coan (Asa⁴, William³, Jacob², Peter¹). William⁶ Coan, born 1871 (in Louisiana per 1880 census) is known to have been the son of Charles⁵; Charles (no surname stated), born 1861 in Ohio, could possibly have been his son, but it is more likely that he was John Charles Jarvis, son of J. H. Jarvis and Mary A.⁵ (Coan) (Jarvis) (Smith) Curtis, who was born November 15, 1861, five months before his father was killed in the battle of Pittsburg Landing, Tennessee.

It is interesting to note that in June, 1870, Asa W.⁵ Coan was the minister in the Knob Prairie Christian Church in Enon, Clark County, Ohio, and his mother Mary (Jones) Coan and sister Sabra Coan lived with his family. Enon was close to Bath Township, Greene County, Ohio, and William Cox and his son John worshiped at that church. William Cox died in 1876 and left a bequest of property in Enon to be used as a parsonage for the Knob Prairie Church. It was through living in Enon that the Coxes and Coans met, and the two marriages took place.

CHARLES⁵ COAN (Asa⁴, William³, Jacob², Peter¹) was born May 30, 1840. He died October 23, 18__ (year not known but it was before 1875.) His wife's name and date of marriage are not known; but he left a son, William⁶ Coan,⁷ and probably other children. His grandniece, Mildred Eleanor⁴ (Coan) Wentworth (John L.⁶, Asa W.⁵, Asa⁴, William³, Jacob², Peter¹) wrote that Charles died young and "left more children than his wife could take care of, so Aunt Sabra took Willie." The Coxes lived in Bath Township, Greene County, Ohio.

Children (6) COAN

- ii. Possibly Charles, b. ca. 1861, in Ohio

WILLIAM⁶ COAN (Charles⁵, Asa⁴, William³, Jacob², Peter¹) was born November 3, 1871, in New Orleans, Louisiana, and was brought up by his aunt, Sabra A. (Coan) Cox, and her husband, John Cox, who was the son of William Cox and the stepson of Mary A. (Jones) Coan Cox, Sabra's mother. The Coxes also had another nephew, Charles, living with them in 1880, who may have been William's brother. Charles was born ca. 1861, in Ohio. It is possible that this was John Charles Jarvis, son of Mary A.⁵ (Coan) Jarvis Smith Curtis. It is known that this brother, Henry S. Jarvis, lived with the Cox family in the 1870s and John Charles, born November 15, 1862, may have lived with them also.

William spent the greater part of his life in the Middle West and the West. He was graduated from Palmer College, La Grand, Iowa, with an A.B. degree. Later he was granted an M.A. degree from Whitman College, Walla Walla, Washington. From Columbia University he received an M.A. degree in accounting. He taught for a time at Palmer College and at Whitman College.

Laura Detamore of Ohio was his wife. He served as an instructor in Lincoln, Nebraska, High School and in Montclair, New Jersey, High School. In 1921 he went to Washington and Lee University as an assistant professor in economics and commerce and became a full professor in accounting and economics in 1925. In November of 1938 he met his last classes.

William was a member of the American Economics Association, American Association of University Professors, American Accounting and American Statistical Associations, Alpha Kappa Psi, and Beta Tau Zeta.

On April 1, 1939, in Lexington, Virginia, William died. He was buried in Dayton, Ohio. He and Laura had no children.

COLLINS⁴ COAN AND DESCENDANTS

The following material on Collins⁴ Coan and his descendants was sent to Virginia Coan Wiles for inclusion in her Coan Family of America, Vol. II, by Barbara J. (Coan) Fischer, Detroit, Michigan.

COLLINS⁴ COAN (William³, Jacob², Peter¹) was born in 1806 (according to his tombstone), probably in Locke, Cayuga County, New York, the son of William and Roxana (Chadwick) Coan. He married Sara _____, who was born about 1806. Sara died in 1866; Collins, in 1887. They were both buried in the cemetery in Vienna, Elgin County, Ontario, Canada.

NOTE: In the Canadian Census of 1851, Collins⁴ Coan is listed as Collins C. Coan. In 1871 he was listed as as C. C. Cowan, but the other names make it certain that it should have been Coan. One of the names listed was his granddaughter Claudia, daughter of George. Since the man for whom the various Collins Coans were named was Claudius Lysias Collins, brother of Luranda (Collins) Coan, wife of Jacob² (Peter¹) Coan, it seems likely that William³ named his son Claudius Collins, the same as William's brother, Elisha³ Coan did. As noted elsewhere, it is possible that Collins⁴ Coan's brother, Jacob⁴ Coan, named a son Claudius Lysias Collins Coan but the initials were incorrectly copied as Y. L. C. (Theodore H. Smith)

BENJAMIN JOHNSON⁵ COAN (Collins⁴, William³, Jacob², Peter¹) was born in Elgin County, Ontario, Canada, November 6, 1833, the son of Collins and Sara Coan. On September 23, 1856, he married Lavina Ann Longstaff. Benjamin died in Canada August 18, 1917.

EDWARD ALLEN⁶ COAN (George⁵, Collins⁴, William³, Jacob², Peter¹) was born in Vienna, Elgin County, Ontario, Canada, January 8, 1870, the son of George and Amelia (Swanton) Coan. He was orphaned before the age of 20 and separated from his five sisters. In 1885 he moved to Edenville, Michigan, where his first job was working for a lumber company. Later he worked there as a clerk in a store. On August 15, 1894, he married Deletha Grace Carpenter, who was born in Brown City, Michigan, November 16, 1879. They moved to Beaverton, and Edward operated a general store.

In 1896 at the age of 26 he borrowed $7000 and went into the lumbering business. In less than one year he had paid the bank the borrowed $7000. In 1906 he moved to Gladwin where he operated several businesses--a hardware store, a jewelry shop, and a grocery store. During World War I he was president of a bank and lost everything as he had taken over thirteen farms and considerable other real estate. He had a large family to raise and never got back on his feet financially. In 1920 he bought a 650-acre ranch, but was unable to get enough help to run it; so he moved back to Gladwin. In 1932 he was elected county treasurer and served for fourteen years. The last of his life he lived with his children. He loved his family and constantly worried for fear that they would become separated as he had been separated from his sisters.

Edward was a small, wiry man with a springy gait that didn't slow down until he was past 80. He was seldom ill, and he loved a good cigar. His dry sense of humor made him popular as a toastmaster and after-dinner speaker. He was a life member of the Masonic lodge, the Odd Fellows, and the Methodist church. Deletha died September 18, 1944; Edward, May 11, 1958. They were both buried at Gladwin.

ELISHA³ COAN (Jacob², Peter¹) was born July 4, 1760, the son of Jacob and Luranda (Collins) Coan. During the Revolution he enlisted first August 16, 1777, and served in Captain Ezra Whittelsey's Company, Lieutenant Colonel David Rossiter's Detachment of Berkshire County Militia. He was discharged August 18, 1777, after three days at Bennington. At that time he lived in West Stockbridge, Massachusetts. His second military listing was dated Lenox, August 20, 1781, and he signed up from Windsor. He was in Captain Clark's Company, Colonel Simond's Regiment. He was 21 years old; 5 feet 4 inches tall; had a red complexion and light hair; was a laborer and enlisted for 6 months. As was customary then, Elisha "hired out" to the town of Windsor, and thus was registered as serving from there.

In August, 1785, he was named deacon in the First Congregational Church of Lenox. He was 25 years old and not married.

His final military service took place January 23 to March 1, 1787, when he signed up from Lenox and was a private in Captain William Walker's Company, Colonel John Ashley's Berkshire County Regiment of foot soldiers. This duty was "in defense of law and order and the Commonwealth of Massachusetts" against Daniel Shay's rebellion (Massachusetts Archives, 192: 169, 172), a war against taxes by the farmers of Massachusetts.

Almost immediately after this final military service, in June or July of that same year, Elisha married a widow, Phebe (Woodruff) Hull, daughter of Jonathan and Margaret Woodruff, who was seven years older than he and the mother of four children--Belinda, Jeremiah, Seth, and Joseph Hull. Phebe and Elisha had three children--Harriot, Cillina and Claudius, all born in West Stockbridge.

About 1798 Elisha had serious business problems and moved his family to Western New York to a tract of land about 14 miles from what is now the city of Rochester. It was located in what was then Bloomfield (later Victor), Ontario County, and was purchased by Phebe, probably with Hull money. Elisha went there first to get things ready. When Phebe arrived with the family, she was far from happy with what she found--among other things, a primitive log cabin to live in, wolves in the nearby woods, and Indians for neighbors.

In an account of Victor, New York, published many years ago Elisha Coan was said to have purchased land in Victor. "Mr. Coan built a sawmill near where the railroad crosses the creek northwest of his home. Here he did a small business in lumber..." In 1804 Elisha was among the subscribers to build a church building known as Proprietor's Church, non-denominational. In 1813 at the North Congregational Church in Bloomfield, Elisha paid $2.64 towards building or buying pews (Church Records, p. 69). And Elisha was also listed as a pew holder (Church Records, p. 72, 73). According to the ancient Victor account previously quoted, Elisha sold his property in Bloomfield to Samuel Talmadge and moved to Seneca County. If so, he probably went to live with his son Claudius.

Elisha died sometime between 1834 and 1838. Phebe lived to be over 90, resided for awhile with Claudius, but spent her last years with her daughter Belinda (Hull) Allen at Mendon, New York, near where she and Elisha first settled. Phebe applied for a pension for her first husband's service in the Revolution. Her application for some reason was refused. Of course, Elisha too served in the Revolution, but neither he nor Phebe ever applied for a pension.

CLAUDIUS COLLINS⁴ COAN (Elisha³, Jacob², Peter¹) son of Elisha and Phebe (Woodruff) Hull Coan, was born March 1, 1794, in West Stockbridge, Massachusetts. He was named for his maternal great-uncle Claudius Lysias Collins (1769-1852), a brother of his grandmother, Luranda (Collins) Coan. When Claudius was about four years old, the family moved to Western New York. He had a dim recollection of this move. He remembered going to say good-bye to his grandfather, Jacob Coan, and of the long journey to the West. Somewhere along the way he remembered his father coming to meet them, since he'd gone on ahead to prepare things for the family. When they arrived at the desolate log house which was to be their home, he remembered his mother's tears and that memory stayed with him for life. They had brought with them two cows and several sheep. The second night the sheep were killed by wolves. Not long afterwards the cows died. The journey had been too much for them.

Claudius attended some sort of school and was upset because he didn't have a Bible to read from the way some of the other children did. His half-brother Joseph Hull chopped wood in order to earn money to buy the Bible for Claudius.

As a boy he was apprenticed in medicine to Dr. Samuel Dungan of Canandaigua, New York, and received his schooling and board by working in the Doctor's apothecary shop. He went back home for awhile, and his brother Joseph who was fighting in the War of 1812 came home sick or wounded. At any rate, Joseph was unable to return to his Company, and Claudius took his place. He served for three months and was stationed at Niagara Falls. At this time he was probably not more than nineteen.

He then returned to the Doctor's to continue his apprenticeship in medicine, attended Canandaigua Academy, and taught school in an effort to save money. He planned to attend lectures in Philadelphia on medicine. In 1815 he went to Philadelphia for the first time--walking most of the way. He walked this distance twice while he studied there. Here he was taught by Caspar Wistar, M.D. (1761-1818) at the Medical College, and he knew the great Dr. Rush. He was unable to take his final degree because he lacked the money to continue.

In 1816 at Lodi, New York, Claudius began the practice of medicine. On July 20, 1817, at Romulus, New York, he married Sara Maria Folwell, born February 1, 1798, Southampton, Pennsylvania, daughter of William Watts and Jane (Dungan) Folwell. She was four years younger than he, and had also attended Canandaigua Academy. She was a niece of Claudius's patron, Dr. Dungan; and he met her in the Doctor's home where she was a close friend of the Doctor's only child by his first wife--Patty. Sara was stated to have seen General Washington when her mother visited, with her as a baby, the Wistars in Philadelphia.

Sara and Claudius's first home was a rented place in Townsenville, where the Doctor began his practice. Later he bought a farm where Jennie, Mattie, and Helen were born. This place with its log store, shoe store, and wagon shop took on the name of Coan Corners. The farm did not move, but the town lines did; so Mattie was born in Covert, and Jennie and Helen in Lodi. In 1835 the family moved to Ovid because Ovid Academy was there; and about 1849 they moved to the Hermitage, two miles south of Ovid. This crossroads also became known as Coan's Corners.

Before their marriage Claudius and Sara were interested in amateur theatricals and performed in them. This interest occurred before Sara's conversion to a very strict religious sect. Although she was immersed in Seneca Lake and joined the Baptist Church, her husband and children then were attending the Presbyterian Church in Ovid where Dr. Lounsbury was minister. At the end of his life Claudius was very deaf. He still went to church regularly although he couldn't hear a word. Later Sara became a member of the Christian Church in Romulus and grew deeply religious. She was interested in history, world events, and was always very patriotic.

Claudius had a good memory and a keen observation which was coupled with hard common sense. He was a Democrat and an admirer of General Jackson, the reason he called his house, The Hermitage. He also had great respect for Horatio Seymour, a leading Democrat elected Governor in 1852. The parrot one of his daughters sent him was trained to say: "Hurrah for Seymour, and hurrah for Dr. Coan!" Claudius was successful as a financier, influential as a citizen, and a pioneer in temperance work.

David, aged nineteen, born in N.Y." (Vol. 94:142)

Pension Application: When Claudius was 77 years old, he applied for a pension for service in the War 1812-1814. He said he served "a full sixty days" in Captain Morehouses's Company, in Regiment commanded by Col. Peter Allen of New York State Militia; that he was a substitute for Joseph Hull and joined July 1, 1812; was honorably discharged about September 20, 1812.

He did not receive the pension.

Claudius continued the uninterrupted practice of medicine for 65 years until his last illness. He and Sara died at the Hermitage just one day apart. He died February 28, 1882, aged 88; she died March 1, 1882, aged 84. Claudius left a lengthy and detailed will and an estate valued at $125,000. Their joint funeral took place in the Presbyterian Church in Ovid, an Episcopal service being read over their common grace.

ELIZABETH⁵ COAN (Claudius C.⁴, Elisha³, Jacob², Peter¹) was born in Covert, Seneca County, New York, April 26, 1818, the daughter of Claudius Collins and Sara Maria (Folwell) Coan. August 16, 1842, at Ovid, New York, she married Alfred Bolter, who was born in Northampton, Massachusetts, July 4, 1811, the son of William and Nancy (Pomeroy) Bolter. He spent his early life in Northampton, and in 1826 moved to Utica, New York, where he was influenced by Dr. Finney, the evangelist, and joined the Presbyterian church. In 1830 he entered Ovid Academy in Ovid, and studied there about three years. He taught school several years, but was in poor health. He then began to study medicine under Elizabeth's father, Dr. Coan. In 1939 he obtained his medical degree from Geneva Medical College, and began practicing in Ovid Village where he lived the rest of his life.

Alfred was an advocate of temperance reform and an opponent of slavery. He was an active member of the Free Soil Movement; he took part in political conventions and addressed public meetings. In 1850 he served one term in the State Legislature and became an active member of the Republican party. He was for many years a member of the Board of Ovid Academy, was president of the Board of Trustees of Ovid Village in 1875, and for more than 20 years was superintendent of the Sabbath School of the Ovid Presbyterian Church.

In 1860 he was thrown from his carriage and broke his leg. He suffered greatly with this injury and was confined for over a year. His leg was shortened, and he was permanently lame. During the Civil War he served in the Transport Service on the James River in the employ of the Sanitary Commission and witnessed the engagement between the Merrimack and the Monitor. He died July 12, 1880, at age 69 in Ovid. Elizabeth died April 27, 1894, in Auburn, New York. She and Alfred were buried in Ovid.

SARA MARIA BOLTER, daughter of Dr. Alfred and Elizabeth (Coan) Bolter, was born May 22, 1844. On June 14, 1865, in Ovid, New York, she married Willis Judson Beecher, who was born in Hampton, Ohio, April 29, 1838. He received his preparatory education at Augusta Academy and Vernon Academy, Oneida County, New York; and was graduated from Hamilton College valedictorian, with an A.B. degree, in 1858. He taught at Whitestown Seminary for a short time and then entered Auburn Theological Seminary where he was graduated in 1864 and ordained to the Presbyterian ministry. In 1864-1865 he was pastor of the Presbyterian Church in Ovid, New York. During 1865-1869 he was professor of moral science and belles lettres at Knox College, Galesburg, Illinois. From 1869 until 1871 he was pastor of the First Church of Christ (Congregational) at Galesburg. In 1871 he was called to the chair of Hebrew language and literature in Auburn Theological Seminary and occupied that position for 37 years. He was a prolific writer, and his work was published in many newspapers, magazines, society journals, encyclopedias, and other books of reference.

Willis was awarded the honorary degree of D.D. by Hamilton College in 1875 and by Princeton University in 1896. He was president of the Society of Biblical Literature and Exegesis in 1904; member of the American Oriental Society, American Institute of Sacred Literature, American Bible League, and of the general assembly's committee on the revision of the Confession in 1890-1892. In the latter year he delivered the Stone lectures at Princeton University, and in 1909 was moderator of the synod of New York.

Sara died December 4, 1892, aged 48, at Auburn, New York. Willis died there May 10, 1912.

ELIZABETH BEECHER⁷, daughter of Sara Maria (Bolter) and Willis Judson Beecher, was born March 27, 1871. She received a degree from Wellesley, Class of 1893. She died April 11, 1935.

The following quotation is from "In Memoriam," The Wellesley Magazine, Vol. XIX, No. 5 (June 1935): 432-433: "Elizabeth never left her girlhood home to which she was greatly attached, she was always a great lover of the classics, expressed in reading and in club work, and also had a keen interest in civic affairs, and in the out-of-doors, especially her garden in summer and many plants within her home during the long winter months. Her letters always indicated a strong interest in the outer world, and in Wellesley past and present..."

Winifred Holman in Coan Lineage stated Elizabeth married _____ Armstrong. There is, however, in the Wellesley College files no record of such a marriage.

WILLIAM ALFRED BOLTER⁶, son of Dr. Alfred and Elizabeth (Coan) Bolter, was born June 18, 1846. He was married three times. Probably because of these three marriages he was named and specifically excluded from receiving any inheritance in his grandfather Claudius Coan's will. In 1898 he was residing in Holt, Michigan.

WILLIAM FOLWELL⁵ COAN (Claudius C.⁴, Elisha³, Jacob², Peter¹), son of Claudius Collins and Sara Maria (Folwell) Coan, was born in Lodi, Seneca County, New York, March 1, 1820. He was educated at Ovid Academy and was married August 16, 1842, in Trumansburgh, New York, to Catharine Louisa Peck. The Reverend Dr. Hutchins Taylor performed the ceremony. Catharine was born in New Milford, Connecticut, December 17, 1822, the daughter of Bennett and Miranda (Stone) Peck. When she was nine years old, she made her home with her uncle Albert G. Stone in Trumansburgh, New York, where she attended a private school. When she entered Ithaca Academy, she lived the first year with the family of Judge Walbridge, and the second year with Fred Camp, her mother's cousin. Later she was a student at Pompey Hill Academy in Pompey, New York.

She was married at her uncle's home in Trumansburgh on the same day that her bridegroom's sister Elizabeth Coan became the wife of Dr. Alfred Bolter at Ovid, New York. After William and Catharine were married, they, along with Martha Dungan Coan as bridesmaid and William B. Leonard as best man, drove fifteen miles to Ovid and attended Elizabeth's wedding which was performed by the Reverend Dr. Lounsbury. Then the two bridal couples went to Niagara Falls together for their wedding trip.

At the time of his marriage William was in business in Ovid; but as he was not well, they soon went to live on the old home farm near Townsenville, New York. Life was very difficult on the farm for Catharine, but here their three daughters and a son Claudius were born. The children were taught mainly by their mother and their maternal grandmother, Mrs. Peck

In June, 1852, William was seriously injured in a horse and buggy accident as he came home from church. His leg was shattered as he saved his two daughters from injury. In 1856 he sold the farm and went out to Clinton, Iowa. While he was there, the family lived temporarily in Townsenville. He bought a house in Clinton and came back East for his family and Mrs. Peck. They all arrived in Clinton May 19, 1857 via Fulton, Illinois, crossing the Mississippi in a ferry boat. In 1860 William Folwell, Jr., was born in Clinton.

In 1858 William, Sr., became a private banker in Clinton; and when the National Bank (first bank in Clinton, opened in 1857) was for sale by its owners in 1863, William bought them out. He merged his bank with the Clinton National, and moved it to a new location at the corner of Fifth Avenue and First Street. It was reorganized in 1865 with some of the strongest capitalists of the city as incorporators, and he became its president.

William and Catharine joined the Presbyterian Church in Clinton by letter soon after their arrival. He served as trustee until his death; he was superintendent of the Sunday School for many years. He did a great deal to promote the interests of Clinton and the community. He was instrumental in the building of the Midland, Burlington, and Cedar Rapids & Northern railroads. He also worked to establish the water works, the library, and the public school.

In 1885 although William was in poor health, he and Catharine took a trip East. On their way back they called on their cousins, Dr. and Mrs. Bainbridge Folwell of Buffalo; and on William's sister Phoebe Jane now married to Dr. Schuyler and living in Marshall, Michigan. William died of apoplexy January 18, 1886, aged 65. The Reverend Joseph D. Burrill officiated at the funeral. According to his obituary in The Clinton Herald January 23, 1888, his funeral cortege consisted of fifteen carriages and forty-six sleighs. Catharine outlived her husband by over twenty years; she died in Clinton March 9, 1907, aged 84. They were both buried in Clinton in Springdale Cemetery where William was the first purchaser of a lot in the original plot of that cemetery. The following is from The Biographical Record of Clinton County, Iowa, p. 506:

The most pleasant legacy to William's children was his honored name, and the love and esteem which all classes of society gave him, more especially the poor and less fortunate ones, who were sincere mourners at his death. He gave to them not only the best of advice in their difficulties, but assisted them financially, tiding them over hard places and starting them in their business careers; and many attribute their success to his timely assistance.

FRANCES LOUISA⁶ COAN (William F.⁵, Claudius C.⁴, Elisha³, Jacob², Peter¹), daughter of William Folwell and Catharine Louisa (Peck) Coan, was born November 19, 1843, in Townsendville, New York. She attended Lyons Female Seminary and was a member of the Colonial Dames. In Clinton, Iowa, June 28, 1865, she married Walter Ingalls Hayes. He was born in Marshall, Michigan, December 9, 1841, the son of Dr. Andrew L. and Clarissa Seldon (Hart) Hayes.

Walter was educated in the Marshall public schools, and at nineteen years of age he entered the law office of Hughes and Woolley to commence reading the law. He was graduated from the University of Michigan School of Law in 1863 and admitted to the Michigan Bar that same year. The following year he became a member of the firm of his former teachers, Hughes, Woolley & Hayes. He was United States Commissioner for the Eastern District of Michigan from 1864-1866, and city attorney for Marshall in 1865.

In 1866 he was offered a partnership with General N. B. Baker, Attorney General of Iowa, and moved to Clinton, Iowa, where he was with the firm, Baker & Hayes. This partnership continued until General Baker moved to Des Moines; Walter was without a partner until 1872 when the firm became Hayes & Young. In 1875 Hayes, although a Democrat, was appointed by Governor Carpenter to complete the unexpired term of District Judge Brennan. In October of that year Hayes was elected to the same position without opposition. One of his most famous decisions was made in 1882 when he declared Iowa's prohibition amendment unconstitutional because the legislature had passed two slightly different forms.

He was city attorney in Clinton in 1869; city solicitor in 1870, 1871, and 1875. He also was a stockholder and a director of the Clinton National Bank. He served in the 50th, 51st, 52nd, and 53rd Congress; he was elected first in 1886, and in 1888 and 1892 was the only Iowa Democrat in Congress.

While attending the funeral of his uncle in Marshall, Michigan, Walter died unexpectedly March 14, 1901. He was buried in Clinton.

STELLA CAROLINE⁶ COAN (William F.⁵, Claudius C.⁴, Elisha³, Jacob², Peter¹), daughter of William Folwell and Catharine Louisa (Peck) Coan, was born September 23, 1847, in Lodi, near Townsendville, New York. She spent several years at Lyons Female Seminary studying music. She married Amos Greer Ewing December 21, 1871, in Clinton, Iowa. He was born February 11, 1838, in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania; attended school there; and was graduated from Jefferson College in Cannonsburg, Pennsylvania, in 1860. He came to Clinton in 1865 and engaged in the mercantile business with the firm Ewing and Young. He later was associated with the firm W. J. Young & Company as superintendent of their lumber yards. He was a member of the City Council.

HELEN CLAUDINE⁶ COAN (William F.⁵, Claudius C.⁴, Elisha³, Jacob², Peter¹), daughter of William Folwell and Catharine Louisa (Peck) Coan, was born December 5, 1851, in Lodi, near Townsenville, New York. She attended Lyons Female Saminary and Knox Seminary in Galesburg, Illinois. She married in Clinton October 15, 1879, Dr. A. Homer Smith. The Reverend J. G. Cowden performed the ceremony. Dr. Smith was born March 20, 1850, at Rockford, Illinois. He was educated at Wheaton College in Illinois and at Rush Medical College. He died January 9, 1890, at Clinton.

CLAUDIUS COLLINS⁶ COAN (William F.⁵, Claudius C.⁴, Elisha³, Jacob², Peter¹) was born at Lodi, Seneca County, New York, September 8, 1855, the son of William Folwell and Catharine Louise (Peck) Coan. He was educated in Lyons, Iowa, and at Cornell University where he was a member of Chi Phi fraternity. October 12, 1887, in Rome, New York, he married Edith Ernestine Nock, who was born August 17, 1861, the daughter of Thomas Gill and Caroline (Prouty) Nock. The Reverend Dr. Taylor performed the wedding ceremony. Edith was educated in Albany, New York.

Claudius, like his father, was civic minded. He was interested in developing a street railway system for Clinton. He was secretary of the early Electric Railway Park Company in 1894, and later treasurer of the Clinton Street Railway Company (CSRyCo), which absorbed some of the smaller lines. In 1914 CSRyCo expanded and purchased seven new and larger cars. These were "pay as you enter" type, the first of their kind.

With his brother William, Claudius promoted advances in education. It was their land, donated to the school board before World War I, upon which Clinton High School was built; and Coan Field, the athletic grounds, was part of the same gift.

At the death of his father, Claudius became cashier of the Clinton National Bank. In 1895, several years later, he became the bank's president. He was also president of the Clinton Savings Bank, a member of the Wapaipinicon Club, Clinton Country Club, Chicago Athletic Association, and of Clinton Masonic bodies. He also was active for many years in the Cornell Alumni Association of Chicago.

His wife Edith died in Clinton February 12, 1920. Claudius died suddenly February 3, 1923.

The following is from an account of his funeral in The Clinton Herald of February 5, 1923: "In deference to the memory of the deceased and as a tribute, all traffic on the lines of the Clinton Street Railway Company ceased at 2 o'clock, and street cars remained stationary for one minute."

Claudius and Edith were both buried in Springdale Cemetery in Clinton.

WILLIAM FOLWELL⁶ COAN, JR. (William F.⁵, Claudius C.⁴, Elisha³, Jacob², Peter¹), son of William Folwell and Catharine Louisa (Peck) Coan, was born April 4, 1860, in Clinton, Iowa. He was educated in the public and private schools of Clinton and attended Lake Forest Academy, Lake Forest, Illinois, for two years. On December 11, 1882, in the Presbyterian Church in Clinton he married Mary Alice Welles. The Reverend Dr. Weller performed the ceremony.

Mary Alice Welles was born May 27, 1860, in Fulton, Illinois, daughter of Edwin Pillsbury and Isabelle (Griswold) Welles. She was a lineal descendant of Governor Thomas Welles of Connecticut. She received her education at Abbot Academy, Andover, Massachusetts.

William was cashier of the Clinton National Bank and secretary and treasurer of the Clinton Savings Bank. He was very much involved with the affairs of the city and community. He was on the Board of Directors of the Chamber of Commerce, a trustee of Agatha Hospital, a trustee of the Presbyterian Church, president of the Wapaipinicon Club. However, he was best known and widely recognized for his efforts in highway development. He received a silver medal, one of only six awarded the first year, for service to the Lincoln Highway project. Carl Fisher, the man who perfected the means of compressing carbide gas in tanks (Prest-O-Lite) and suggested the Indianapolis Speedway, proposed a coast-to-coast rock highway. Consuls were selected for each state to take care of local rights and work out local problems. William was the first consul for Iowa. He was known all over the country for what he did to promote this highway. He also proposed the Mississippi Scenic Highway. A little west of Clinton at the Junction of U. S. 67, the Mississippi, and U. S. 30, the Lincoln, there is a stone marker honoring him for his exceptional contribution in making those two great roads possible.

In History of Clinton County, Iowa by the Clinton Historical Society in 1976 there is an article entitled "High Society" from which I quote:

By 1880 elegance had become a reality for such affluent families as the Lambs, the Youngs, Eastmans, Curtises, Coans, and Joyces....The Encyclopedia Britannica, speaking of this era, states that there were more millionaires in a certain city block in the city of Clinton, Iowa, than in any other place in the world.

William died suddenly in Clinton February 13, 1918, aged 57; his wife died in Morrison, Illinois, December 5, 1939, aged 79. They were both buried in Springdale Cemetery in Clinton.

EDWIN WELLES⁷ COAN (William F., Jr.⁶, William F.⁵, Claudius C.⁴, Elisha³, Jacob², Peter¹) was born in Clinton, Iowa, May 25, 1885, the son of William Folwell, Jr., and Mary Alice (Welles) Coan. He was not interested in the professions, but in business. Encouraged by his grandfather, E. P. Welles, he started to learn lumbering from the ground up. The December before his twenty-first birthday in May he was stricken with tuberculosis. Hoping the climate would be beneficial, he and his mother had been in Colorado Springs, Colorado, about five weeks when a severe hemorrhage caused his death. His brother Folwell and his sisters, Isabelle and Catharine, had just arrived that day to spend the summer. He died in the evening of June 23, 1906. His funeral and burial were in Clinton, Iowa.

ISABELLE WELLES⁷ COAN (William F., Jr.⁶, William F.⁵, Claudius C.⁴, Elisha³, Jacob², Peter¹) was born in Clinton, Iowa, November 7, 1888, daughter of William Folwell, Jr., and Mary Alice (Welles) Coan. She attended the Wells School and was graduated from Wells College in the Class of 1910. While at Wells she was Inter-Collegiate Conference Delegate, captain of the basketball team, and active in the glee club and in dramatics. In the senior play, Shakespeare's A Winter's Tale, she played the leading role of Queen Hermione.

On June 21, 1916, in Clinton she married the Reverend Humphrey Jones Rendall, who was born in Oxford, Pennsylvania, August 31, 1882, the son of John and Harriet (Jones) Rendall. Dr. John Rendall was President of Lincoln University in Oxford, Pennsylvania. Humphrey was educated at Oxford Academy, at Lincoln University, and entered Princeton University as a junior in 1901. The following comprehensive summary of his life was taken from A Twenty-five Year Record, Yale University, Class of 1919, as quoted in Winifred L. Holman's Coan Lineage.

FOLWELL WELLES COAN, November 13, 1894 - April 24, 1946.

Benny was born in Clinton, Iowa, and lived there until he moved to Minneapolis to enter business at the end of the First World War. He was prepared for Yale at Hotchkiss. He was a member of Psi Upsilon. Benny left college in the spring of his sophomore year to enter the first Officers' Training Camp at Fort Snelling where he was assigned to the 337th Field Artillery on receiving his commission. He served with this outfit throughout World War I except for intervals of training at the Army School of Fire at Fort Sill and at Machine Gun School in France. He returned from France as a 1st Lieutenant and was discharged from the Army in January, 1919.

At that time he went to work for Shevlin, Carpenter & Clarke Co. of Minneapolis, a lumber management concern. Benny became Executive Vice President of their sales division, or Shevlin Pine Sales Co., with particular interest in the West Coast operations of the business. He was for many years Vice President of The Central Lumber Co. which operates retail lumber yards throughout the Middle West, and he was also a Director of the Monarch Lumber Co. and of the McCloud River Railroad Co. of California.

In February, 1942, Benny returned to the Army, receiving a commission as Captain in the Air Corps; he was soon promoted to Major, and assigned to carry out the Army Air Force Officer Procurement Program in the Seven West Coast States. This was completed in September, 1942, and was followed by several interesting and varied missions. For a year and a half he was with the Fourth Air Force and commanded the Headquarters Statistical Control Unit. He carried out two assignments for the War Department, one of which took him to China for five months in 1944. On his return he was Army Air Forces Hospital Liaison Officer at Halloran General Hospital in New York from February to September of 1945. He was separated from the army in September, 1945, and was awarded the Army Commendation Ribbon. He returned to take the presidency of the Central Lumber Co. and, at the time of his death, was locating lumber stocks for that Company on the West Coast. He died suddenly of a heart attack at Medford, Oregon, on April 24, 1946.

In 1922 Benny married Olivia Lamb Carpenter of Minneapolis; they had three children: a son, Eugene C. Coan, and two daughters, Olivia and Patricia. Benny took an active part in civic affairs and was, at the time of his death, Director of the Minneapolis Institute of Fine Arts, the Minneapolis Orchestral Association, and the Woodhill Country Club. He was a Past President of the Board of Trustees of the Northrup Collegiate School. He was loved and respected wherever he went for his integrity and courage, his quiet good judgment, humor, courtesy, and friendliness.

Mrs. Coan was the daughter of Eugene Joseph and Merrette (Lamb) Carpenter and was born in Minneapolis August 21, 1897. She attended Westover in Middlebury, Connecticut, Class of 1915, and was a student of Smith, Ex-1919. She married Folwell May 20, 1922, in Minneapolis. She and her daughters were members of the National Society of Colonial Dames in the State of Minnesota, as was her mother. They all entered on a New York ancestor, Dr. Johannes de la Montagne. It was she who in 1961 employed Winifred L. Holman to do research on the Coan family. This research resulted in the typescript, The Coan Lineage. Later Mrs. Holman wrote Coan Addenda for Martha Jeanne Coan and Theodore H. Smith, with considerable help from them. Both these manuscripts were in the library of the New England Historic Genealogical Society in Boston.

She attended Ovid Academy where she met her future husband, John Livingston Nevius, born at Ovid, New York, March 4, 1829, son of Benjamin Hageman and Mary (Denton) Nevius. John was a seventh generation descendant of Johannes Nevius who became "schepen" of New Amsterdam in 1654. After receiving his degree from Union College in 1848, John taught school for a year in Georgia where he experienced his conversion. Returning north, he entered Princeton Theological Seminary; and by the time of his graduation in 1853 he had received appointment from the Presbyterian Board as a missionary to China. He was ordained by the Presbytery of New Brunswick, New Jersey, on May 23; on June 15 in Ovid, New York, Helen and he were married. In September they sailed for China from Boston on the Bombay by way of the Cape of Good Hope. The Bombay was an East India trader of 800 tons capacity; and the six-month trip was filled with discomfort, storm, and danger. Helen and John's cabin was only 3 1/2 feet by 6 feet with one narrow berth. John slept on the floor on a mattress.

They were assigned to Ningpo where the climate was notoriously difficult. They stayed here about four years. Helen, besides her work among the women and girls, made two very valuable contributions to the missionary effort: first, the catechism she wrote which was used all over the Empire; and second, teaching the children to sing. She herself had a beautiful singing voice. Helen's health failed, and her lovely voice was reduced to a mere whisper. In 1857 she returned to the United States.

Besides being pastor of a church in Ningpo, John started evangelistic work in San-Poh, an inland district to the north. By 1859 Helen was back in China, and she and John were pioneers in a mission station in Hang-chow. Because of political unrest they left and went to Japan for several months. Upon their return they went north and established a mission station in Shantung province.

Here at Shantung John and Helen toiled for more than thirty years. John did a great deal of writing both in English and Chinese. Of lasting benefit to China were John's experiments in raising Western fruits and vegetables in China. His evangelistic work was recognized in 1890 when he was appointed American Chairman of the Second Missionary Conference in Shanghai. In America the "Nevius method" became part of the training of missionary candidates. On October 19, 1893, John's life ended peacefully at his desk in San-lou, the house which he himself had erected on a hill overlooking the Chinese city of Chefoo.

Helen stayed on; and in 1895 her book, The Life of John Livingston Nevius, was published. She had been not only an aide to her husband in his missionary work, but she like him was a scholar too. She learned the Chinese language and in 1856 published the book, A Catechism of Christian Doctrine, in Chinese. She also wrote Our Life in China in 1857.

June 20, 1910, seventeen years after her husband's death, Helen died in Chefoo. Those seventeen years even though she was in poor health, she continued her missionary endeavors. Of her it can be truly said: "She spent her life for the Chinese."

SARA ELVIRA⁵ COAN (Claudius C.⁴, Elisha³, Jacob², Peter¹) was born in Ovid, New York, May 7, 1837, daughter of Claudius Collins and Sara Maria (Folwell) Coan. She married

Henry Tuthill October 20, 1860, at the Hermitage in Ovid.
Sara died May 12, 1868, aged 31, at Watkins, New York.
Henry died in Penn Yan, New York.

MARY EUPHEMIA⁵ COAN (Claudius C.⁴, Elisha³, Jacob², Peter¹) was born in Ovid, New York, September 6, 1839, daughter of Claudius Collins and Sara Maria (Folwell) Coan. She lived with her parents until their deaths and then made her home with her sister Elizabeth in Auburn, New York, finally going to live with her relatives, the Beechers. She died in 1914 and was buried in her father's cemetery lot in Ovid.

PHEBE³ COAN (Jacob², Peter¹) was born probably in North Guilford, Connecticut, April 16, 1770, and was baptized in the Second Congregational Church there April 29, 1770. She was the daughter of Jacob and Luranda (Collins) Coan. She moved with her parents in 1771 to the Stockbridge-Lenox, Massachusetts, area and shortly after April, 1794, to Montgomery County, New York. About 1795 she married Caleb Johnson of Johnstown, New York, part then of Montgomery County, now Fulton County. Caleb was one of the original trustees when Johnstown Village was incorporated April 1, 1808. On March 21, 1809, he was authorized to make a seal for the village with the device JVCS. He was probably a silversmith, and no doubt taught his trade to his son George, who was a silversmith, and to Charles Coan, son of Phebe's brother William, who also was a silversmith.

Caleb was appointed an ensign in Lieutenant Colonel Richard Dodge's Regiment, Captain Bildad Mills's Company of Light Infantry in 1807. In 1811 he was appointed a lieutenant and in 1816 a captain in Lt. Colonel Abraham J. Vosburgh's Regiment of Light Infantry. He probably served in the War of 1812, but he did not live long enough to apply for a pension, so his service is difficult to check. He died February 4, 1818, at the age of 44. Phebe was made administratrix of his estate. The inventory showed hardware, gold and silver work, and military goods valued at $1,675 and tools belonging to the shop valued at $235. The inventory of Caleb Johnson's estate was taken by "Phebe Johnson, administratrix with the assistance of Ashbel Cornwell and Charles Coan being the two next of kin."

Phebe died November 28, 1849; and both she and Caleb were buried in Colonial Cemetery, Johnstown, New York.

In 1813 he was graduated from Union College; in 1820, from Princeton Theological Seminary. In 1821 he was ordained pastor of the Old South Church in Boston, Massachusetts. In 1828 he was elected a member of the prudential committee of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions; and in 1832 one of its three corresponding secretaries. The degree of D.D. was conferred upon him by Union College in 1828. His publications include History of the Old South Church in 1830. COMMENT ON AUGUSTUS³ COAN
by
RUTH COAN FULTON

Augustus Coan, who settled in Taylor, Michigan, in the 1820s, has for many years been considered by the Michigan Coans and others to be the son of Jacob Coan, Peter's eldest son. I personally feel that he probably was Jacob's son. However, I must present evidence to the contrary which I very recently found.

In the 1880 Federal Census of Michigan, Wayne County, Taylor Township, Augustus's three sons--Peter D., Elisha W., and Marlin H. H.--were listed with their families. In answer to the census question, "Where was your mother born?", Peter D. said, "New York"; Elisha W. and Marlin H. H. both said, "Massachusetts." From these answers it would appear that Augustus was married twice.

In answer to the question, "Where was your father born?", Peter D. said, "Germany"; Elisha W. said, "Swiholm," and Marlin H. H. said, "Swisholin." The writing in the census record was not too clear, but the two spellings were what the answers looked like to me. Where were Swiholm and Swisholin? There were no such places in any of the many atlases I consulted, both old and new. Swiholm and Swisholin, of course, must be one and the same area and could be a place in Germany. If Augustus of Taylor, Michigan, was born in Germany, he could not be the son of Jacob².

According to a record George M.⁷ Coan of Taylor found in the City Hall there, Augustus died in Taylor Township October 2, 1849. This record agreed with the date on Augustus's tombstone, which Peter Gaylord⁷ Coan of Grosse Ile, Michigan, photographed in Golden Ridge Cemetery, Taylor, in November, 1982. (See photo in this chapter.) According to the gravestone, Augustus was 75 years old when he died.

Augustus, Peter, Elisha, and Marlin all died in Taylor, so I tried to get their death certificates. The only one I was able to obtain was for Peter D. I quote the following from this certificate:

Name of Father	Augustus
Residence of Father	Germany
Name of Mother	Hilda
Residence of Mother	Germany

The word Residence, I judge, must be interpreted Birthplace. His mother's birthplace obviously did not agree with his mother's birthplace in the census record.

In the light of the evidence presented in these two records, is it possible that Augustus of Taylor might still be Augustus, son of Jacob²? Some whom I consulted said Peter's death certificate made Augustus of Taylor almost certainly from an entirely different line. I, however, am not convinced he was not Jacob²'s son for the following reasons:

1. Augustus of Taylor was probably born in 1774, according to his gravestone. In Jacob²'s Bible record, his son Augustus³ was born October 1, 1775. Jacob could have been off a year as he apparently was in the birthdate of his youngest child Fanny (Hannah) who, he said, was born September 18, 1781. According to Theodore H. Smith⁷, the records of the Congregational Church of Lenox, Massachusetts, say that Fanny was baptized April 29, 1781.
The tombstone "75 years" could have been off by a year also; but these dates were so close, they indicate to me that Augustus of Taylor and Augustus³, son of Jacob², were one and the same.
2. The name Coan, as has already been discussed, was not a German name. How come then that Augustus of Taylor arrived from Germany with the name Coan? If he arrived with some similar name, why did he happen to change that name to Coan?
3. Why would all three sons indicate a German birthplace for their father if he really was born in America? Possibly they did not know where he was born, but said they had heard that the family originally came from Germany. The census taker then put down Germany or Swiholm, or Swisholin, names given him as point of origin for the Coan family by Peter, Elisha, and Marlin. Whoever filled out Peter's death certificate, one of his children probably, recorded what he, or she, had heard, and got the place of birth of Hilda wrong even at that.
4. Coan was not a common name; and Augustus Coan was far from common. It would have been a real coinci-wife? In order to try to identify this Agnes A. further, Peter Gaylord⁷ Coan of Grosse Ile, Michigan, went to the Golden Ridge Cemetery and dug down to the bottom of the broken slab, cleaned it, and was able to decipher one more word --Stewart or Steward. (See photo in this chapter.) This discovery would seem to negate the possibility that Agnes A. was the second wife of Augustus. She was probably a relative of Marlin Hiram Hazzard Coan's wife, Rachel Rebecca Steward.

Sometime before 1810, Augustus began to move west. In the 1810 Federal Census for Pennsylvania, Erie County, no town or township given, an Augustus Coan was listed as head of the family with 3 males under 10, 1 male 26 and under 45, 1 female under 10, 1 female 16 to 26, 1 female 26 to 45. By 1816 Augustus was in Ohio, since his son Elisha was born in Ohio in 1816. Augustus moved again--maybe to Canada--and then to Taylor Township, Michigan, where his son Marlin Hiram Hazzard was born in 1824. According to "Church News," The Mellus Newspaper, Taylor, Michigan, February 24, 1982, p. 5-C, Augustus "was the first settler in what is now the city of Taylor." However, the following was taken from a newspaper clipping (no source given) in the collection of Mrs. Norman A. Coan:

The honor of being the first settler is given by N. B. Steward, in his history of Wayne County, to the brothers Peter and Edmund Coan. Peter bought 80 acres from the government in 1830, and built a house February, 1832. Soon his father Augustus came here. A veteran of the War of 1812, his life would make an interesting chapter.

The first account seems more likely since Augustus's son Marlin was born in Taylor Township in 1824; therefore, Augustus had settled in Taylor by then, and was indeed Taylor's first settler. In 1835 Augustus purchased 100 acres in Taylor Township; so although he may have lived there from 1824 on, he did not actually own property until much later. Eventually his three sons owned 640 acres.

Augustus's land was on Territorial Road, an important link between Flat Rock and Dearbornville, the site of the federal arsenal. In 1960 Mrs. Nellie (Coan) Cooper, a great granddaughter of Augustus was living on the original property owned by the Coans for nearly 125 years. The Michigan Historical Commission of the Detroit Edison Company with a large marker designated the tract a "centennial farm." Mrs. Cooper's address was 15250 Pardee Road. The original Coan homestead, a log cabin, was built on the site of Mrs. Cooper's present home. It was later replaced by a farmhouse which was destroyed by fire in the early 1900s. The present house was built a short time later (Newspaper clipping [no source given] in collection of George M. Coan, Taylor, Michigan).

As for Augustus's being in the War of 1812, that bit of factual data was probably not true. Theodore H. Smith⁷ had the National Archives search for War of 1812 service, pension, and bounty land warrant for Augustus; and they found nothing.

Augustus died October 2, 1849, in Taylor Township, Michigan, and was buried there in Golden Ridge Cemetery.

November 7, 1945, in Los Angeles, California, he married Edith Bosley, who was born in Ohio November 22, 1914, the daughter of John and Alta Bosley. George worked for Pennwalt Chemical Company for many years; and after his retirement he worked part time as manager-treasurer of the Credit Union in Taylor. Both George and Edith were very active in the West Mound Methodist Church, the church of his parents and grandparents.

In 1982 they were living on property that was part of the original acreage purchased by Peter D. Coan in 1830. The original home was destroyed about 1968, and a shopping center built on the property. In 1960 the Michigan Historical Commission of the Detroit Edison Company erected a marker designating this property a centennial farm owned by the same family for over 100 years. George also held a certificate from the Michigan Genealogical Council awarded to him as a descendant of Peter D. Coan who settled in Michigan in 1876 or before.

He died a young man, and Sybil married second William Sanford. Their marriage was the first one to be performed in Telreka. They were married by Elias Patte, a minister in the Methodist Episcopal church.

JOSIAH³ COAN (John², Peter¹), was born November 20, 1760, in North Guilford, Connecticut, the son of John and Mabel (Chittenden) Coan. He married May 17[18], 1786, Catherine, known as Carine, Graves who was born November 9, 1764, the daughter of Abraham and Catherine (Hall) Graves of Wallingford, Connecticut. Josiah and Carine lived at North Madison. Steiner in his book, History of the Plantation of Menungatuck, p. 389, wrote concerning Josiah and the Methodist Church at Black Rock or Rockland:

On April 17, 1806, the proprietors of the common and undivided lands granted a site for this church to Josiah Coan, William Hale, Jeremiah Stephens, John Francis, and others. The church was erected in 1816, but was not finished and dedicated until 1830. The congregation has always been small in numbers and not rich in this world's goods.

JOSIAH⁴ COAN (Josiah³, John², Peter¹) was born August 8, 1788, the son of Josiah and Carine (Graves) Coan. He was famous for his "walk." He had always wanted to see Niagara Falls, so on Tuesday, August 20, 1822, when he was 34 years old, he started from Guilford, Connecticut, to walk to the Falls. His purpose was twofold: to see the Falls and to check land and water power facilities. On his way out he walked only part of the distance since he rode when he could on the Erie Canal. But coming home, he walked most of the way starting from the Ohio line, which was as far west as he went, to his starting point in Guilford--a total of 527 miles, according to his diary. A copy of his diary follows. (C. C. Potter Collection, Guilford, Connecticut). He arrived at the Falls September 8 and was back in Guilford, September 28.

Josiah married first Susan Fowler, who was born in October of 1792; she died March 19, 1852. He married second the widow Catherine Hull of Wallingford. He lived in North Madison and Wallingford and died on June 28, 1874.

JOSEPH⁵ COAN (John⁴, John³, John², Peter¹) was born in North Guilford, Connecticut, June 19, 1834, a twin son of John and Phebe Ann (Fowler) Coan. On May 7, 1856, he married Lydia Elizabeth Hall, who was born January 29, 1836, in Guilford, Connecticut. She was the daughter of George Hall. August 9, 1862, Joseph enlisted in the army. On August 25, 1862, he was mustered into the Fifteenth Regiment, Company E. About one month later, on September 17, he wrote his sister Phebe that he was at Camp Chase where he held "the honorable situation as cook...for ninety-six men." In the same letter he wrote: "We have heard of the deaths of the Guilford Boys that went in the 14th. Poor fellows they little thought when they left home that they should be called to die so soon on the Battle Field." In less than two months he himself died of typhoid fever, one of 249,458 in the Union army who died of disease and accident in the Civil War, over twice as many as were killed or died of wounds.

His wife Lydia never remarried and lived the rest of her life in Guilford where she was very active in community affairs. She was a member of the Third Church where she was leader of the Junior Endeavor Society, active in the Sunday School, and a dedicated worker in the Ladies' Missionary and Benevolent Societies. She was a member of the Relief Corps of Parmelee Post, Grand Army of the Republic, and of the United Workers for Public Improvement. In both these organizations she was made an honored member.

Joseph died November 7, 1862, at Fairfax Seminary, Virginia; Lydia, July 4, 1900, in Guilford. Her obituary states: "Her life was a continued round of good deeds, and her cheery voice and helpful hands brought gladness to many a weary soul." In Henry Pyncheon Robinson's book, Guilford Portraits, (New Haven, CT: Pease-Lewis Co., 1907) p. 59, the following tribute to Lydia appears:

MRS. LYDIA ELIZABETH COAN

January 29, 1836--July 4, 1900

Here gently rests, in peace and full regret,
 One whose place voiceless, remains vacant yet,
 Whose large affections altruistic shone,
 Who sought the good of others as her own,
 Kind, cheering words arise again to me,
 Words that she uttered generous and free;

Sincere, spontaneous as the wafted air,
 With joyous smile and glad eye, beaming fair.
 Yet more with works than words she filled these ways,
 While fast the sands of life ran out her days;
 Who, to the public weal, her service lent,
 A publicist indeed with best intent,
 With clear intelligence to understand
 The full nobility of Christ's command.
 So lavish of her talents, time and health,
 She was long potent in our village wealth.
 Her name gave warrant to an enterprise,
 Of social purpose here and otherwise
 Indexed her value in our common care,
 Of which, alas! death makes us so aware.

SEBELLA ELIZABETH TAYLOR⁶, the daughter of Horace Addison and Hannah Elizabeth (Coan) Taylor, was born in Morgan, Ash-tabula County, Ohio, October 13, 1844. On January 4, 1870, at New Haven, Connecticut, she married Henry Turner Eddy who was born in Stoughton, Massachusetts, June 9, 1844, the son of Henry and Cordelia (Wood) Eddy.

Henry was graduated from Yale in 1867 and showed a special aptitude in mathematics by taking first prize in every competition. He entered the engineering course at Sheffield Scientific School at New Haven and received the degree of Ph.B. in 1868. He was instructor in mathematics and Latin at the University of Tennessee and from 1869 to 1873 was assistant professor in mathematics and civil engineering at Cornell. While there, he received the degree of Ph.D., the first ever conferred by that University. He was at Princeton in 1873 and the following year was elected to fill the chair of mathematics, astronomy, and civil engineering at the new University of Cincinnati. While connected with this university, he studied abroad at the University of Berlin, the Sorbonne, and the College de France, at Paris. In 1890 he declined the presidency of the Cincinnati University and accepted that of Rose Polytechnic Institute at Terre Haute, Indiana. In 1894, he became professor of engineering and mechanics at the University of Minnesota and in 1906 was made dean of the graduate school of that institution. In 1912 he retired with the title of professor and dean emeritus and devoted himself to the publication of his research work. He was a member of the honorary societies of Phi Beta Kappa and Sigma Xi and he belonged to many of the scientific and engineering societies in many of which he held office. He is the author of many works in mathematics and science.

Sebella died September 3, 1921, in Minneapolis, Minnesota. Henry died December 11, 1921.

DOUGLASS WILLIAM⁵ COAN (Abraham⁴, John³, John², Peter¹) was born July, 1825, the son of Abraham and Eunice (Cook) Coan. He married in Port Chester, New York, Sarah Jane Babcock, who was born at Oak Park, Illinois, May 18, 1824, the daughter of John and Sally (Chamberlain) Babcock. Douglass and Sarah lived in Oak Park when Douglass died in 1902.

ABRAHAM SHERWOOD⁵ COAN, alias S. C. CAMPBELL, (Abraham⁴, John³, John², Peter¹) was born in North Guilford, Connecticut, May 15, 1829, the son of Abraham and Eunice (Cook) Coan. When he was a youth, his family moved to New Haven, and there he learned the trade of carriage trimming from Stephen Gilbert. He was a member of the National Blues, and his baritone voice made him a valued singer in several glee clubs and serenade associations.

It was not long before he attracted the attention of the manager of the Campbell Minstrels, and he joined that company. At this time he changed his name to S. C. Campbell. In 1854 he was engaged with Christy's Minstrels, and later he went to Australia with the Backus troupe. He returned to California and in 1859 went to New York City with Christy's Minstrels again. While there, he sang for a time with the choir of Grace Church in that city; and it was said that the fame of this church for its music was due in no small part to him.

I. F. Harrison, manager of the Gottschalk concerts in New York, persuaded him to join this program; and he gave up his minstrel work. He then appeared with Campbell and Castle English Opera Company; and sang for several years with Riching's English Opera Company and with Parepa-Rosa Company. In his opera singing he was associated with Fanny Stockton, Rosa Cook, Clara Louise Kellogg, Zelda Harrison, Parepa-Rosa, and his inseparable friend, William Castle.

In the summer of 1874 he went to Chicago to fill an engagement with the Kellogg English Opera Company, but because of illness he was never able to appear with them. He died of heart disease at the home of his brother Douglass in Chicago November 25, 1874, at the age of forty-five. His early playmate, Dr. Ellsworth Eliot of New York City, wrote of him: "His baritone voice--sweet, mellow, sympathetic, firm, and powerful--made him a great favorite. He had no rival and left no successor."

The New Haven Register in his obituary stated: "To the many who have heard him it is unnecessary to say that he was a singer of rare excellence. His repertoire included over thirty operas. He was a true gentleman and a conscientious artist."

LAURA D.⁴ COAN (Simeon³, John², Peter¹) was born in 1797, the daughter of Simeon and Parnel (Fowler) Coan. She married Samuel Johnson Hitchcock May 18, 1818. He was born February 4, 1786, at Bethlehem, Connecticut, the eldest of twelve children of Benjamin and Mary (Johnson, Hitchcock. It was impossible for his father to give Samuel any educational advantages, so he first worked as a mechanic. His love of reading and desire for knowledge attracted the attention of his pastor, the Reverend Azel Backus (Yale 1787), who fitted him to teach school and prepared him without charge to enter the sophomore class at Yale. He was graduated at the head of his class in 1809 and delivered the valedictory oration on the "Wisdom of Aiming at High Attainments."

For two years after his graduation he taught in Fairfield Academy and then became a tutor at Yale. He received his M.A. degree in 1812. While a tutor, he had had read law in the office of Seth P. Staples; and June 4, 1814, at a session of the New Haven County Court he was admitted to the bar. In 1815 he began to practice law.

The lady of his choice, Laura, the orphaned daughter of Simeon and Parnel Coan of Guilford, returned his affection, but hesitated to name the day because, being unable to purchase her "furniture", she feared that she might be a burden to him. To overcome this obstacle, Hitchcock proposed to her uncle in a letter dated January 5, 1818, that they conspire together to practice a pious fraud upon her. The plan was that the uncle, Eliakim Fowler, should make a gift of $300 to Laura, telling her that he knew she needed the money for the purpose above mentioned, and that he had always intended to assist her on the approach of that crises which he had heard was coming upon her. Hitchcock engaged on his part to repay Fowler with interest at any time and in any way that the donor might point out. "If you do this," wrote Hitchcock, "I am well convinced you will add exceedingly to her comfort and do much, more perhaps than you are aware of, toward making her a happy bride....You will see, dear Sir, that if you can conveniently and consistently comply with the above request, it must never be known to your niece that I made it,--or at least that the secret must not be divulged until some future period." The letter closed with a request for a reply within ninety days. The answer must have been favorable, for the marriage took place on May 18, 1818. (Yale Law School: The Founders and the Founders' Collection, [published for the Tercentenary Commission by the Yale University Press, 1935], pp. 16, 17)

Besides his work as a lawyer he was instructor in a private law school and built a large law library for this school. His success as a teacher is indicated by the following verse, written by a student in one of the law school books:

Oh Thou who hears'st the students' prayer
How dark with all its witch talk
Would seem the Law, if puzzled here,
We could not fly to Hitchcock.

In 1821 Samuel was admitted to practice before the United States Circuit Court; from 1838 to 1842 he was a judge of the New Haven County Court; from 1842 to 1844 he was chief judge of the City Court; from 1839 to 1841 he was mayor of New Haven. His private law school eventually became Yale School of Law. In 1842 the Yale degree of Doctor of Laws was conferred upon him. In 1843, largely through his efforts, the degree of Bachelor of Laws was first conferred by Yale College.

According to Professor Woolsey, Samuel was "one of the most decidedly religious men to be found in any department of life." For more than a decade (1833-1845) he was a deacon of Center Church where he conducted a Bible class for young men.

Laura had two sons and three daughters. She died in 1832. In 1834 Samuel married second Narcissa Perry, widow of Joseph Whittemore of Fredericksburg, Virginia. Samuel died August 31, 1845, in his sixtieth year and was buried in Grove Street Cemetery, New Haven.

Upon his death it was felt the Yale Law School could not exist unless it acquired his library. Negotiations were made; Hitchcock's library was sold to Yale for $4,188.65. It was the beginning of the Yale Law School library.

GEORGE H. HITCHCOCK⁶, son of Charles and Olivia G. (Cowell) Hitchcock, was born September 29, 1850, in Providence, Rhode Island. He was graduated from Brown University in 1872 and from Harvard Law School in 1864. He was admitted to the bar both in Providence and New York and practiced law for five years. About this time he visited an exhibition of water colors which inspired him with the desire to paint. He gave up law and began to produce pictures. Although so amateurish that in later years he tried to buy them all back, they sold readily. The more he painted, the less he found he knew; so in 1879 he went to England. Not finding an art school there which suited him, he went to Paris and became a pupil at Julien's Academy where he studied with Boulanger and Lefebvre. He next studied at Dusseldorf, still not finding exactly what he sought. Finally he went to The Hague and studied under Mesdag. He then decided to develop his own style and settled at Egmond, a little village in northern Holland on the North Sea. In England in 1882 he married Henrietta Richardson.

One day while he was out painting in Holland, the Empress of Austria stopped at the village inn and saw some of his paintings. One of the Dutch coast she especially liked; but as the artist could not be found, she continued her journey. She couldn't forget the painting, and the next day she sent her equerry back to buy it. This was the beginning of George's international success. He became a regular exhibitor at the Royal Academy in London, at the Paris Salon, and at other Continental shows.

George loved Holland's tulip fields and was the first to put on canvas the great fields of flowers. He was a portrait painter as well as a landscape artist and combined both talents in his work. The Egmond School is the result of his paintings. While he was at Egmond, seventeen studios sprang up and three hundred pupils came to him. Berlin, Dresden, and Munich bestowed their medals on him; and Vienna, besides presenting him with a medal, gave him the officer's cross of the Franz Josef order and elected him a corresponding member of its Academy. He was the only American to have received the last two distinctions. France made him a chevalier of the Legion of Honor.

His paintings hung in the Imperial Collection of Vienna, The Dresden Gallery, the Luxembourg, and in municipal galleries at Alkmaar and Egmond, Holland. In England his works were in many private galleries including Bleinheim, the seat of the Duke of Marlborough; and the McCulloch Gallery. He and Whistler were the only Americans represented at the latter. In the United States his paintings hung at the Metropolitan Museum, the Art Institute of Chicago, the Indianapolis Art Institute, and in the public galleries of Providence, Buffalo, St. Louis, Savannah, and Minneapolis.

His paintings were not limited to Dutch subjects. He was equally famous for "Flight into Egypt", "Hagar and Ishmael", "Proserpina", "Calypso", "Saint Genevieve, patron saint of Paris", and "Saint George". His work failed to classify in any one school. He painted Holland as he, an American, saw it. Outstanding characteristics of his art were sincerity, refinement, quiet color, and a remarkable achievement of atmosphere.

George died August 2, 1913, on the Island of Marken, Netherlands.

captain of the builders designed and built the Congregational Church in North Guilford. Its unusual features were the belfry in the tower and the domed, open cupola above it. Abraham designed several other churches in Connecticut, among them the North Branford Zion Episcopal Church which he built in 1819. It had an octagonal belfry, a dome, and gothic windows.

In 1803 Abraham was listed as a member and communicant of the Christ Episcopal Church in Guilford. He was a chorister in 1807 and 1808; a vestryman from 1812 until 1820 when he became Senior Warden. He served in that capacity, as well as usually being moderator of church meetings, for over 20 years. In 1815 the church people voted that he should repair the church walls. On June 21, 1836, his name was among the names on a scroll deposited in a lead box at the laying of the cornerstone of the new Christ Church. November 12, 1838, Abraham was appointed the church warden who was to sign and present the deed of dedication of the new church on December 12.

As well as being active in the church, he was active in town affairs. He was justice of the peace in 1818 and in 1820 was elected warden in Guilford, a position he held until 1840. Martha died January 19, 1829. October 2, 1832, Abraham married second Sarah (Linsley) Russell, Martha's sister. Abraham died in Guilford February 14, 1863, aged 88. The Reverend Lorenzo T. Bennett officiated at his burial service.

After the war Theodore opened a hotel in Seymour, Connecticut. At New Haven, Connecticut, July 11, 1866, he married Jane M. He rose to the rank of major in the old Connecticut militia and served as major under General Rose of North Branford. Church. February 17, 1840, the church voted that Richard D. Coan "should erect a fence around the church except the front by April 1st next." April 12, 1841, Richard D. Coan by vote of the church was to "place a new pinnacle upon the tower provided a subscription can be raised." April 16, 1844, the church voted that Richard D. Coan should repair the tower.

In 1913 they moved to 25-27 Center Street and on June 1, 1917, incorporated their business under the name of Coan & Bunnell, Inc., with a capital of

He was listed on a pay roll of Captain Ward's company in 1758. He enlisted April 19, 1758 and was discharged December 13. At this time the home government in England was reimbursing the colony for campaign expenses. England paid these expenses from 1755 to 1762. (Collections of the Connecticut Historical Society, Vol. X, p. ix)

His later service was in the campaign of 1759. He died of smallpox November 12, 1759, aged 19; and chances are he died in the service. ABRAHAM² COAN AND DESCENDANTS

ABRAHAM² COAN (Peter¹) was born in East Hampton, Long Island, New York, and baptized there August 6, 1732, the son of Peter and Hannah (Davis) Coan. About 1737 Abraham moved with the family to North Guilford, Connecticut. When he was a young man, he went back to East Hampton where he married Joanna _____. Family records say he separated from his wife and went alone to Truro, Massachusetts, after his son Abraham was born. According to Edward Doubleday Harris's "Ancient Burial Grounds of Long Island," New England Historical and Genealogical Register, October, 1900, Vol. 54, p. 428, in a listing of cemetery inscriptions in East Hampton there is the following marking on an old stone:

In Memory of
Mrs. Joanna Wife of Abram Coan who died
Oct. 29, 1757
in her 24th
Year

The stone is among Dayton and Osborn gravestones, so Joanna might have been a Dayton or an Osborn. However, in the birth records for the years 1732, 1733, and 1734 kept by Nathaniel Huntting, minister of the East Hampton church, no Joanna Dayton or Joanna Osborn was listed. There was a Joanna Hudson, born November 4, 1733, daughter of Sam Hudson; and a Joanna Hedges, born May 26, 1734, daughter of Isaac Hedges. One of these might have been Abraham's wife.

There was no further family record of Abraham and Joanna's son Abraham. He apparently never went to Truro with his father. Maybe he died. But in Frederic Gregory Mather's The Refugees of 1776 from Long Island to Connecticut (Albany, N.Y.: J. B. Lyon Company, Printers, 1913), p. 995, there was a list of the First Regiment of Minute Men from Suffolk County, New York (of which East Hampton is a part), and an Abraham Coan was among the enlisted men. This Abraham could very well have been Joanna's son. In the Federal Census of 1790 for the State of New York, Dutchess County, in the town of Washington, there was an Abraham Coan whose household included one male 16 years and up, one male under 16 years, and four females including children and heads of family. That was the last known record which might have referred to Abraham and Joanna's son.

At Truro Abraham, like most of the other residents, "followed the sea for a livelihood and seemed to be fairly well-to-do for his times"; so says the family record of Myrtie Fisher Seaverns. He married second at Truro on October 11, 1759, Christian Hinckley, who was born in Truro November 10, 1739, and baptized there November 11, 1739, the daughter of Shubael and Mary (Snow) Hinckley. Christian was a descendant of Samuel Hinckley who came to this country from England on the Hercules in 1635 and settled in Barnstable, Cape Cod, with his wife Sarah and four children. She also was a descendant of Stephen Hopkins of the Mayflower.

Abraham died at Truro June 9, 1794; and his wife Christian, May 11, 1816.

SAMUEL⁴ COAN (Samuel³, Abraham², Peter¹), son of Samuel and Elizabeth (Dyer) Coan, was born in Truro September 20, 1792. He married Betsy Dyer September 18, 1817. She was born October 6, 1794 and died December 12, 1821. On December 24, 1822, he married Hannah Avery, who was born November 20, 1803, the daughter of Captain John and Rebecca (Knowles) Avery.

Capt. Samuel Coan was drowned by the upsetting of a boat at the Pond landing, April 26th, 1847, at the age of 54 years. He is said to have been an old and successful skipper, a highly respected citizen. His vessel, the Brenda, was all fitted for a trip mackerel-ling, at Provincetown, and he with his crew, all of whom were young--between the ages of thirteen and, perhaps, twenty-three--were going home to spend a day or two before sailing, when they sailed to "that unexplored shore." His two sons, Benjamin and Samuel, and two others, succeeded in clinging to the overturned boat, in spite of the rough sea, until taken off by friends who saw their perilous condition from the shore. These were the only survivors. This sad event cast a gloom over the whole community. (Jane G. [Avery] Carter and Susie P. Holmes, comp., Genealogical Record of the Dedham Branch of the Avery Family in America [Plymouth, Mass.: Winslow W. Avery, 1893], p. 232).

Three others who drowned with Captain Coan were Andrew Cassidy, aged 16; Nathaniel Paine, aged 14; and John Ridley, aged 13. Their destination in a few days was to have been the Grand Banks. Although Truro, where they were headed then, was only eight to ten miles by sea from Provincetown, those few miles were very treacherous. A clay vein, which slants across the ocean floor, crops out at Truro 100-150 feet high, crowned by Highland Light, one of the most powerful on the Atlantic Coast. Sand was sometimes 300 feet deep; and when a storm blew across the narrow three-to-four mile strip of land at Truro, the wind whirled the flinty sand so hard the cottages had ground glass window panes. The shifty sandbars had caught, twisted, and broken the hulls of innumerable boats. One gale of wind actually wrecked 18 vessels between the end of the Cape and the clay cliffs at Truro. It was in these dangerous waters that Captain Coan and the three boys drowned that April night. This is the same place that Captain Samuel's uncle, Captain Shubael Coan, lost his life, along with three others, May 2, 1799. Pond Landing was an ill-fated spot for two Coan captains.

Mrs. Hannah (Avery) Coan was a worthy member of the M. E. Church for many years, and although confined to the house by age and infirmities, retained an interest in the prosperity of Zion. Her life was an uneventful one, having passed it almost wholly in North Truro, where she was highly esteemed for her many kind deeds. ...She was the last survivor of the Avery family in Truro. She died January 9, 1892, aged 88 years. A local paper speaks of her as follows:

"She with her husband, Samuel Coan, were among the members of the Methodist class organized in 1820, Rev. Frederick Upham being their pastor. Mrs. Coan was a widow 45 years. Her husband was drowned with five of his crew, on his way from Provincetown, not many miles from home. She mourned for him, not as one without hope, for her trust was in God, whom they both loved and served. Mrs. Coan loved the church of her choice, and held sacred to its doctrines, although, as the infirmities of years increased, she was compelled to stay away from the public means of grace. Her faith was strong in her Savior. As long as she could reply, when asked if it was light as she neared the valley, replied with earnestness, 'Light? it's all light. My lamp is trimmed and burning.'" (Carter and Holmes, Avery Genealogy, p. 233)

MAINE COANS AND THEIR EASTERN DESCENDANTS

CAPTAIN ELISHA DAVIS COAN

ELISHA DAVIS³ COAN (Abraham², Peter¹) was born in Truro, Massachusetts, April 18, 1771, the son of Abraham and Christian (Hinckley) Coan. On July 8, 1794, in Truro he married Mary Atkins, who was born in Truro June 30, 1776, the daughter of Nathaniel Atkins and his wife Mary (Vickers ?) Atkins. Elisha and Mary moved from Massachusetts to Maine and on June 28, 1797, bought twenty acres of land in Penobscot, Hancock County, from Pelatiah Freeman for $310. The following is from The Coan Family by Alonzo Coan, pp. 1, 2:

Elisha owned a farm at the head of Castine Bay, but for the greater part of the time for many years followed the profession of seaman, and commanded several ships in coast and foreign trade. During the Napoleonic Wars, while transporting supplies from the West Indies to Great Britain, his vessel, the Phoebe, was captured by the French for alleged violation of the Embargo Proclamation of Napoleon I and taken to Havre, France, where ship and cargo were confiscated and the Captain and crew imprisoned for many months. For this and other outrages to our commerce, France later paid to the U. S. a large indemnity, which was intended to reimburse those who suffered from these acts; but for some reason Captain Coan was never reimbursed.

To validate the foregoing facts about Captain Elisha, the compiler of this book wrote to the National Archives in Washington, D. C.; the French National Archives; the Archives de la Premiere Region Maritime; the Archives de la Seine-Maritime; the Wilson Museum, Castine, Maine; the Maine Maritime Museum, Bath; the Penobscot Marine Museum, Searsport; and checked all available copies of the Castine Journal and the Castine Eagle, newspapers of the early 1800s, at the Maine Historical Society Library--no mention of the Phoebe nor of Elisha's being imprisoned in France. However, this compiler believes this incident did take place, since in four lines of descent from Elisha the story was well-known.

Alonzo, author of The Coan Family, was Elisha's grandson through Elisha's son Abraham. Alonzo probably heard the story from Elisha himself since Alonzo grew up in Exeter, Maine, where Captain Elisha was living at that time and was almost nine years old when his grandfather died.

Marion Coan, Elisha's great granddaughter through his son Samuel, wrote the following to the compiler in June, 1936:

I find that I must have been mistaken about Capt. Elisha's being in France when Charlotte Corday was executed--that was in 1793--so it must have been someone else. But the story must have been fact with some allowance for inaccuracy in handing it down. Father remembered that his grandfather was in prison when some political prisoner was beheaded and thought it was Charlotte Corday.

Marion's father was Dr. Elisha Skinner Coan, who lived in Exeter during his boyhood and was eight years old when Elisha died. He, too, knew his grandfather personally.

The following is a statement made by Myrtie Fisher Seaverns, a great granddaughter of Elisha's through his daughter Hannah:

When I was a small child, I remember hearing my mother speak of the "French Spoliation Claim," and at the time my uncle, Charles Hooper of Castine, Maine, was trying to set the machinery in motion to realize on the claim; but nothing ever came of it.

And finally Grace (Hall) Shepherd, wife of Owen Shepherd, great, great grandson of Elisha through his daughter Hannah, wrote of Elisha:

Being brought up in a town where almost the entire population depended upon the sea for their existence, Elisha naturally took to a seaman's life and at a very young age he became master and owner of his own ship... During the year 1793 his vessel, the Phoebe, was captured by the French and he was taken to Le Havre and to Paris. While there, he saw Charlotte Corday guillotined. His claim which he filed at Washington was probably never settled. (Collection of Mrs. E. C. Zimmerman, Cooinbil Farm, Via Yass, Postcode N.S.W. 2582, Australia).

The compiler wrote the National Archives to see if a claim was ever filed by Elisha or by his grandson Charles. There was no record of such a claim. However, it seems positive that Elisha was on an American vessel that was seized by the French, and he was imprisoned in France, probably in Le Havre and in Paris and probably in 1793. Although documented proof has still to be found, the incident most certainly did occur.

The following list of vessels of which Captain Elisha Coan was master 1795-1803 came from the National Archives. It was taken from the Customs record for the port of Penobscot (later Castine), Maine.

The Castine Journal of Wednesday, March 13, 1799, under the heading, "Castine," carried the following notice:

On Wednesday laft arrived at this port the fch. Friendship, Capt. Coan, in 36 days from Antiqua. Spoke no veffels."

The Castine Journal of Friday, June 6, 1800 stated:

Brig. Jacob, Capt. Coan of this port has safely arrived at Liverpool after a passage of about 50 days.

The following is from Alonzo Coan's genealogy:

Elisha was Unitarian in belief and was an attendant and supporter of one of the oldest societies of this denomination in New England. The building in which he worshipped in Castine is still standing and is still in use by Unitarians as a place of meeting. He was a member of the Masonic fraternity, having been made a Mason in London, England. In later life he left the sea and settled on a farm in the township of Exeter, Maine. ...He was brave and honest, a genial soul, loved by all who knew him.

In 1818 Elisha sold the Penobscot property to his neighbor, Thatcher Avery, and moved to Exeter, Maine, where he lived for the rest of his life. Alonzo wrote that the farm Elisha purchased there was within sight of the burial ground where he was finally laid to rest. His wife Mary died October 18, 1836, aged 60. Elisha died March 4, 1851, aged 80. They were buried in the Townhouse Cemetery in the center of Exeter. It was known to Alonzo as the "Center" burying ground.

He belonged to the Dexter, Maine, "Cosey Club" which was organized in 1854 for mental improvement, especially in elocution and debate. The club continued to hold meetings in the "Pin Hole" over what was in 1976 the shop of J. F. Kirby. The society dissolved in 1859, when it sold its property at auction and divided its library among members. The library was of considerable size; it was made up of an old circulating library turned over to the club by citizens who owned it, and additions from time to time by purchase.

In 1861 William enlisted in the 6th Infantry of Maine in the Civil War and was promoted to first sergeant, second lieutenant, and adjutant. He re-enlisted in the 6th Infantry between October 17, 1863, and June, 1864. In 1864 he was transferred to the 1st Regiment of Veteran Volunteers of which he was adjutant. SHUBAEL⁴ COAN (Elisha D.³, Abraham², Peter¹) was born in Penobscot (Castine), Maine, March 2, 1802, the son of Elisha Davis and Mary (Atkins) Coan. By 1820 Shubael had probably left the Castine area with his father, who had given up life on the sea and had moved to Exeter where he was working to build a house for his family. On September 15, 1823, Shubael married Susan Abbott, daughter of Robert and Sally (Gilman) Abbott, new settlers in Exeter. The ceremony was performed by Winthrop Chapman, Justice of the Peace.

In 1822 Robert Abbott sold his farm in Mount Vernon, Maine, where he had lived since he and Sally were married in Hallowell January 26, 1795. Mount Vernon's proprietary lots were fast disappearing, and the "town had no more land to be taken up. Newcomers must either inherit or buy improved land from those who moved on. Farmers were dividing their farms among their children" (William R. Wright, A Sociological and Economic History of Mount Vernon, Maine. It no doubt seemed feasible to Abbott, who had a large family to move where there was greater opportunity. Exeter seemed one very logical place to find unlimited opportunity since the first settler, Lemuel Tozier, hadn't arrived until 1801; and Exeter was not incorporated as the 180th town in Maine until March 16, 1811. Land was plentiful there.

Abbott came from Mount Vernon to Exeter on horseback "there being no roads fit for vehicles" (Alonzo Coan, The Coan Family, p. 5). He was born in Berwick, Maine, and for a time worked in ship building in the Portsmouth, New Hampshire, area.

Susan (Abbott) Coan died in Exeter November 1876; Shubael, January 11, 1887. They were buried there in the cemetery on Cider Hill Road.

ROBERT ABBOTT⁵ COAN (Shubael⁴, Elisha D.³, Abraham², Peter¹), son of Shubael and Susan (Abbott) Coan, was born in Exeter, Maine, April 22, 1827. On January 12, 1852, he married Mary Elizabeth Bartlett, who was born July 6, 1827, daughter of Nathaniel and Sarah (Kenniston) Bartlett of Kittery, Maine.

Robert and Mary met at a mill in Lawrence, Massachusetts, where they both worked. They lived for awhile near Robert's brother Abraham in Tobyhanna, Pennsylvania, where their son Frank was born. Shortly thereafter, they returned to Maine and bought a farm in Exeter, Robert's home town.

In order to supplement his income as a farmer, winters Robert went into the Maine woods to cut lumber. In the spring he rode the river on the logs on the drive to Bangor. When he arrived home, according to his son Fred, "he had quite a roll of money." Besides farming in the other seasons of the year, he joined his neighbors who took teams up north and hauled logs. His wife Mary was the mid-wife of the area and assisted at the birth of most of the children.

Mary's grandfather, Hugh Kenniston (Keniston, Kennison) and her great grandfather, Nathaniel Staples, fought in the American Revolution. She was a direct-line descendant of Adam Barttelot, who went to England from Normandy with William the Conqueror and fought in the Battle of Hastings. He was granted land at Sopham, Sussex. She was also an eighth generation descendant of Joseph Bolles through whom she could trace her lineage to a number of English kings, among them--William the Conqueror, 1066-1087; Athelred II, 979-1016; and Alfred the Great, 871-901.

Robert died April 1, 1893, in Exeter and was buried in the cemetery on Cider Hill Road. Mary outlived her husband by more than 20 years and was buried there also. She died at the home of her son Fred in Manchester, New Hampshire, July 2, 1914, aged 87 years.

FRANK ASA⁶ COAN (Robert A.⁵, Shubael⁴, Elisha D.³, Abraham², Peter¹) was born in Tobyhanna, Pennsylvania, March 16, 1857, the son of Robert Abbott and Mary Elizabeth (Bartlett) Coan. His parents moved back to Exeter, Maine, when he was a small child; and he lived there until he was a young man. He then moved to North Andover, Massachusetts, and to Everett where he lived for the rest of his life. On October 10, 1879, he married Eliza Kennelly, who was born in North Andover, July 20, 1857, the daughter of William and Hannah (MacDonald) Kennelly, both born in Ireland.

He was for 16 years in military service and was Captain of Company L, 8th Regiment of Lawrence. For 35 years he was connected with the United States Customs Service. He was a member of the Cochickwick Lodge of Masons and the Wauwinet Lodge of Odd Fellows of Lawrence, also of the Men's Class of the First Congregational Church of Everett. He received a veteran's jewel marking 50 years of membership in his Odd Fellows Lodge. His obituary in a local paper stated:

Mr. Coan was a splendid type of citizen. He had all the sterling characteristics of his ancestors, his people having fought in the Revolutionary and Colonial Wars, and was held in the highest regard by those whose privilege it was to know him.

Eliza died in Everett May 2, 1931, aged 73 years, 9 months, 12 days. Frank died in Gloucester June 25, 1931.

On April 17, 1907, she married Alton Barrows Atwood, son of Charles N. and Amanda (Barrows) Atwood. He was the owner of the Atwood & McManus Box Company of Chelsea, Massachusetts.

During World War I Mabel was especially active in raising money for liberty loans. She had to her credit the raising of three quarters of a million dollars, and her great efforts were recognized by the government which gave her as a memento a German helmet. She was also very much interested in woman suffrage. At the time women were accorded the privilege of voting, she was instrumental in interesting all with whom she came in contact in exercising their rights at the ballot box and in taking a greater interest in the affairs of government, national and local.

She had made frequent trips with her husband to all parts of the world having visited Mexico, Brazil, Colombia, Iceland, Europe, the Canadian Rockies, Hawaii, and all other parts of the United States. She was a member of the Owls, a social and sewing club of long standing, embracing Chelsea and Everett membership; Old South Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution; the Chelsea Woman's Club in which she served on numerous committees; the Friday Club of Everett; the Old Ladies' Home Corporation; and the Winnisimmet Union of the First Congregational Church.

Mabel died of cancer in Chelsea March 7, 1942. Alton died just 27 years later to the day of Mabel's death, March 7, 1969. He was 100 years old. They were buried in Woodlawn Cemetery, Everett.

SHUBAEL PRESCOTT⁶, COAN (Robert A.⁵, Shubael⁴, Elisha D.³, Abraham², Peter¹) was born in Exeter, Maine, March 24, 1860, the son of Robert Abbott and Mary Elizabeth (Bartlett) Coan. The Federal Census for the State of Maine in 1880 lists him as 20 years old and working for his uncle in his carriage and repair shop. The uncle was probably John C. Hersey, husband of his father's sister Sarah. Hersey was a farmer who also operated a carriage and repair shop in South Exeter. Shubael married Sarah C. (Chris) Lewis and from 1897 until he died lived in Ward Hill, Massachusetts, on a farm he purchased at 1300 Boston Road.

The Haverhill City Directories list him as (1897) wool-sorter; (1902) farmer; (1906) shoe maker; and (1920) wool-sorter. His descendants say that at the end of his life he was a department superintendent at the Wood Mill, a textile manufacturer, in Lawrence. All Haverhill directories listed him as William; sometimes as William S. P. Coan, and in his last years as William P. Coan. All family records, Federal Census records, and Exeter, Maine, town records list him as Shubael. Once he was listed in the census records as Charles Shubael, but never as William. In Everett S. Stackpole's Old Kittery and Her Families (Lewiston, Maine: Press of Lewiston Journal Company, 1903), p. 489, he was also listed as Charles S. His brother Fred called him Bill, a nickname for Shubael. Possibly others called him Bill too, so to go along with the nickname, he must have taken the name William. He died of cancer August 17, 1925, and was buried in Elmwood Cemetery, Haverhill, Massachusetts.

⁶FRED WELBY ⁵COAN (Robert A. ⁴, Shubael ³, Elisha D. ², Abraham ¹, Peter ¹) was born in Exeter, Maine, May 4, 1862, son of Robert Abbott and Mary Elizabeth (Bartlett) Coan. He received his early education from the district school which he attended every winter until he was nearly 18 years old. He was an attractive little boy; and when he was small, the teacher used to hold him on her lap and play with his black curly hair.

When he was in his teens, he contracted scarlet fever. While he had to stay in bed recuperating, to help pass the time, his mother taught him how to knit. His daughter Ruth (1982) had the blue stockings he made for himself then.

When he was 16, he drove a milk team to the creamery. At that time in the spring and fall he went to high school. Winters he was back at the district school. In high school he had a school master and studied arithmetic, grammar, geography, and algebra. "Nobody ever graduated," he said; "everybody would just go and quit."

When he was 18 years old, his mother gave him an amethyst ring, possibly as a going-away present because it was then he left his home in Exeter for good. (The ring is still in the family--1982). He took the boat from Bangor to Boston and went to live in North Andover, Massachusetts, because his brother Frank was there. He became an apprentice for Davis and Ferber in Lawrence, a company that made all kinds of machinery for woolen mills. The first year he made $0.90 a day; the second, $1.00; the third, $1.10; he worked six days a week. Just before his three years were up, he went to work for McKay's Machine Shop where he was a machinist making shoe machinery. Here he made $2.50 a day.

After two years he moved to Ware, Massachusetts, "to fix sewing machines" for the Otis Company. He was paid $3.00 a day. Here he met Minnie Draper Herrick who ran a sewing machine. They were married at her home in West Randolph, Vermont, in the fall of 1888 and returned to Ware to live. Minnie came from a large family. Her father was Lorenzo Dow Herrick who had nine children by his first wife and six by his second, Betsey Almira Booth, Minnie's mother. Minnie, who was born August 22, 1861, in West Randolph, Vermont, was next to the youngest and only 13 years old when her father died. He was a prominent Vermont farmer who held many town offices, was a Justice of the Peace, and influenced the founding of West Randolph Academy where he was a life-time member of the Board of Trustees.

November 18, 1889, Fred and Minnie had a daughter, Grace Herrick Coan, born in Ware. In 1891 Fred said he "wanted to get out and move around." Through an "insurance drummer" he heard of a job as a machinist in Lebanon, New Hampshire. He got the job and moved his family to Lebanon. Besides being a machinist, he was in charge of the stitching room and made $3.50 a day. Three years later Superintendent Dorsey of the Lebanon mill left to be superintendent of the Elliott Manufacturing Company in Manchester and convinced Fred to go with him. At the Elliott, Fred was foreman of the stitching room and made $4.00 a day to start. Over the years his pay was increased until during World War I it was raised to $52.00 a week which he was making when he retired after forty years at the Elliott.

When Fred, Minnie, and Grace moved to Manchester, they lived in "a flat on Spruce Street" about a half mile from the mill. He became active in the Odd Fellows. He and Minnie were Charter Members of Acorn Rebekah Lodge in East Manchester. He was a member of Oak Hill Lodge and went through the chairs there, becoming Past Noble Grand of the Lodge and Deputy Chief Patriarch of Live Oak Encampment. He was also a member of the Masons.

September 9, 1906, Minnie died of cancer. Grace was then 16 years old. As her only parent, Fred took his responsibilities very seriously and was a very strict father. When Vaughn Griffin, whom Grace later married, wanted to take her canoeing on the Merrimack River (the thing to do in those days), he had to take Fred first to prove Vaughn knew how to handle a canoe. At Grace's urging, Fred bought a house at 318 Laurel Street in a nice residential section. He lived here the rest of his life, and made a home for his aged mother until she died in 1914, four days before her 87th birthday.

August 26, 1911, Fred married second Pearl Ianna Knowles, born in Stark, New Hampshire, November 4, 1888, daughter of the Reverend James B. and Annie Jane (Baker) Rinehart Knowles. She worked for him at the Elliott. Pearl was an accomplished needle worker and seamstress. For years she made all her own clothes--dresses, underwear, coats--and after Ruth was born made all her things too. Pearl had considerable dramatic and musical ability. When she was in the eighth grade at the Hallsville School, she was selected to be the school's representative in the Annual City of Manchester Elocutionary Contest for Clarke Prizes, and won first prize. As a young woman, she was often soprano soloist for her church, the Tabernacle. Her hair was her "crowning glory." In the early years of her marriage it hung down to her knees; and she wore it in thick, shining braids around her head.

February 28, 1914, Fred and Pearl had a daughter, Gertrude Baker Coan, who lived only until September 4. On June 19, 1915, a second daughter, Ruth Alberta Coan, was born. About this time Fred purchased the two-tenement house next door on Laurel Street. It had a large barn in which he could keep his horse Sadie and his wagons. Fred owned several acres of land on the outskirts of East Manchester and here had an apple orchard and large garden. He was happiest when he was working in his garden. Spring, summer, and fall he drove Sadie out there nearly every night after supper and worked until dark. He always said he'd have been a farmer only there wasn't any money in it. Summers he kept his family and neighbors well supplied with fresh vegetables. Pearl worked hard canning these, and in the fall she and Fred packed the cold room in the cellar with beets, turnip, pumpkin, squash, carrots, potatoes, and apples for the winter months ahead.

Fred was a kind, even-tempered, soft-spoken, hard working, highly respected man. He was absolutely honest and didn't like to owe anyone anything. Once when his friend, Mr. Sargent the plumber, had done some work for him, the day the work was finished Fred was at the plumber's office to pay the bill. Mr. Sargent, disgusted at such promptness, said, "My bookkeeper isn't here; we don't even have your bill figured out. You'll get it in the mail when we do. Go home, Fred. I don't want your money."

Although Fred was old enough to be his wife Pearl's father, he was as modern and young in his thinking as she was. He owned the second car in the neighborhood, an Essex, on which he took driving lessons when he was in his sixties. He saw to it that Pearl had driving lessons, so she could operate the Essex too. He liked nice things and bought Pearl some lovely pieces of jewelry. He had one of the first electric refrigerators on his street; the latest automatic Edison console phonograph; and one Christmas he gave both Pearl and Ruth mahogany Governor Winthrop desks. He enjoyed the theater; when the Park Players were in Manchester during the winter seasons, he and Pearl always had tickets. He was very faithful to his lodge; every Monday and Wednesday evenings found him at Dearborn Hall for meetings. He was an excellent card player and taught both his daughters to play auction bridge. Grace later became a tournament contract bridge player. He gave unstintingly to his family and was willing to make any sacrifice, as was Pearl, to see that Ruth got the college education she wanted.

Fred was old enough to be Ruth's grandfather, but he understood her as well as her much younger mother, sometimes better. Ruth heard her mother once complaining to Fred because Ruth was so inept in the kitchen. Her father in his usual slow, succinct way answered, "The thing she's really good at is books; let her alone; let her read 'em."

In her junior year in high school Ruth was scheduled for second semester mathematics, which she did not want to take. When she complained, the principal listened to her explanation as to why she didn't need it, smiled, and said he thought taking it was a good idea.

Furious, Ruth appealed to her father. "Dad, I want you to leave the mill for an hour tomorrow, and go to see Mr. Morrison. I hate math, and he's making me take another term of it. When I complained, all he said was that he thought taking it was 'a good idea.' You tell him I don't need it for college and that you prefer I take something else."

Fred thought a moment and replied, "Ruth, I've lived in this city for a good many years. In all the time I've lived here no one has ever asked me to be principal of Manchester High School. Until they do, I think we'd better let Mr. Morrison do his job." Ruth took the math.

Another time when Ruth was expecting a young lady teacher friend for the weekend, Ruth asked her mother for some ash trays for this friend's use. Pearl, shocked that her daughter would "have a smoker for a friend," refused the request. Fred overheard the conversation. Very shortly he climbed the stairs to Ruth's room where she was angrily preparing to leave and said, "No need for you to pack your suitcase. There will be plenty of ashtrays around for your friend when she gets here." And there were.

Fred was always cordial to all Ruth's friends, both male and female. When Ruth asked him how he liked one of her boyfriends, his standard comment was, "Oh, he's all right."

At one time she was thinking seriously of one particular boy; and when her father gave his standard reply to her questioning, she said, "But, Dad, I might marry him. What do you really think of him?"

Fred paused for a second and then replied, "I think he would make a damn good horse jockey." To him a horse jockey in those days was physically, mentally, and morally inferior. That was all he ever said. He continued to be cordial to the boy, but that remark somehow ended any serious feelings Ruth might have had.

When she finally asked him about the boy she eventually married, his comment was, "He'll never set the world on fire, but he's a good boy." Fame and fortune she'd never have, just an average, happy life. And he was right!

Fred lived a remarkably healthy life. Until his short, final illness, his family never saw him sick in bed even for a day; and not once in his entire lifetime was he a patient in a hospital. He died at his Laurel Street home February 1, 1941, aged 78, and was buried in Pine Grove Cemetery in Manchester.

Pearl outlived her husband for over thirty years. She sold the Laurel Street property and the garden acreage to build at 240 Ash Street a little house of which she'd always dreamed and which she designed herself. She worked for many years as a sales clerk for the Leavitt Company, the largest department store in Manchester. Pearl was an attractive, refined lady who always was well-groomed and stylishly dressed. She was a loving, self-sacrificing mother and an industrious, affectionate, supportive wife. In her old age she was honored as a fifty-year member of the First Baptist Church where she taught the Boethian Class, sang in the choir, and was very active in the Delta Alpha group. Her church meant a great deal to her; she gave to it generously, often beyond her means. She had a strong, meaningful Christian faith. At age 89 on November 13, 1977, she died at a Falmouth, Maine, nursing home near her daughter Ruth; and was buried along with Fred, Minnie, and Gertrude in Pine Grove Cemetery in Manchester.

GRACE HERRICK⁷ COAN (Fred W.⁶, Robert A.⁵, Shubael⁴, Elisha D.³, Abraham², Peter¹) was born November 18, 1889, in Ware, Massachusetts, the daughter of Fred Welby and Minnie Draper (Herrick) Coan. She lived most of her life in Manchester, New Hampshire, and was educated in the public schools there. She was graduated from Manchester Central High School in the class of 1908. She was an accomplished piano player and, after graduating from high school, gave music lessons. On September 22, 1913, in Manchester she married Vaughn David Griffin, who was born in Henniker, New Hampshire, August 28, 1889, the son of Willard Henry and Jennie (Greenwood) Griffin.

Grace and Vaughn were members of the First Congregational Church. After Vaughn's graduation from Worcester Polytechnic Institute with a B.S. degree in mechanical engineering in 1912, he worked at Griffin and Cogswell, a shoe factory founded by his father in East Manchester. He later became interested in insurance and from 1929 to 1959 was general agent of the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Company for New Hampshire and Vermont.

Both Grace and Vaughn enjoyed playing golf and were contract bridge enthusiasts. Grace was an excellent player and participated in many bridge tournaments. She was for many years a member of the Interrogation Club and did considerable civic volunteer work. Her daughter, Jane, speaking of her, once said: "She did not have any leadership roles; she left this to Dad. I think she underestimated her abilities, probably because of her limited education. She was a brilliant woman!" Before the Great Depression Grace and Vaughn often took the same amount of money and invested it to see who could make more. Grace consistently won.

In 1923, Vaughn served as worshipful master of Washington Lodge of the Masons. He was president of the Manchester Council of Social Agencies in 1938 and was the first campaign chairman of the Manchester Community Chest. He was a charter member of the Manchester Kiwanis Club and served as its president in 1924. He was a past-president of the New Hampshire Tuberculosis Association from 1930 to 1957. He was a trustee of the Elliot Hospital and president of the Manchester Country Club from 1945 to 1947.

Grace and Vaughn owned a summer home at Lake Winnepesaukee. After Vaughn's retirement they moved to Ormand Beach, Florida, where they lived the rest of their lives.

FREDERICK WELBY GRIFFIN⁸, the son of Vaughn David and Grace Herrick (Coan) Griffin, was named for his Grandfather Coan. He wrote the following autobiographical sketch for this genealogy:

1917, May 28 -- I was born in Manchester, New Hampshire, at a house owned, I think, by a Mrs. Chandler who provided a lying-in service.

1920 -- The family moved from Linden Street to 1038 Union Street and then to 84 Bay Street about 1923.

Willard Henry Griffin

Marjorie Alice Carmichael

Ann Carmichael Griffin, Richard Carmichael Griffin, Willard Henry Griffin, Jr.

1923 -- I attended Webster Grammar School on the southeast corner of Webster and Chestnut streets. The family built a summer cottage in Gilford on Varney Point on Lake Winnepesaukee, and summers were spent there until I started working as a counsellor at Camp DeWitt in 1934.

Father, Vaughn sold about 1922 the family shoe business which he ran with his brother, Wayne. He went into the life insurance business and became General Agent of Northwestern Mutual about 1926. During those years, and actually most of his life, father never worked any harder than he had to, to live the kind of life he wanted for himself and the family. In the summer he would often stay at Winnepesaukee for two or three weeks at a time until Mother would say the bank account was low. He would then work for two or three weeks, but soon be back at the lake for another holiday with the family.

1929 -- Most of the family assets were invested in the stock market, and Dad was buying Chrysler stock short. I gathered everything but the two houses was gone by 1930, and those were heavily mortgaged. Dad somehow was able to keep brother Bill at Saint Paul's and send me to Phillips Academy at Andover, Massachusetts, in 1931. I had attended Manchester Central High School in 1930. By 1932 the pinch was tighter, and Dad told me that he could pay about $700 toward the cost of Andover and that I would have to work for the rest. I contacted two women in the town who would take in a student's laundry and got a commission on each student I could sell. I also waited on tables and managed to make up the difference. By 1935 things were improving and the strain easing.

1935-1936 -- I spent the year as an exchange student at Wellington College in Crowthorne, Berkshire, England. There had been a Wellington boy at Andover in 1934-35, but no Andover boy at Wellington. I approached Headmaster Fuess in December, 1934, about sending me the following year, and I finally persuaded him about March. This exchange program continued for many years.

1936-1940 -- I went to Harvard University and was graduated with an A.B. degree in European history. I spent three summers at Camp DeWitt and one with a friend, Jim Curwen (We were on the swimming team together) in Canton, Ohio, where we worked for Timkin Roller Bearing in their steel mill.

1940 -- I started as a life insurance agent with Dad for Northwestern. In December I met Ruth Brownlie Dickson at a country club dance. She was Harold McAllister's date and a junior at the University of New Hampshire.

1941 -- In March I decided life insurance was not for me and went with New Hampshire Insurance Company as as their first college graduate trainee at $75.00 a month.

Memorial Day I proposed to Ruth at Pemaquid, Maine.

September 20, Ruth and I were married at the Dickson home in Bath, Maine. Her parents were David Carlyle and Ruth (Brownlie) Dickson. Ruth was born November 15, 1920, at Berwick, Pennsylvania.

Mother and Dad Griffin had built a house at 532 Ray Street about 1937. They built the cape at 530 Ray Street for Ruth and me, and we moved in after the honeymoon. I went to work at New Hampshire Insurance on a bicycle, or by bus in the winter. In October I got a raise--33%!--to $100.00 a month.

1942 -- In May I was commissioned an Ensign in the United States Naval Reserve at $250.00 a month. From July to September I attended Student Officer School at Tower Hall, Michigan Avenue, in Chicago.

1942, September-1944, August -- I was an instructor in Ordinance at Midshipmen's School in Chicago.

1944, August -- After trying for about one year to get sea duty, I finally got orders to the Geo. Clymer, a 15,000 ton freight and passenger ship converted to an attack transport APA 27. I picked up the ship in New Guinea and was back in San Francisco for a yard overhaul by December. Having been trained as a gunnery officer, I was made acting 1st lieutenant during the yard overhaul because all the lieutenants, senior grade, had leave coming. For reasons I never knew, I was made permanent 1st lieutenant over four other officers senior to me when we sailed for the Philippines in January. I continued as 1st lieutenant until I was discharged on points in December, 1945. The only action I saw was in the invasion of Okinawa in April, 1945. The rest of the time was spent transporting troops here and there in the South Pacific and training for invasions.

1946, January -- I went back to New Hampshire Insurance Company as Special Agent for Eastern Massachusetts with the office in Boston. Ruth nearly died of spinal meningitis, and we never moved into the house we had purchased in Hingham before I accepted a job with Jack Nelson with the Berry Insurance Agency at 819 Elm Street in Manchester. I had concluded that working for a large company was not for me.

1950 -- I became a partner.

1956 -- We merged with Edgerly Agency (Howard Burpee and F. Edgerly, his uncle).

1968 -- We merged with Robert S. Perkins to form Burpee, Griffin, and Perkins.

1973-74 -- We made an unsuccessful merger with Bill Stone; this merger was dissolved after one year.

1980 -- Howard Burpee retired and moved to Old Orchard Beach, Maine.

Ruth had finished only her junior year at the University of New Hampshire when we were married in 1941. About 1960 she started taking courses at the University, St. Anselm's, and Notre Dame. She received her A.B. degree in education from the University of New Hampshire in 1963. That year she started teaching in Manchester. In 1982 she was still teaching the first grade at Parker Varney School in West Manchester. For some years then she had been saying she would retire -- "next year, maybe." She was still playing tennis, starting golf, skiing downhill and cross country. On vacations she did much reading and painting, mostly watercolor, in the past few years.

Ruth and I resided in Bedford, New Hampshire (1982). I played tennis in the summer two or three times a week, swam at the YMCA about three times a week, and in the winter did downhill and cross-country skiing from our house in Franconia, which was built in 1972. We owned a similar house in Woodstock, but it was taken over by the State for the construction of the I-93 interchange in 1970. I occasionally went bass fishing and developed an interest in bird watching. In 1982 I was planning to retire in 1984, and in addition to the above activities I hoped to study geology and anthropology.

Part of the year when farm work permitted, he attended a public school until he was seventeen years old. During the War of 1812 the British occupied old Fort George, rebuilt and strengthened it. Abraham, who was then seven years old, took a great interest in the soldiers and became a fast friend of the chief musician who taught him to play the flute.

About 1820 the family moved to Exeter, Maine, and here Abraham met Mary Abbott, daughter of Robert and Sally (Gilman) Abbott recently come to Exeter from Mount Vernon, Maine. Mary was the sister of Susan Abbott who had married Abraham's brother Shubael. She was born in Rome, Maine, September 27, 1807. Marriage intentions of Abraham and Mary were published September 15, 1827. They were married in Exeter October 18, 1827.

On April 3, 1834, Abraham purchased from "the Trustees of the ministerial and School funds in the town of Exeter" the East half of Lot No. 11 in the 10th Range, bounded on the West by Ezekiel Leighton's land. For this land he paid $233. Here he built a home for his family. Three of his sons, William, Albert, and Alonzo fought in the Civil War. Abraham died August 14, 1849, aged 44; Mary, his wife, died May 11, 1871, aged 63. They were buried in Exeter, in the cemetery on Cider Hill Road.

ELISHA⁵ COAN (Abraham⁴, Elisha D.³, Abraham², Peter¹), son of Abraham and Mary (Abbott) Coan, was born in Exeter, Maine, February 22, 1828. He was 21 years old when his father died, the oldest of seven children. Elisha was married to Lucy A. _____ but had no children. He died July 9, 1881, in Exeter and was buried in the family lot in the cemetery on Cider Hill Road.

WILLIAM BLOOMFIELD⁵ COAN (Abraham⁴, Elisha D.³, Abraham², Peter¹), son of Abraham and Mary (Abbott) Coan, was born in Exeter, Maine, October 30, 1830. He went from Maine to Boston, Massachusetts, when he was a young man and was employed as a clerk in the mercantile business. Here in 1854 he married Ada Lenora Hoyt, but several years later divorced her and never remarried.

At the outbreak of the Civil War he was in New York City, a partner in a restaurant on Chambers Street.

At the call of President Lincoln for volunteers to guard the capital, he joined the famous 7th New York Infantry, which was one of the first volunteer organizations to reach Washington, where they were quartered in the Capitol Building and did duty for three months in and about the city. In this organization he served as a non-commissioned officer.

At the expiration of three months his regiment was sent home to New York City where he recruited a company of volunteers for three years' service and was commissioned by the governor a Captain, and assigned to Company E, 48th New York Infantry, August 8, 1861. He served continuously throughout the War and was mustered out September 1, 1865, having attained the rank of Colonel through all the grades from a Captain, at times commanding a Brigade, also a Division. He participated in many of the battles of the War, notably the assault on Fort Wagner, Charlestown, South Carolina; and the assault and capture of Fort Fisher, Wilmington, North Carolina. (Alonzo Coan, The Coan Family)

He was wounded three times--once in the leg, once in the ear, and once in the scalp, the most serious.

Colonel Coan was brave in battle, honest in his dealings, liberal-hearted, unassuming, and quick in his sensibilities. He willfully wronged no man. His sense of honor was keen, and what he believed to be right, that he did. (48th Regiment, New York State Volunteers, A. J. Palmer)

After the war, William settled in Lawrence, Massachusetts, and went into the grocery business with his brother Albert. He was a member of Post 39, Grand Army of the Republic of Massachusetts. He died January 28, 1877.

ALBERT⁵ COAN (Abraham⁴, Elisha D.³, Abraham², Peter¹) was born in Exeter, Maine, October 2, 1840, son of Abraham and Mary (Abbott) Coan. He resided on the home farm until 1861 when he married Martha Burgess of Corinna, Maine. She was born July 8, 1842, the daughter of Crowell and Sarah Burgess.

On the breaking out of the war of the rebellion, he enlisted in Captain Abbott Coan's Company E, 12th Regiment, Maine Volunteers, which regiment was assigned to the New England Brigade, commanded by General (Judge) Shepley of Portland, Maine. The regiment sailed from Boston, Massachusetts, for Ship Island in the famous ship Constitution in January, 1862. Ship Island, in the Gulf of Mexico, was the rendezvous of an expedition to capture New Orleans. Encountering a storm off Cape Hatteras and the ship proving unseaworthy, they, after a serious experience, reached Fortress Monroe, Virginia, where on the beach without food or shelter they remained several days until other transports were sent to their relief and proceeded thence to Ship Island.

When Admiral Farragut's fleet sailed into the Mississippi to bombard Forts Jackson and St. Philip, the 12th Maine accompanied it on transports and during the bombardment were landed and sent through the swamps to the rear of St. Philip, Captain Abbott Coan's Company wading to their armpits in mud and water, pushing boats loaded with their arms and rations, and, when the Forts surrendered, it did good service in picking up prisoners who sought to escape by leaving the Forts after their capture by the navy.

The 12th Maine entered New Orleans with the victorious army on the 24th day of April, and took up their quarters in the U. S. Mint, but their rest was of short duration and Captain Coan's Company was at once dispatched to Lakeport, on Lake Foutchartrain, and there surprised a steamer just arrived from Mobile, capturing the vessel and entire crew. A short time after, in a raid up the Jackson railroad, Captain Coan's Company, in early morning, surprised the camp of General Jeff Thompson, "the swamp fox of Louisiana," dispersed his command, killing several and taking others as prisoners. Captain Coan captured the sword and spurs of General Thompson which he had not time to put on when the attack was made.

The 12th Maine participated in General Wetzell's Campaign in the summer of 1862 and operated on the lower Mississippi during the following winter. Albert Coan served continuously with his command and was made a Sergeant in his Company for faithful and honorable service. During the winter of 1862-63, Captain Abbott Coan contracted fever, brought on by arduous service and died in a hospital at New Orleans.

Early in the following year, the 12th Maine with other troops proceeded to the rear of Port Hudson and took part in that memorable siege, resulting in its surrender on July 5, 1863, which, with the fall of Vicksburg the previous day, freed the Mississippi from rebel control. During the siege of Port Hudson, Sergeant Albert Coan was sent to look after a convalescent camp at Thibodeauxville, on the Bayou Lafouche. Here, early one morning, the camp was surprised by a cavalry force of General Kirby Smith's army that had entered Western Louisiana in an attempt to raise the siege of Port Hudson. Sergeant Coan rallied his command and made a stout resistance, but being greatly outnumbered was obliged to surrender as a prisoner of war. The Confederate command then moved with their prisoners to the junction of Bayou Lafouche and the Mississippi River where, during an assault upon the fort there situated, Sergeant Coan made his escape, and crossing the Mississippi in a "dugout" rejoined his command. In the summer of 1864, the 12th Maine were sent north and participated for a time in the operations of General Grant before Petersburg, Virginia, but were later sent to oppose General Early's Advance on Washington and under General Sheridan participated in the battles of Opequan, Winchester, Fisher's Hill and Cedar Creek. He served a full three years' term and at the end of that time received an honorable discharge. (Alonzo Coan, The Coan Family, pp. 7-9.

After the war Albert located in Lawrence, Massachusetts. His wife Martha had died during his first year with the army. Albert's brother William had located in Lawrence also so he and William went into business together. On December 15, 1866, in Middleton, Albert married second Clara A. Johnson who was born about 1846 in Andover, daughter of Gardner Johnson. They lived in Lawrence until Albert died on May 16, 1884.

CHARLES SHEPHERD⁶, the son of Isaiah Lord and Hannah Frances (Hooper) Shepherd, was born in Castine, Maine, in 1870. On September 1, 1887, he and two of his friends, Frank Goodenow and Charles Anderson, were sailing the Goodenow yacht, Marie, out of Castine harbor. At that time the steamer City of Richmond was entering the harbor, and the boys sailed too close to the steamer so that when they tacked, the wind left their sails. In spite of the Richmond's changing course, she struck the yacht and sank her instantly. The boys jumped overboard. Charles Shepherd was the best swimmer of the three and was seen swimming on his back by passengers on the steamer. He suddenly disappeared. The other two boys were picked up by boats lowered by the Richmond, but there was no trace of Charles. No one knows what happened, but it is believed he must have been struck by the paddles of the steamer or by some part of the yacht as it went down. Charles's mother was standing at the window of their home and saw the whole accident. The entire town was affected by the tragedy, and Mr. Locke, minister of the church Charles and his family attended, devoted his sermon the next Sunday to the accident. Charles was a member of his Sunday School class.

LEANDER SAMUEL⁵ COAN (Samuel⁴, Elisha D.³, Abraham², Peter¹), son of Samuel and Hannah (Skinner) Coan, was born in Exeter, Maine, November 17, 1837. He married July 3, 1860, Faustina M. Knowlton, daughter of Abraham and Beatrice (Whiting) Knowlton. About this time--1859 and 1860--he was pastor of Methodist churches in Northport and Pittston. Faustina died December 30, 1866. He married second July 26, 1867, Martha J. Wilkins, who was born in Albion, Maine, in 1838, daughter of Dr. Isaac C. and Mary Jane (Brown) Wilkins of Brownville. Martha was educated in the Brownville public schools. She was a teacher of physical culture in the schools of Houlton, Eastport, Machias, and Calais, Maine, as well as St. Stephens, New Brunswick. She was a member of the Congregational Church in Alton, New Hampshire, where she taught Sunday School. She also belonged to the Woman's Relief Corps of Dover, New Hampshire.

For a complete account of Leander's life there follows his biography written by his brother, Dr. Elisha Coan, for Better In The Mornin', Leander's book of Old Corporal poems:

His parents, belonging to the humbler walks of life, were by no means lacking in intelligence, and they sought to give their children that which would stand them in hand better than the wealth which they could not bestow,--an education and an honest name. His early life was spent in the common and high schools of the towns of Exeter and Garland.

At a very early age he showed a strong inclination to become a preacher, and while yet very young would return from church and preach the sermon he had heard over again to his parents and relatives; going through the whole sermon with great solemnity, using his own words, however, but words very apt and accurate to the subject.

Later on in life he fell in with associates who were believers in liberal doctrines, and for a time he was afloat upon the sea of scepticism and doubt. At the age of twenty, while engaged in teaching at Brewer Village, Maine, he experienced a sudden radical change in his views upon religion, and became a working, sterling Christian. A few months previous to this change he had settled upon the law as his profession, and went to Bangor to study with Ex-Governor Kent; but, finding himself deficient in some of the languages, decided to take private instructions in them and teach school for a while. His conversion, like Paul's, made a complete revolution in his life, and he soon determined to preach the "Gospel of the Blessed Master."

Finishing his theological studies, he was graduated from the Theological Seminary at Bangor, Maine, in the summer of 1862. Supplying the Congregational Church at Amherst, Maine, until the summer of 1863, he was ordained over that church and remained until the spring of 1864, when he spent his vacation in Cohasset, Mass. In August, 1864, his long pent-up patriotism burst the bounds that had confined him, and he enlisted as a private in the Sixty-first Massachusetts Volunteers, with the promise that, when the battalion of six companies was increased to a full regiment, entitling them to a chaplain, he should have that position. Meantime he acted as chaplain for his battalion, and as the war drew near its close, and no more men were required, his regiment was never filled, and consequently he was not commissioned chaplain. After the war he preached at Boothbay, Me., three years, Brownville, Me., three years, Bradford, Me., six months, Somerset and Fall River, Mass., about three years, and Alton, N.H., about five years. He began to write verses not far from 1860, and about the first piece was entitled "Change the Figures." "The Reply of Night" and "Morning in Spring-time" were written not far from this time.

The last piece of the "Old Corporal Series" was written a few days before the State election in Maine, which took place September 8, 1879. The piece entitled "Fall In." I think, if he had been spared until the present writing, January 15, 1880, that the Old Corporal's wooden leg would have come down with more "vicious vim" than when he heard of Hill's speech in Congress.

I can do no better than to quote the first part of an obituary in the editorial columns of the "Independent Statesman," published at Concord, N.H., a short time after his death. The lyric referred to was the "Soldier's Farewell," and was his last effort.

DEATH OF REV. LEANDER S. COAN

"By a postal card, thoughtfully forwarded by Commander C. J. Richards, Past Commander, Department of New Hampshire Grand Army of the Republic, we have received the sorrowful intelligence of the death, on Wednesday morning, at his residence in Alton, of Rev. Leander S. Coan, better known to our readers as the author of the Old Corporal Ballads, most of which were first given to the public in these columns. Although he was known to have been for some time in poor health, and latterly quite ill, his friends at a distance were totally unprepared to hear of his demise. In the prime of life, and apparently of a rugged constitution, being compactly built, with broad shoulders, large, well-poised head and a ruddy countenance, beaming always with good nature, he seemed destined to a long life.

Only a few days since--September 16--we received a note from him, enclosing the poem which we published last week, entitled 'The Soldier's Farewell,' which is so characteristic of the man and the true soldier of the Union and of the Cross, that we give it here verbatim:--

"'Friend Stevens: Please find a little lyric enclosed. I would rather have my name at the foot of the piece than over it, so have erased it there.

Was sick in bed and couldn't get to Manchester. Guess I will die, but will die game. Yours, PARSON.'"

He had been out of health for nearly a year, but his physicians had not thought his case a critical one; consequently his death came with a terrible suddenness to his friends and relatives. His funeral occurred September 27th, in the church he had labored in for five years, conducted by the Masons, of which order he was an enthusiastic member. The ceremony was very impressive, especially that at the grave, when the whispering pinetrees in the background and the mellow autumn sunlight softened the senses and hallowed the spot forever to some of us. I wish to add my tribute to his memory here on these pages. I must confess that I was never so enthusiastic in regard to his writings as he wished me to be, and I will only say in excuse that I never saw his sweetest songs until after he had been transferred to the Grand Army beyond the River. As I was perusing some of the gems contained in this volume, I chanced to take up the Gospel Hymns No. 2, and read these lines,--

'Strange we never prize the music
Till the sweet-voiced bird is flown.'

I would have given worlds if I had had then at my command at that moment to have had him back with us just for one hour.

E. S. COAN, M.D.

Garland, January 15, 1880."

The poem that follows is from Leander's book of ballads, Better In The Mornin'. It is about the Civil War Old Corporal and seems fitting for this genealogy.

THE OLD CORPORAL'S MITE.

There's a dollar, parson,
An' I want to have it go
For the forefather's monument,
Which seems to be risin' slow.
The year that I enlisted
I tried to get down to the place,
To see where they landed and wintered,
For I belong to their race.

But I couldn't get a furlough
To run down, not for a day'
An' somehow it slipped my memory
After I marched away.
An' so many things have happened,
The losin' uv my leg,
An' stumpin' around these many years
On this ere wooden peg,--

I somehow forgot they were buildin'
A monument down there,
So I never yet have given
What I may call my share.
We can't afford to forget them!
It will pay us well to build

In memory uv the fathers who Gave us the soil we've tilled.

An' they gave us a slight more, parson,
Ef our eyes were open to see!
They died a-foundin' a nation,
Ez we fought to keep it free.
When I think uv their freezin' in winter,
An' starvin' when crops were poor,
An' fightin' the savage Indians,
An' the fate that seemed so sure.

Standin' there, bold an' unflinchin',
Ez firm ez their Plymouth Rock,
Pestilence thinnin' the number
Uv the little undaunted flock;
Or think uv their places of worship,
Uv the hardships they underwent,
I think we have good reason
To thank them, an' be content.

An' I just feel ashamed to murmur,
Ez I'm sometimes tempted to do,
When I think uv what they suffered,
An' what they all went through.
Where would be Yale or Harvard,
An' the shaft at Bunker Hill,
Ef they had been lacking in conscience,
Or muscle, or pluck, or will?

Ef they'd lacked religi'n an' learnin',
I've been askin myself uv late,
Could they have planned a Nation,
Or planted the seed uv a State?
Where would be Boston 'n Chicago,
Ef they had failed to stand?
An' where the flag that's floatin'
In peace over all the land?

Each year we give for monuments,
For far less deserving men;
Fly buntin' an' burn powder
On Fourth of July, an' then
Complete, but only on paper,
A monumental plan,
For the man who died a foundin'
A Race, on the Rights uv Man.

An' I won't neglect it longer,
So here's the dollar for me;
I'll stump round 'n' earn another,
For those who kept it free!
I can save for such noble offerings,

Ef I do wear a wooden leg;
Ef all felt this ez they ought to
The cause wouldn't have to beg.

So accept the old corporal's offering,
For the monument on the shore,
Where now as when they landed
Atlantic surges roar.
And while the sun shines or storm-clouds
Shall darken our changing skies,
May it stand complete and sacred
In other Pilgrim eyes.

And loyal to conscience and duty,
May they tread the hallowed sod,
Where rests the dust of heroes,
Freemen and men of God.
May we keep alive the lessons
Their lives and valor teach,
So long as our race has being,
And freedom of thought and speech.

Leander died in Alton, New Hampshire, September 24, 1879. His wife Martha died in 1925. They were both buried in Alton.

He received his early education in the public schools of his native town, in Garland High School, and in East Corinth Academy. When he was 10 years old, his family moved to Garland. On July 22, 1862, he enlisted in the service of the United States in the 20th Maine Regiment of Volunteers, Company D. He served in that regiment fifteen months, during which time they marched over a thousand miles and took part in five battles and skirmishes. The battles included Fredericksburg and Gettysburg. He was Corporal of the Color Guard at Gettysburg and was one of the survivors of that guard of the 20th Maine who stood by the colors there. He was with the regiment on every march and in every battle during the fifteen months mentioned.

On October 26, 1863, he was transferred to the United States Signal Corps and was assigned duty on the Signal Station at General Mead's Headquarters. He remained there until January, 1865, when he was assigned to duty on the Signal Station in front of Petersburg. He was on the skirmish line in front of Mead's army when Lee surrendered.

After the war he taught school and studied medicine in the office of Dr. David Evans (Bowdoin, M.D., 1850) in Garland. He studied at the Medical School of Maine at Bowdoin and received his degree in 1870. He practiced his profession at Bradford until 1875 and then at Garland. In 1887 he moved his practice to Auburn where he lived at the corner of High and Drummond streets. He transferred his membership from the Congregational Church in Garland to the High Street Congregational Church in Auburn. He was President of the YMCA and surgeon of the Burnside Post, Grand Army of the Republic. His other memberships included the Maine Medical Association and the Androscoggin County Medical Association of which he was once president.

February 16, 1871, he married Mary Abbie Swett, who was born May 31, 1845, daughter of Noah and Nancy Rice (Wheeler) Swett of Garland. After a long illness, he died May 30, 1896, with a disease of the lungs. His wife died April 10, 1938; they both were buried in Oak Hill Cemetery in Auburn.

MARION SADIE⁶ COAN (Elisha S.⁵, Samuel⁴, Elisha D.³, Abraham², Peter¹) was born in Garland, Maine, May 17, 1875, the daughter of Dr. Elisha Skinner and Mary Abbie (Swett) Coan. She was graduated from Edward Little High School in Auburn, Maine, and from Bates College, where she was a member of Phi Beta Kappa, in the Class of 1899. From 1899 until 1901 she was an instructor at Bar Harbor, Maine. She received her M.A. degree from Columbia University in 1902. From 1902 to 1904 she taught at the normal school in Brockport, New York; 1904-1908, at Hunter College High School. In 1908 she became Head of the Annex at Hunter College and held that position until 1922 when she became librarian at Hunter.

Marion was frequently a representative of Bates College at various academic functions. One of these was the North Atlantic section of the American Association of University Women which she attended in Philadelphia February, 1923. She was always interested in history and hoped someday to do research on Captain Elisha Davis Coan of Castine, her great grandfather. She wrote "A Revolutionary Prison Diary" on the journal of Dr. Jonathan Haskins, another great grandfather, from Old Mill Prison May, 1777 to May, 1779, in Plymouth, England. This article appeared in New England Quarterly, Vol. XVII, No. 2, June, 1944. She also wrote "Historical English Grammar," which appeared in Teachers' College Record. She was a member of the Bates Key; Council of Phi Beta Kappa Alumnae, New York; and the Women's University Club, New York.

Marion retired to Winterport, Maine. Her interest in history was apparent when she purchased one of the oldest houses in town. It was the homestead of Benjamin Thompson, who was clerk at Winterport in the fateful year of 1812; and because he refused to deliver town documents to the enemy, he was made a prisoner and incarcerated in the dungeon at Fort George at Castine. His home had a large bake oven where George Little, a relative of Benjamin, was concealed after being seriously wounded by a saber in an engagement with the British. Also there was a space above the false ceiling in the living room where the Thompsons hid their silver and other valuables when an English looting party raided the town.

Marion died in this old house April 11, 1958. She was buried in Oak Hill Cemetery, Auburn, Maine, in the lot of her father, Dr. Elisha Skinner Coan.

He was a teacher in Houlton, Maine, 1905-1906 and principal of the high school 1906-1909. June 20,

1908, in Salem, Massachusetts, he married Mary Chisholm Macintosh. He was superintendent of schools in Houlton-Littleton, Maine, 1909-1913, and in 1909 he began a two-year term as president of the Maine Teachers' Association. ALONZO⁵ COAN AND DESCENDANTS

WILLIAM ALBERT⁶ COAN (William B.⁵, Abraham⁴, Elisha D.³, Abraham², Peter¹), son of William Bloomfield and Ada Lenora (Hoyt) Coan, was born May 27, 1855.

He served as a member of the Signal Corps of the U. S. regular army from 1876 to 1890. He assisted in the building of what is now the Northern Pacific Telegraph Line to the Pacific. He served in the Sioux Indian Country and among other hostile tribes for many years. He died at Sacramento, California, June 9, 1911, and was buried in Green Mountain Cemetery, Boulder, Colorado.

Alonzo Coan, William's uncle, was one of the original incorporators of Green Mountain Cemetery and arranged for William's body to be shipped to Boulder for burial since William had no family. (Alonzo Coan, The Coan Family, p. 6).

ABRAHAM SIMPSON⁶ COAN (Albert⁵, Abraham⁴, Elisha D.³, Abraham², Peter¹), was born in Maine, son of Albert and Martha (Burgess) Coan. While his father was fighting in the Civil War, his mother died. Abraham was cared for by relatives in Exeter, Maine, until after the war when his father returned, settled in Lawrence, Massachusetts, and married again. Abraham went to Lawrence and attended a public school there. Later he worked as a clerk in a store in that city. "In 1883 he went to Silver City, New Mexico, where he engaged in mining. In 1885 he located in Boulder County, Colorado, where he had charge of large mining interests. He lived in Boulder the rest of his life." (Alonzo Coan, The Coan Family, p. 9)

Abraham married Nellie _____. She was born in 1860. Abraham was active in the Republican Party and a truant officer for the Boulder School District until his death. He died in 1940; Nellie, in 1942. They were both buried in Green Mountain Cemetery in the Coan lot.

⁵ ALONZO ⁴ COAN (Abraham, ³ Elisha D., ² Abraham, ¹ Peter), son of Abraham and Mary (Abbott) Coan, was born in Exeter, Maine, June 6, 1842. He resided on the farm where he was born, in winter attending the district and high schools of his native town until he was sixteen years of age when he entered the employ of I. W. Truell & Co., dry goods merchants of Lawrence, Massachusetts. There he remained until the beginning of the war of the rebellion in 1861 when he returned to Maine and in August enlisted as a private in a company being organized by Dr. John B. Wilson, of Exeter, which, owing to some uncertainty as to whether their services would be required by the general government, was not mustered into the service of the United States until December 21st of that year. Dr. Wilson was commissioned Captain of the Company which was assigned to the 15th Regiment of Maine Volunteers, Infantry, receiving in that organization the designation of "H" Company. Alonzo Coan served continuously with this regiment throughout the war and was mustered out July 6, 1866, having attained the rank of a Captain.

The following record of his service was taken from the files of the War Department, Washington, D. C., by a committee of the Colorado Commandery of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion of the United States of which he was a member.

On leaving the army, Captain Coan, after residing at Bangor, Maine, until the spring of 1868, located in DeKalb County, Missouri. Here he bought timber and farming lands and engaged in the lumber business. On July 12, 1875, at Maysville, Missouri, he married Marietta Jane Lancaster, born at Maysville, February 25, 1852, daughter of Manford and Sarah Ann (Roberts) Lancaster, and the following year removed to Boulder County, Colorado, where he engaged in mining. He made his home at Boulder, but his mining operations were conducted in several counties of the State of Colorado and also in Arizona, New Mexico, and California.

Manfred C. McClure

MANFRED COAN McCLURE⁷, the son of George Albert and Edith Lancaster (Coan) McClure, was born in Portland, Oregon, May 26, 1912. His name was supposed to have been Manford, but he was registered incorrectly by the doctor as Manfred; so he has always been Manfred. He attended the University of Colorado in Boulder for three years and was a member of Phi Delta Theta fraternity. From December 8, 1941, until September 2, 1945, he was on active duty with the United States Navy during World War II; and was on Wake Island when it was bombed four days after Pearl Harbor. In recalling the attack, he said: "We didn't have much armament. We had two 5-inch batteries, six 3-inch batteries, and aircraft guns. They bombed and strafed us practically every day."

Less than two weeks later on December 24, 1941, he was captured by the Japanese and became a prisoner of war. Details of his internment still remain vivid:

12 days of freezing temperatures in the straw-lined hold of the Japanese freighter Nitta Maru, frost-bitten fingers and toes, destination Shanghai, China Area 9 POW war camps; then moving by train across Japan, glimpsing evidence of United States bombings, the Tokyo train terminal flattened. The final stop was a camp in the mountains outside of Aomori, 10 miles west of the east coast of Japan, and grueling labor in an open-pit iron ore mine.

When a Japanese lieutenant appeared before the 200 prisoners of war there one morning in September, 1945, and said there would soon be an armistice between Japan and the United States, "no one believed him," Manfred said. But when a United States fighter plane flew over the prison camp and dropped C rations and clothing "and flapped its wings at us, we knew we were in good hands."

Manfred was transported along with the other freed men to the Japanese port of Sendai; and that is where for the first time in almost five years he saw an American flag flying. As he told the story, Manfred was visibly moved recalling the sight. Silent for a few moments, he appeared unable to find the right words. Finally all he said was, "It really gets you in the throat."

Manfred was awarded three medals: a World War II Victory Medal, an American Campaign Medal, and the Asiatic Pacific Campaign Medal. (Prisoner of War account taken from an article by Jan McCoy, Boulder Daily Camera, Boulder, Colorado, July 9, 1982.) October 11, 1945, he received an honorable discharge at San Francisco, California.

On August 2, 1927, at Boulder, Colorado, he married Ruth E. Henson, who was born in Louisville, Kentucky, June 5, 1918, the daughter of Elisha K. and Lulu (Klett) Henson. Ruth attended North Colorado College and was graduated from Burr Business College. She was employed as a legal secretary, and was a member of Sacred Heart Church.

Manfred was a surveyor from 1934 until 1941 with the United States Bureau of Public Roads and an insurance adjuster with the General Adjustment Bureau from 1949 until 1975 when he retired. He was a member of American X-Prisoners of War; the Elks, B.P.O.E. #566 in Boulder; the Mason, Columbia Lodge #14, A. F. and A. M.; Boulder #7 R.A.M.; Mount Sinai Commandery #7 Knights Templar. His interests included sports, gardening, fishing, and local history.

1913, son of Ralph Alonzo and Pansey (Burton) Coan. The following was taken from an account of his life which he wrote for this genealogy.

I graduated from a private military high school, San Diego Army and Navy Academy, in 1931 and went to Menlo Junior College, Menlo Park, California, on a football scholarship that fall. At that time Menlo was an unpublicized adjunct of Stanford University, which used its athletic teams to give one additional year of training to its prospective players without sacrificing any eligibility. I dropped out at the end of the term in December, 1931, and went to sea in the merchant marine where I had been spending my summers for several years.

In the fall of 1932 I went to Stanford and was a member of the freshman football squad. However, I was badly injured in a game in late November and was advised by the doctors not to play football anymore. This injury ended my scholarship; and by this time the Great Depression was well started, and Dad couldn't afford to keep both Burton and me in college. I went to sea as a steady occupation serving in the "black gangs" of many different ships, belonging to several different steamship lines, until April, 1934, when there was a strike which effectively stopped all United States shipping for over a full year.

The depression made it extremely difficult to get any other kind of job, so I decided to go back to college and become a lawyer like my father. I had saved up quite a lot of money in the meantime, so I could pay my own way. I went to the University of Oregon for a couple of quarters, but the restrictions of a relatively small school in a small city seemed too great after my previous freedom in the merchant marine and at Stanford, which is close to San Francisco. In January, 1935, I changed to the University of Washington in Seattle, which was a much larger school in a big seaport city where I felt much more at ease. Besides, they had a Naval R.O.T.C. which took me on with open arms because of my seagoing experience, even though I was well into my sophomore year. The fact that I intended to go on to law school would make it possible to complete the required four years of R.O.T.C. although I would be graduating in 1937, just two and a half years away.

At that time a student could start law school at the beginning of the senior year and graduate with a B.A. degree at the end of the first year of the three-year law course. This was the way I intended to go. Here I joined Chi Psi fraternity. I was commissioned in the Naval Reserve; and because I was getting rather short of money, I decided to take advantage of what was known as the "Thompson Act", a provision just recently passed by Congress that allowed newly commissioned reserve officers to apply for a year's active duty for training. I was ordered to the USS Astoria, a light cruiser, in which I served for about eight months and was then transferred to the USS Oklahoma, a battleship of World War I vintage. In both of these ships as a "fresh caught" ensign I was very insignificant and relatively low in the esteem of even the enlisted crewmen. However, I gained a lot of knowledge about how to get along in the navy and became qualified to be the ODD (Officer of the Deck) underway.

The year of active duty was stretched out quite a bit, but I was finally released to inactive duty in September, 1940, too late to go back to law school for the fall term. I got a job managing two theaters in Saint Helens, Oregon, a small lumber-mill-and-county-seat town about 35 miles down the Columbia River from Portland. I fully intended to go back to school the next spring; however, I never made it.

February 15, 1941, in Portland, Oregon, I married Shirley Fulton, who was born July 6, 1913, in Victoria, British Columbia, Canada, daughter of David Chrichton and Veda (Sully) Fulton. She was graduated in 1937 from Marylhurst College, Marylhurst, Oregon, with a B.A. degree and a B.S. degree in library science. She was an art teacher and librarian at West Linn, Oregon, High School. While we were on our honeymoon, I received orders to report for active duty as assistant engineering officer of the USS Fox DD 234, a World War I four-stack type destroyer, which was based in Seattle having just been recommissioned. I was in the Fox when World War II began; and we spent the first year of the war in Alaskan waters, a really miserable experience. I was then a lieutenant, j.g., and in June, 1942, while still on the Fox I made full lieutenant. I was transferred next to the USS Kendrick DD 613 operating in the Caribbean Sea and soon taking part in the Casablanca Invasion of North Africa.

I left the Kendrick for a short course at a school for prospective executive and commanding officers of destroyers and destroyer escorts at Miami, Florida. From there I went to Mare Island Navy Yard, Vallejo, California, as the prospective executive officer of the USS Whitman DE 24. The Whitman was commissioned July 3, 1943; and after about six weeks of "shakedown", we joined the Pacific Fleet and took part in the Gilbert Island (Tarawa and Makin) Campaign. Next the invasion of the Marshall Islands started with the taking of Kwajalein Island. After Kwajalein was taken, we had to go back to Pearl Harbor for some repair work in the drydock. The commanding officer, Carl Bull, was relieved, and I had my first command--quite a thrill! Carl went back to the mainland to take command of another about-to-be-commissioned ship, the USS Gilligan. Both commander and ship I would meet in the future.

After the repair work we went back to the Marshall Islands and were in on the Eniwetok landing. About this time I was promoted to lieutenant commander. Things then quieted down for a spell, and we went back to Pearl Harbor again where we spent about two months working with the submarines as final training for them before they left on a war patrol. We would play hide-and-peek-type games every day and sometimes over night. If I do say so, we got to be pretty good at it, which came in handy later on.

Next came the Mariana Islands Campaign starting with Saipan. This whole campaign was based out of Eniwetok, and we acted as screening patrols for the fuel and ammunition groups, shuttling them back and forth to resupply the main body and the landing forces. On the third trip out we intercepted a Japanese sub just as it fired a torpedo at one of the larger ships in the convoy. We managed to get in the way enough to have it hit the good old Whitman way up forward (about 25 feet from the bow). Thank God it was that far up, as we initially lost all power from the shock of the explosion (The Whitman was a diesel-electric-powered ship, just like a submarine) and had a huge fuel oil fire that lit up the whole area for at least three or four miles. It was just after 2 a.m. We were able to get things running again in a few minutes and put out the fire about 10 a.m.

The entire convoy had scattered, then regathered, and went on without us, which was what they should do. At any rate, after we got the fire out, the ship was so badly out of trim that the bow was actually under water and the screws were nearly out of the water. What a sitting duck! I'll never understand why that Jap didn't hit us again. He could have put us under with one round from his deck gun!

Anyway, we pumped out some of the flooded forward compartments and flooded a few after spaces so that we could get the propellers nearly all the way back in the water again and what was left of the bow mostly above water. Then using the pull of the separate screws to steer, we began backing toward Eniwetok which was about 250 miles away. We made it almost to the entrance of the lagoon before the tug came out for us.

After they got us patched up somewhat so we could make it on our own, we were sent back to Mare Island for a complete overhaul and refitting which kept us in the yard for 18 weeks--a really great interlude. We lost seven men, and I got a decoration, as did several others.

It was then the summer of 1944, and we went back to Eniwetok in time for the last of the Palau Island Campaign; then on to the Philippines. Sometime in late 1944 I was relieved by a new CO and was just riding along on the flagship waiting for transportation back to Pearl Harbor for reassignment when the Captain of the USS Walke DD 723 was killed by a Japanese aircraft strafing during the landing at Lingayen. His executive officer was new to the ship. He had been on board less than two weeks and didn't feel capable of taking over, so I got the job. I was given a "spot" temporary promotion to full commander, the appropriate rank for the commanding officer of a fleet destroyer. When I detached from that ship, I reverted to lieutenant commander; but when I reached the point in time to be considered for selection for commander, that promotion was almost automatic, and I became a full commander July 1, 1949.

The Walke, although still able to operate had been damaged and so was sent back to Pearl Harbor and then to San Francisco for repairs. When we got to San Francisco, I was relieved and sent to the University of Southern California to be the instructor in seamanship at the N.R.O.T.C. unit. I reported there on March 1, 1945, and soon found I was not cut out to be a teacher-too impatient, and I needed more activity and excitement. I put in a request for sea duty again and got orders just as the war was ending to go to the USS Seminole AKA 108 as executive officer. I tried to catch up with her and was flown to Pearl Harbor, then on to Yokosuka, Japan, only to find that she had left to go back to the East Coast of the United States via the Panama Canal. The only effect of this was to keep me in Japan long enough to qualify for the campaign medal. Isn't that a laugh?

By this time I decided to ask to be a civilian again since I had twice as many points as I needed to get out. October 30, 1945, in Los Angeles I became a reserve officer on inactive duty as of February 13, 1946. I returned to Portland, Oregon, just in time for Christmas 1945. I realized if I went back to finish law school, I would have to start all over if I ever expected to pass the bar. As I had a wife and two small children to support, I had to go to work. I became a real estate salesman for The Simms Company, a commercial and industrial real estate brokerage and property management firm in Portland. Much to everyone's surprise, including my own, I had a knack for the job.

In the fall of 1946 the Navy set about the task of reestablishing its reserve components, and as a result I became the first commanding officer of surface division 13-4 in Portland. They had a reserve battalion made up of three surface divisions and one submarine division. The organization was a little slow in getting ironed out, and it wasn't until about the end of 1948 before we had training vessels permanently assigned. Guess what! The training vessel assigned was none other than the USS Gilligan DE 508; and her first commanding officer, Carl Bull, by then a captain and commanding officer at the Great Lakes Training Center, showed up for the ceremony. What a coincidence!

While I was in the reserve, I had to take two weeks active duty which was usually on a ship operating out of San Diego or San Pedro, or sometimes at a naval station on shore. When the Korean Police Action broke out, I was on one of those tours at the Bremerton Navy Yard; and I can still remember thinking, "Oh, boy! Here we go again. I'll not get out 'til it's over." Well, sure enough, they kept me on for nearly six weeks, but I had too much rank. What they needed was lieutenants, not commanders. So I was told to go home. However, I was on duty long enough to get the Korean Campaign Medal although I never left Bremerton.

In 1960 I was up for promotion to captain; but because of asthma and a cataract on one eye, I couldn't pass the physical. I was retired as a full commander July 1, 1961.

I stayed with The Simms Company until 1952 when another salesman and I decided to form our own firm, the Industrial Realty Corporation. We were very successful, and it wasn't long before Mr. Simms asked me to return. We eventually merged the two companies. There have been many changes over the years as to stock ownership, management, company policy, etc. The company is now (1982) Simms Ferris, Inc., and I have been asked to help out the new owner. I will do what I can, but at my age and with my health not too good, I'm not sure how much help I can be.

Ralph's interests included boating, water skiing, and civic affairs. He was city councilman in Lake Oswego, Oregon, 1961-1967, and president of the council the last two years. He was on the Planning Commission 1968-1978, chairman 1974-1975.

He was a member of the Zoning Appeals Board of Portland, Oregon, 1965-1980. He was a member of the Portland Board of Realtors and served in every office including president in 1967. He also served in almost every office of the Oregon Association of Realtors with which in 1982 he was still affiliated. He was a director and regional vice president of the Society of Industrial Realtors, president of the Portland chapter three times, and still an active member in 1982. For three years, 1971, 1972, 1973, he was a national director of the National Association of Realtors, with which he was still affiliated in 1982, and served as a member of their Washington Legislative Committee 1970-1973. He was a member of Oregon Association's Legislative Committee for about ten years and chairman at least three times.

He belonged to the Columbia River Yacht Club, the University Club of Portland, the Retired Officers Association, the Massachusetts Society of Mayflower Descendants, and the Elks Lodge in Oswego. He and Shirley jointly were member of the Portland Art Association, the Oregon Symphony Society, and the Oregon Museum of Science and Industry. In 1968 Ralph was Realtor of the Year for the Portland Board of Realtors, and a member of Omega Tau Rho of the National Association of Realtors. Omega Tau Rho is a honorary group composed of past officers, directors, etc. He was a former member of Portland Chamber of Commerce and served on many of its committees, chairing several. He also was a member of a number of special committees for city and state.

Ralph's military awards included the Silver Star; Commendation Medal; Purple Heart with two Oak Leaf Clusters; Naval Reserve Medal; American Defense Medal (Fleet Clasp); American, European, and Pacific-Asiatic Campaign Medals (Twelve Battle Stars); World War II Victory Medal; Occupation Forces Medal; and Korean Campaign Medal.

Shirley was a watercolor artist. She studied under Charles Mulvey, Phil Tyler, George Hamilton, Bong Wai Chen, and Rex Brandt, all well-known watercolor artists. Her memberships included Salem Art Association, Watercolor Society of Oregon, Lake Oswego Arts and Crafts League, Lake Area Artists, Sam Jackson Crafty Arts and Buffalo Grass Society, Portland Art Museum, Contemporary Arts and Crafts, Mendocino Art Center (California), Portland Junior League, and the Rivers Edge Athletic Club. She won awards in one-woman and group shows throughout the Northwest, including Sweepstakes and Purchase Award for the Watercolor Society of Oregon, Coos Bay Museum & Portland Fine Arts Guild. Her paintings may be seen in galleries and shows in the Northwest, both public and private, including Bush Barn in Salem, Portland Art Museum, and the Crow's Nest, Lake Oswego. Permanent collections may be seen at Georgia Pacific Building, Bank of California, First National Bank and United States Bank of Oregon, and Oregon Bank in Portland.

Besides being art teacher and librarian at West Linn High School, Oregon, she was librarian at Oregon City High School, art teacher and librarian at Lake Oswego Junior High School, and art supervisor for the West Linn School District. Her other interests included water skiing, golf, church guild, and other volunteer work.

In 1982 Ralph and Shirley lived on the shore of Lake Oswego, Oregon, where Shirley had her studio.

GEORGE¹ COAN was born about 1704 probably in Worms, Germany. He came to America as part of the Palatine immigration of 1710. His mother and father died on the voyage; and he was left with his older brother, Peter, about 13 years old, and younger brother Abraham. There were no records of what happened to Abraham, but Peter and George were both bound out under Governor Hunter's program to take care of the orphans and destitute among the New York Palatines. As has already been discussed in Chapter 1, George was apprenticed to Samuel Mulford of East Hampton, Long Island. However, family tradition says it was Deacon Mulford, the brother of Captain Samuel Mulford, to whom George was bound. At any rate, he was cared for by the Mulford family and expressed his gratitude to these people by naming his first son Mulford.

On December 30, 1730, George married Jane Leek, who was baptized in East Hampton, Long Island, November 19, 1704, the daughter of Philip Jr., and Deborah (Conklin) Leek and granddaughter of Philip and Elizabeth (Day) Leek of Connecticut. The Reverend Nathaniel Huntting performed the ceremony. In 1735 George purchased land and a small dwelling in the North Parish of Guilford, Connecticut, and moved his family there. He also purchased the same for his brother Peter. (See deeds in Chapter 1.) He became a prosperous farmer and lived there the rest of his life. About 1754 a church was erected in North Guilford. The following is quoted from a vote "at a meeting of the proprietors of the Common and undivided land" in September, 1753:..."Voted, That the said Petitioners have liberty to build a Church on the East side of Major Thompson's land, at the parting of the paths, near the South west corner of George Coan's home lot, so as not to incommode the highway." (Bernard Christian Steiner, A History of the Plantation of Menunkatuck and of the Original Town of Guilford, Connecticut [Baltimore: published by the author, 1897], p. 382). He and Jane were members of North Guilford Congregational Church.

George died in North Guilford June 28, 1782; Jane, November 27, 1786, aged 82.

He held somewhat aloof from social affairs, refused proffered offices, but observed the Sabbath, attended church regularly, read the Bible frequently, and held morning and evening prayers at home." He helped to build the First Congregational Church in Killingworth.

Tamze was one of the Killingworth Nettletons who produced artists and journalists. Titus described her as "laborious, faithful, tender." Her nephew was Asahel Nettleton, a distinguished evangelical preacher. She died January 14, 1818.

⁵ GEORGE MUNGER ⁴ COAN (George ³, Gaylord ², Mulford ¹, George ¹) was born in Madison, Connecticut, April 13, 1823, the son of the Reverend George and Mabel (Munger) Coan. He joined the church at age 14 and decided that he would become a missionary. From that time on, he served his God faithfully, not only with his physical and mental ability, but with his money as well. His benevolent giving was a marvel in the community where he lived, and he often denied himself so that he might give to others. In his house there was always a box labeled "The Lord's purse." His health was never good, so he had to give up his dream of being a missionary. He was graduated from Williams College in the Class of 1849.

A year or so after he finished at Williams, he moved to Niles, Michigan, where he became a teacher of music, an organist, and a choir leader. He had rare musical ability which he consecrated to the service of religion. He was quiet and humble, but became an outstanding figure in religious circles in Southwest Michigan. He was an elder in the church and superintendent of the Sunday School.

In January, 1866, he married Carrie M. Rollo. He died at Niles November 23, 1881, aged 58.

GEORGE WHITEFIELD⁵ COAN (Ezra⁴, Gaylord³, Mulford², George¹) was born in Bergen [Byron], New York, December 30, 1817, the son of Ezra and Fanny Maria (Hull) Coan. The following account of George's life was written for this genealogy by Philip Burr⁷ Coan of San Diego, California. It was based on his personal copy of Frederick G. Coan's Yesterdays in Persia and Kurdistan (Claremont, Cal.: Saunders Studio Press, 1939).

George helped work the farm, plowed when grown enough, and attended the Byron village school. To prepare for college, the only child of the family to do so, he studied advanced books suggested by teachers, clergy, and other college graduates. He learned well so that in 1843, at age twenty-five, he enrolled in the sophomore class at Williams College and was graduated in 1846. Good in mathematics, he also was interested in astronomy. To help pay his living costs, he tutored others and had a paying job with the college observatory.

In the fall of 1846, he entered Union Theological Seminary in New York City, again earning his way by tutoring in a wealthy family and teaching singing. He was graduated from Union in 1849 and ordained June 6 by the Presbytery of Genesee.

George and his uncle, Titus Coan, missionary to Hawaii, had known and liked each other since about 1826. Titus had requested George as a missionary to Hawaii, and George was gladly ready to go there when he finished study at Union Seminary, but the mission board had urgent need of him in Persia, where one of its missionaries had recently died. George gave up his preference in favor of duty and the needs of the mission to Persia. At this time he married Sarah (Power) Kip [Kipp], who was born in Hudson, New York, April 17, 1821.

On June 18, 1849, George and Sarah sailed from Boston via the Mediterranean and Black Seas to Trebizonde, Turkey. A further six-week caravan trip (with camels) took them to the city of Urumia, Persia, on October 13, 1849. All Persia then was feudally ruled. Farmers paid for use of the land with heavy tithes in produce to provincial governors appointed by the Shah.

The Coans based their family life and religious work with Moslems and Nestorian Christians in a walled mission compound of six to ten mission families two miles outside of the city. A brook for gardening and non-potable water supply ran through the compound, which contained schools, servants' homes and stables for horses and cows. Mission families grew their own vegetables and animal fodder. Dangerous groups of rebellious Kurd tribesmen lived lost in the mountains and often in single-night attacks raided small towns and colonies for loot of all kinds.

The Coans, while learning Syriac and Persian customs, spent eleven months in the nearby hills at safe villages. The second winter they lived in a twenty-house Nestorian village called Memikan at a 7,000 foot altitude in the Gawar plain 45 miles due west of Urumia. George aided Dr. Rhea in visiting nearby villages to preach and encourage. They lived in Memikan in a 20' x 16' room with one door and a glass window they brought with them and set in a sunny wall. There were so many fleas in the room that the couple, before going to bed, stood in a wide bowl of water and scraped the fleas from their skin into the water to drown, hopefully. Their room had one wall and a front-door alley common to a small cattle stable. Daytimes, Sarah taught prayers, the Bible, sewing crafts, and useful household habits to girls and women of and near Memikan. Her only schoolroom was her 20' x 16' one-room house.

On severest winter days, Memikan had snow drifts up to 18 feet depth and temperatures of 20° to 30°F. below zero. The single-wall window was blocked. Deep snow forced the natives to dig tunnels to a nearby spring so that the cattle could drink. It followed that bad sanitation was endemic in the area and only the hardy natives and missionaries survived.

Returning in 1852 to safer, cleaner and organized mission life at the compound outside Urumia, George and Sarah began their permanent routine. This was winning converts, servicing converted and native Christians, instructing in the Bible and academic subjects, and teaching homemaking classes. George made frequent horseback or carriage field trips, lasting a few days to six months.

Life for their children in the mission compound was active and enjoyable, although the mission seldom had other children of the ages of the young Coans. Each child had chores and was paid for the work with the money being sent to America for investment toward the children's futures. The chores also were exemplary to the native Persians both in and outside the compound who thought no child of a "sahib" should do manual work. After prayers each morning, Sarah taught her own and other mission children Latin, mathematics, English literature and grammar, and all secondary school subjects needed to enter an American college.

Recreation included riding, driving the three or four saddle and carriage horses, and exploring outside the compound. The boys also liked to watch mission industry, such as the printing house, where native Christians cast Syriac type; printed tracts, hymns and books; then handstitched and bound the volumes. Both young Fred and his father George were very musical, the father having "perfect pitch" hearing. In 1872, two young missionary couples arrived, the Rev. and Mrs. J. M. Oldfather and the Rev. and Mrs. W. L. Whipple. They brought an eight-stop organ with newly developed tone combinations, which Mrs. Whipple played with skill. Her music enthralled the young teen-age Fred. Also, the children enjoyed accompanying their parents on carriage and riding trips, even sleigh trips in winter, to visit the city, friends across the valley, parishioners' farms; or on longer journeys to meet incoming personnel or to show love for departing missionaries. Most trips required horse-mounted guards against Kurdish bandits; the longer and larger the trip, the more guards.

In 1864 George and his family took their first furlough year returning to the United States. Their route back-traced their 1849 incoming route to Trebizonde and by sea to home. They resided for the year in Hudson, N.Y., Sarah's birthplace.

Eight years later in 1872, Edward Coan, now in his late teens, again made the "homebound" trip without family members but in company with Dr. John H. Shedd, Mrs. Joseph P. Cochran, and her son Joseph, a close friend of Edward. Edward parted from these familiar friends when they reached the United States and went to Homer, Michigan, then the home of his grandmother, uncle and aunt. Months after Edward's departure, his father in Persia had a sensing, while asleep, that Edward had died. His wife Sarah and their sons did not believe it. In another two months, mail from America confirmed Edward's death, even to date and time.

After a severe Persian drought in 1872-73, George was in ill health following a nearly fatal fall; and, as his sons Frank and Fred were at school age, he decided to take a tenth-year furlough in 1874. He planned to go via Lake Van on the way to Trebizonde to see a new American Board station at Van. Sarah was too weak to ride a horse, so she was carried slung beside a horse in one of two balanced kavajars, (heavy wooden seats tied on both sides of a horse). The Coan party and retainers joined a 1,000-horse caravan northward bound.

On the sixth day from Urumia, the Coans reached Van. They stayed ten days as guests of Dr. and Mrs. George C. Reynolds. Here the Coans bought two Angora cats for an English merchant in Constantinople, as requested by William R. Stockton when he visited Urumia earlier in 1874.

Going on to Erzerum in eastern Turkey, nearly two weeks on the trail, they did the final three-day climb and descent of the rocky mountain ridge Polon Tukon. The small Coan caravan stayed a few days at the summer camp of the American Board's Erzerum station. A new macadem road of 170 miles from Erzerum to Trebizonde prompted Dr. Coan to replace his horseback transport with two large "Phorgoon" Russian-design wagons, like prairie schooners, each pulled by four horses. It was a novel and comfortable ride for the Coans reclining or sitting on pillows and blankets spread on top of the wagon bed loads. The boys, raised in Urumia's aridity, were awed by the dense forests of northeastern Turkey. On slow upgrades of the road the two brothers frequently walked in the dark woods beside the wagons, or hiked across ridges and sharp curves to rejoin or wait for their family convoy a few miles farther along the road. Arriving at Trebizonde on the Black Sea, the Coans got a ship to Constantinople, delivered the Angora cats, and for ten weeks visited Dr. Riggs, a missionary since the 1820s.

Continuing the "Grand Tour" to broaden Fred's and Frank's pre-college education, George and Sarah sailed to Naples. The family visited Rome, Florence, Milan, Lake Como, Paris, and spent six weeks in London. They sailed to the U.S. on The England, a new steam-and-sail passenger vessel.

Back in America (probably in the spring of 1875), the missionary Coan family visited relatives in Hudson and Albion, N. Y., then in Homer, Michigan, where George's mother and sister and the latter's husband lived on a farm. For the rest of his life George was active in the cause for missions, constantly making stirring appeals for their support.

To enroll their sons in a fine high school in Niles, Michigan, the Coans moved there in the fall of 1875(?). Fred completed a four-year course in three years. George had an uncle and sister living in Niles, and his cousin, George Munger Coan, was organist at Niles Presbyterian Church, of which Dr. Eddy was the gifted pastor.

In 1878, George moved his family to Wooster, Ohio, so that his son Fred could begin immediately his college education at the new, small Wooster College which had an unusually strong faculty. Recognizing George's ability and faithful service, the College of Wooster in 1878 awarded him a D.D. degree. He died in Wooster December 21, 1879. Sarah died October 18, 1887. They were both buried in Mount Albion Cemetery, Albion, New York.

FREDERICK GAYLORD⁶ COAN (George W.⁵, Ezra⁴, Gaylord³, Mulford², George¹) was born in Urumia, Persia, May 23, 1859, the son of missionaries, George Whitefield and Sarah (Power) Kip Coan. He grew up in Persia and came to the United States for his advanced education at Wooster University (College of Wooster) in Wooster, Ohio. Here he studied music. During his freshman year he met Ida Jane Speer, whom he later married. A classmate who roomed at the Speer's invited Frederick to study Greek with him there. While they were studying, someone was playing Beethoven; and Frederick remarked that whoever was playing was a fine musician. Mrs. Speer invited Frederick to stay for supper, and he met the musician, Ida Jane Speer. They soon arranged to meet one evening a week from seven until nine "to improve their reading."

In his sophomore year, Frederick organized a male quartet which sang in the Lutheran Church where he was organist. He later added four ladies, one of them Ida, making it an octet. During his junior year they became engaged. He was graduated from Wooster in the Class of 1882.

Frederick had planned to make music his profession, but his mother wanted him to go to Persia as a missionary. With a heavy heart he entered Western Theological Seminary in the fall of 1882. Here he met Samuel H. Kellogg, D.D., LL.D, a returned missionary from India. When Dr. Kellogg learned of Frederick's feelings, he came to his room and talked to him, arousing his enthusiasm for his new profession. The next year Frederick went to Princeton for the last two years of his course so he could be near his brother Frank, who was an undergraduate there. He was ordained July 16, 1885, and on July 1 of that year he married Ida.

Ida was born in West Salem, Ohio, January 26, 1861, the daughter of a Presbyterian minister, Thomas P. Speer, and his wife, Elizabeth (Stoneroad) Speer. The family moved to Wooster when Ida's two older brothers were ready for college. Here she had the privilege of studying under the great musician Karl Merz and became the first graduate of the musical department which he organized at Wooster. She was in the Class of 1884.

A few weeks after they were married, on July 25, 1885, they sailed from New York on the ship Furnessia of Anchor Line for Persia where for 43 years they were missionaries. Ida was an excellent homemaker and mother, often carrying on for weeks alone while Frederick visited the churches of which he was in charge as general evangelist in the Urumia Plain and Kurdistan. He often traveled on horseback and his tours in the wild and inaccessible mountains took him as far as the plains of Mesopotamia, Mesul, and Baghdad. Ida knew these tours were dangerous, but she was always brave and cheerful. One tour lasted seven months, and during that time she heard her husband had died of sunstroke in Mesopotamia; that he had been drowned crossing a very swift river on a flimsy raft; and that he had been killed in an encounter with Kurds. Through all of this period she remained calm and believed Frederick was safe. When he finally arrived home, he admitted all of the reports had foundation, but God had taken good care of him.

Ida and Frederick were both fine musicians and often gave concerts at the mission station. A wedding gift ordered built by Ida's parents before their marriage was among boxes of housewares shipped in advance of the wedding. The gift was a Decker Brothers upright piano sealed in a zinc-lined crate weighing 1,500 pounds. The piano transported on its own cart pulled by two buffalo and two oxen for 700 miles from Trebizonde to Ula, made the journey with only one wire out of tune, though the ox cart had tipped over twice during ninety days on the trail.

Ida loved flowers, and wherever she lived, she always had beautiful gardens. Once, returning from a furlough, she picked up some new plants in Russia and brought them all the way to Persia in her lap. She also introduced new varieties of roses. At Claremont, California, at the time of her funeral most of the flowers on the casket came from her own beds.

Missionary children sometimes had special teachers from the states, but often were taught by the missionaries themselves and their wives. Ida taught German in which she had majored in college and was very fluent. She also could talk, read and write in Syriac and Turkish and knew a good deal of French. At one time her son Howard attended the American School for Moslems and other races. He soon won the affection and respect of the boys by teaching them American games. One day he met with an accident, and his classmates sent fruit and flowers; and finally, when he was better, his friends arranged with Frederick to visit Howard. At that time it was against all Mohammedan etiquette for men to see the faces of any women except those of their own household. Ida wanted to meet the boys, so Frederick agreed that she would answer the door; and he wouldn't appear until later. As the boys ascended the steps and rang the bell, to their astonishment and consternation, they were met by the lady of the house. Feeling it must be a mistake, they turned their heads; some covered their faces, begged pardon, and asked if they had come to the wrong door. They were assured there was no mistake, given a cordial welcome, and led into the parlor where Ida soon had them feeling at home. Frederick eventually appeared; refreshments were served; and then they were led into the bedroom to see Howard.

It was the first time they had ever seen a room used just for sleeping, and a bed made up with clean white sheets. They were told how much cleaner and more sanitary it was to have them. Their own bedding consisted of quilts, often very expensive, but seldom washed. When they left, they thanked Frederick for the great honor paid them. On arriving at his home, one of the visiting boys told his father they had spent several hours in the Seventh Paradise, and recounted what they had seen and learned. With tears in his eyes he asked, "Father, will we ever have anything like that?" His father answered, "Not while we are Mohammedans."

In World War I during an invasion of the Turks and Kurds 30,000 refugees sought safety and escaped massacre by going to the Urumia mission station where "Old Glory" was flying. Eighteen missionaries found themselves with 30,000 unbidden guests for five months. Every bit of available space was used--college and hospital rooms; barns, cellars, stables, even closets. Frederick put up a tent that housed 1,000 and took 29 into his own home. An epidemic of typhoid broke out; over 4,000 died, among them five missionaries. Frederick caught typhoid and was dangerously ill for over forty days. Ida nursed him and many others. There was not even one trained nurse except for an Assyrian woman who had taken a course in America. Ida had over 100 successive days and nights of nursing alone except for the help of some Assyrian teachers who took her place at times and called her when she was needed. The American flag flew constantly over the station giving protection to the refugees. President Wilson called this incident the most thrilling story of the American flag.

From 1904-1912 Frederick was in charge of Urumia College and superintendent of the village schools. In 1917 and 1918 he lectured on the Chatauqua Eastern Circuit in behalf of Armenian and Syrian relief. November 17, 1924, Frederick and Ida were honorably retired and came back to the United States. They celebrated their golden wedding anniversary in 1935. For a number of years they resided in Minneapolis, then in Princeton, New Jersey, and finally in Claremont, California. In 1939 Frederick's book, Yesterdays in Persia and Kurdistan, was published. It was an account of his more than 40 years in the missionary field.

Ida died in Claremont, California, June 24, 1939; Frederick, in Shreve, Ohio, March 23, 1943. A memorial service for Frederick was held in the College of Wooster chapel on March 27. They were both buried in Wooster Cemetery.

ELIZABETH VEECH⁷ COAN (Frederick G.⁶, George W.⁵, Ezra⁴, Gaylord³, Mulford², George¹) was born in Urumia, Persia, December 14, 1886, the daughter of Frederick Gaylord and Ida Jane (Speer) Coan. She grew up in Urumia, the capital of the district, with a population of 150,000 including surrounding villages. Her parents were Presbyterian missionaries, so the family lived in the missionary compound a few miles outside the city. Elizabeth returned to the United States for her advanced education and was graduated from Wellesley College, Class of 1911. She then took a teacher's degree at Winona State College in Minnesota. In 1914 she went back to the mission field in Persia and spent five years of war there in Urumia and Tabriz. She taught at the Girls' School in Urumia.

April 11, 1918, in Urumia she married Edward Carrington Mayo Richards, who was born in New York City September 23, 1886, the son of Howard and Harriet (Mayo) Richards. Edward was graduated from Yale University with a B.S. degree in forestry, and from Sheffield School with an M.F. degree. He engaged in private and public practice in forestry.

In 1919 Elizabeth and Edward returned to the United States and lived in New York and New Jersey where their four children were born. In 1930-31 they spent fifteen months in Europe where their children got a good start in speaking German. Upon their return they settled on a farm near West Chester, Pennsylvania. The children all went to Westtown Friends School. From 1932 to 1934 they were with the Tennessee Valley Authority where Edward was chief forester. The family took five summer camping trips to the West, Southwest, and Mexico.

In 1953 Elizabeth and Edward moved to Tucson, Arizona. In 1955-56 they toured Europe and the Middle East; they visited 21 countries. In 1961 they completed a round-the-world trip. All the family were united in their opposition to war and to military conscription. Sons Frederick H. Richards and William L. Richards went to prison as conscientious objectors to World War II.

Elizabeth enjoyed plants, flowers, languages, the Bible, literature, and the piano. Her main interest, however, was in her family. She was active in the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, was a member of the Fellowship of Reconciliation and of the Religious Society of Friends (Quakers). In 1982 she was nearly 96 years old, probably the oldest living Coan. She resided in a nursing home in Tucson, Arizona, near her daughter Elizabeth.

MARY FRANCES⁸ COAN (Frank S.⁷, Frederick G.⁶, George W.⁵, Ezra⁴, Gaylord³, Mulford², George¹) was born in Lahore, Punjab, India, September 28, 1919, the daughter of Frank Speer and Janet Tryon (Stone) Coan. She received a B.A. degree in history of art from Bryn Mawr College in 1941. She married first Ken Lockhart. She married second December 23, 1959, in Nazales, Mexico, Stephen Maurice Nemtin, son of Max and Tina Nemtin. He was graduated from McGill University and was an architect with the Frank Lloyd Wright Foundation.

Mary was a landscape designer in the architectural firm of Frank Lloyd Wright Foundation and a staff member in the School of Architecture. She cared for all the extensive gardens at Taliesin West, Scottsdale, Arizona; and Taliesin, Spring Green, Wisconsin, unique architectural communities founded by Frank Lloyd Wright. These were her home as well as place of work. Her interests included gardening, pottery, chamber music, and singing. She said she "played a poor but enthusiastic viola" in Taliesin's chamber ensemble and sang in Taliesin's chorus. From 1973 until 1977 she and Stephen ELLEN⁸ STONE⁴ COAN³ (Frank⁷ S., Frederick⁶ G., George⁵ W., Ezra⁴, Gaylord³, Mulford², George¹) was born in Srinagar, Kashmir, India, August 25, 1921, the daughter of Frank Speer and Janet Tryon (Stone) Coan. She was graduated from Vassar College with a B.A. degree in art history in 1942; from Harvard Graduate School of Design with a B. Arch. degree in 1946 and a M. Arch. in 1976.

August 18, 1946, in Arlington, Virginia, she married Nizar Ali Jawdat, who was born in Damascus, Syria, October 3, 1920, the son of Ali Jawdat Al Ayoubi, born in Mosul, Iraq, and Nazik Jawdat (née Tahseen), born in Aleppo, Syria. He was educated at Westminster School, London, England; Cambridge University; American University of Beirut, Lebanon; and Harvard Graduate School of Design where he received the degrees of B. Arch. and M. Arch. Nazik was a business man and Ellen, a self-employed artist.

Ellen described her life and interests to the compiler as follows:

Architecture

I have been practicing architecture off and on since 1947--with a full practice mostly in public buildings in Bagdad (my husband's home) until the revolution of 1958, and between 1964 and 1968 when we were again living in Iraq. In Rome, Italy, where we were from 1959 until 1963 (between revolutions), and in Orte where we eventually acquired in 1969 a splendid large tract of farm and woodland overlooking the Tiber, my work was largely in converting old farmhouses and building new country houses. In 1975 my husband's work took us to London, where we live in a converted Victorian tea warehouse on the Thames near the Tower of London. I have done several other renovations of both houses and offices in London. The sixteenth century farm in Italy, though, is where we feel most at home; and we spend as much time as possible there. In collaboration with the Architects Collaborative I have designed an office building in Abu Dhabi.

Art

London has provided ample opportunity for me to indulge my interest in paintings, and I have gradually built up a sizeable collection of oils, etchings, and water colors in a wide range of styles (mostly European XVIII and XIX century), some of which I have been able to clean and restore myself, and which I hope will one day form the basis of a gallery in the U.S.A.

Publications

An article on Alexander Calder, published in the Vassar Review, 1942

Several articles on Modern Architecture in the Middle East for the Architectural Review, London, c. 1956

I am now working on editing a vast collection of letters from five generations of my mother's New England ancestors, beginning in 1797.

A walker's guide to Istanbul is also in the works.

Languages and Travel

By living for long periods in many countries (India, America, Iraq, Lebanon, Italy, England), I have acquired an insatiable love of hearing, and if possible using, a variety of languages and of travel. We all speak English, Arabic, Italian, and French, and my husband's family have Turkish as well. Though our life has been a series of upheavals, revolutions, uprootings, and starting again, we have, I think, acquired a certain flexibility of cultural outlook and an appreciation of the various societies we have been a part of.

STUART FREDERICK GAYLORD⁸ COAN (Frank S.⁷, Frederick G.⁶, George W.⁵, Ezra⁴, Gaylord³, Mulford², George¹) was born in Srinagar, Kasamir, India, August 1, 1923, son of Frank Speer and Janet Tryon (Stone) Coan. In 1947 he was graduated cum laude from Williams College with a B.A. degree in political science. In 1948 he received an M.A. degree with distinction from the School of Advanced International Studies at Johns Hopkins University. From 1951 until 1954 he was a candidate for a Ph.D. degree at Columbia University. He was awarded a graduate fellowship for a year's study in France, 1952-1953.

Stuart worked for the State Department, Washington, D. C. 1948-1951; he was an instructor in political science at Queens College, New York City, 1954-1956; he was employed in industry in New York City as foreign economist, market research director, and consultant with Texaco, Mobil, Burlington Industries, Indian Head, and Cresap, McCormick and Page, 1956-1975. From 1975 until 1981 he was director of development for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People in New York City. Of this position he wrote:

One of my more unusual jobs was with the NAACP national office in New York where I was the first full-time fund raiser that organization had ever had. Of course, I was one of the few white people there, but color mattered very little with people who were dedicated to their work. I came to respect and know a number of outstanding people (notably Roy Wilkins) and am proud of the help I was able to give in greatly increasing corporate support for the organization. I am sure that the old missionary traditions of the family played a big part in my attitude.

In 1982 Stuart was director of corporate relations (fund raiser) for Save the Children, Westport, Connecticut.

On June 26, 1954, in New York City Stuart married Mary Willette Bishop, who was born in Indianapolis, Indiana, January 12, 1928, daughter of Richard E. and Ruth Amelia (Trueblood) Bishop. Mary was graduated in 1950 from Smith College with a B.A. degree in French; and from New York University in 1981 with an M.A. degree in French language and civilization. She taught French.

His hobbies included tennis, bridge, and hiking. He was a member of the Democratic party and from 1976 until 1979 was a director of junior sailing at Old Greenwich Yacht Club.

KATHARINE COCHRAN⁷ COAN (Frederick G.⁶, George W.⁵, Ezra⁴, Gaylord³, Mulford², George¹) was born in Urumia, Persia, November 22, [23], 1895, the daughter of Frederick Gaylord and Ida Jane (Speer) Coan, missionaries. Katharine lived in Persia until 1910 except for a year's furlough back to the United States in 1903 and a short time spent in London 1907 so her mother could undergo surgery. She lived with her family and other missionary families in Urumia in a compound called the "Kullah," meaning fortress because of its thick, high walls and two heavy gates, which were guarded night and day as protection against bands of predatory tribes called Kurds. The Kurds would swoop down on the villages stealing anything they could get their hands on, usually sheep and cattle. The compound had a hospital, a boys' boarding school, and a number of stables since horses were the means of transportation. The missionaries kept chickens and a few cows, their only source of milk and butter. The supply of the latter two was irregular; and when none was produced, families went without since there was none for sale anywhere. The river that flowed past the compound was used for irrigation for gardens and orchards. There was no running water, electricity, or gas; candles and kerosene lamps were their lights.

Saturday night was bath night. Katharine's family used a big rubber tub about four feet in diameter, and water was warmed by the kitchen stove. Their house had a flat roof where they slept in summer. There was no need for a covering since it never rained. In the basement under the house, wood, which was their sole source of energy, was stored. Since they had no refrigeration, perishable food was stored there too. Milk was poured into pans and put on screened shelves. Bunches of grapes were hung from nails in the rafters. Nuts, melons, potatoes, quinces, and celery were stored here, as well as flour and "ghee" (clarified butter used as shortening) which were in very large jars kept along the wall. All the vegetables they ate were grown in their own gardens. There were wonderful local fruits, such as apricots, peaches, plums, cherries, nectarines, and melons. Persia is noted for its fruit. Any meat they had, a servant had to go to the city on horseback to buy, and it was usually lamb. They had no fish, unless someone caught a few trout in the mountains; and they ate chicken often.

For bread they raised hops for yeast; Katharine's father bought wheat by the donkey load; servants washed it in the stream, spread it on carpets to dry, sifted through it for impurities, and then took it to the miller's to be ground into flour. A servant stayed at the mill when the wheat was being ground to see that the miller did not cheat them. From this wheat they made all their own bread.

Each house had a laundry, a small building built over part of a stream deep enough to dip out water with a pail. In these bathhouses or "humum" were fireplaces where a caldron of water could be heated. Native washerwomen, using a washboard, would scrub the clothes, rinse them in the stream, and hang them up to dry.

Katharine looked forward to the arrival of "boxes," goods shipped by friends and relatives from the States. Her family also ordered from a Montgomery Ward catalog. Her mother made all their clothes, even her father's suits. Shoes were a problem; for although Katharine's mother sent tracings of their feet to a cousin in New York City, the method was inexact; and the shoes were usually too tight. It took six months for packages to arrive, so often their feet had grown a little by then. Breaking in shoes was a process all the children dreaded.

School was carried on at Katharine's home with the missionaries as teachers. All the children learned to speak the local dialect, Syriac, with fluency. There were about 300 people in the compound, 50 Americans and 12 missionary children, so Katharine had plenty of playmates. Often, however, families were sent home. Parting with such close friends was not easy. Letters from abroad were of great importance, and the arrival of mail was a big occasion.

Holidays were always festive. Thanksgiving was celebrated much as it was in the States. At Christmas, since there were no evergreen trees, Katharine's parents hid the Christmas gifts in the parlor, and the children were let loose after breakfast to find them. In Persia, Easter was more important than Christmas, and presents were exchanged at that time too. Fourth of July was a big holiday celebrated in Katharine's father's garden. A rug was spread over the grape arbor with a tablecloth on it; and while they ate fried chicken, they sang patriotic songs. The children had all kinds of pets, but Katharine's favorite was her horse, Kid.

In 1903 Katharine's father took his tenth-year furlough and returned to the United States with his family. They set out with a caravan of horses, a camel, and sometimes a donkey. It took five days to reach the Aras River between Transcaucasia and Persia. For a fee strong men carried them and their belongings across the river. Once on the other side, they transferred to two large covered wagons called "phaetons," drawn by four horses abreast. The horses had to be changed at post houses every two or three hours. The scenery along the way was breath-taking as their journey went through the Caucasus with Mt. Ararat in constant view.

At Tiflis they took a train for the ten-day trip to Moscow. It was the first train ride for the children. From Moscow they proceeded to St. Petersburg, and then on to Riga on the Baltic Sea. A steamer took them across to Sweden. It was a rough trip and Katharine was seasick. After crossing the Baltic, they went up the Gotha Canal, with all its 107 locks, almost to Stockholm. After visits to Stockholm and Oslo, Norway, they went on to Berlin. Her father took the three older children up the Rhine while she and her brother Howard stayed in Berlin with their mother. They went to the park and zoological gardens every day. Katharine got a real thrill seeing the Kaiser's magnificent horses exercised there every afternoon. From Berlin they went to London, and then boarded a steamer from Southampton to the United States. They spent the year in Wooster, Ohio, with their grandmother. Their father was off on speaking tours to tell people about his work in Persia and to raise funds for its continuation.

In 1907 Katharine spent time in London and went to school there while her mother was ill. When her mother was well enough to leave the hospital, they spent a month at Margate on the North Sea. Their return trip to Persia was via Paris, Marseilles, Naples, Athens, Smyrna, Constantinople, and Bartum. Then they crossed the Aras River into Persia.

In 1910 Katharine left Urumia for the last time. She traveled to the States with Dr. Shedd and his family. He was ill with tuberculosis, and doctors advised him to winter in Switzerland. Katharine and the Shedd girls went to a French-speaking school for seven months, a great opportunity for her to learn French. When she arrived in the United States, she visited her sister, a month before Elizabeth's graduation from Wellesley. She then went to Williams College to see her brother Frank graduate.

Katharine made her home with friends in Minneapolis and went to high school there. She was graduated from Wellesley in 1918. June 16, 1923, she married Fred Pillsbury Carleton, who was born in Minneapolis August 19, 1898. They lived in the Minneapolis area and at their farm in the Kinnickinnic Valley near River Falls, Wisconsin. Although Katharine returned to Persia twice on tours, it was never possible to revisit her old home in Urumia. Fred died in Denver, Colorado, October 15, 1952.

HOWARD RADCLIFFE⁷ COAN (Frederick G.⁶, George W.⁵, Ezra⁴, Gaylord³, Mulford², George¹) was born in Urumia, Persia, May 13, 1898, son of Frederick Gaylord and Ida Jane (Speer) Coan, missionaries. For details on his early life, see write-up on his sister, Katharine Cochran Coan.

In 1921 he was graduated from Williams College Phi Beta Kappa and summa cum laude, as well as being very active in all student affairs. He was a member of Phi Gamma Delta fraternity, the Varsity Track Team, the Varsity Cross Country Team, the Varsity Debating Team and Delta Sigma Rho; editor-in-chief of the Handbook, vice-president of Adelpic Union, president of Cercle Français, Class Day Orator to the Lower Classes, and on the staffs of the Record and the class book. His second year at Williams he was awarded Sophomore Honors, the Second Benedict Prize in French, and Honorable Mention for the Benedict Prize in Mathematics. These were just a few of his many activities and honors.

In 1932 he received an M.A. degree in French from Columbia University, New York City. For nearly fifty years (interrupted by service in both World Wars), he was an educator, teaching French by preference, but also English, Spanish, Latin and mathematics, as well as coaching tennis. He taught at Forman Christian College, Lahore University, Lahore, India; Phillips Exeter Academy, Exeter, New Hampshire; Polytechnic Preparatory Country Day School, Brooklyn, New York, with a year on exchange at Shrewsbury School, Shrewsbury, Shropshire, England; Lawrenceville School, Lawrenceville, New Jersey; Cranbrook School, Bloomfield Hills, Michigan; with a final five years at Suffield Academy, Suffield, Connecticut.

During World War I he served in France as a volunteer in the American Ambulance Field Service, the French Foyer du Soldat, and at Officers Training School in Georgia. In World War II he was trained in OSS near Washington and, landing in England on D Day, served in London with the assimilated rank of major, through V E Day. He then joined UNRRA and served as director of personnel in Haaren, Holland, and Brussels, Belgium, until August, 1946.

On December 20, 1947, in Washington, D. C., he married Nancie Knight, who was born in England March 28, 1917, daughter of Ernest and Edith Knight. She received her education in England and during World War II served as an air raid warden there. She was a violinist and enjoyed music, as well as gardening, sewing, gourmet cooking, and tennis.

Howard's interests included tennis, photography, gardening, and history--especially of World War I and World War II. He traveled extensively in the United States, Canada, Mexico, and Europe; as well as making four trips between Persia and America, and a round trip to India, traveling there and in Kashmir. He was a mountain climber and conquered Mont Blanc, 15,771 feet, the Alps; Popocatepetl, 17,887 feet and Citlaltepetl (Orizaba), 18,700 feet, Mexico; and Long's Peak in Colorado. During the summers of 1936,

HENRY EZRA FRANKLIN⁶ COAN, Frank (George W.⁵, Ezra⁴, Gaylord³, Mulford², George¹) was born in Persia January 15, 1860, the son of George Whitefield and Sarah (Power) Kip Coan, missionaries. He grew up in the missionary compound outside Urumia and received his early education from his mother, who taught her own and other missionary children. In 1864 when his father had a year's furlough, Frank returned to the United States with his mother and brothers. They spent that year in Hudson, New York, their mother's birthplace. In 1874 the family returned permanently to the United States and by the fall of 1875 had settled in Niles, Michigan, where Frank and his brother Frederick went to high school. Frank was graduated from Williams College with an A.B. degree in 1884. He then enrolled at Princeton to study medicine.

July 1, 1885, Frank attended his brother Frederick's wedding in Wooster, Ohio. After the wedding on his way East he went to Wheeling, West Virginia, to visit his fiancée. While in Wheeling, he became ill and died there July 15, 1885. He was buried in Mount Albion Cemetery, Albion, New York, along with his father and older brother Edward.

The following is taken from 50 Year Record, Class of 1884, Princeton University, 1934:

Coan joined our class in Junior year.

Well born, well nurtured, well developed, well directed, on the way to fame and fortune, with the good will of everybody and the heart-felt affection of all who knew him, our Coan died. He lived only two years after graduation [really only one year]. He was the first of our graduates to die. He took up the study of medicine but died before completing his course.

Death Certificate of Helen E. Coan

HELEN ELIZA⁶ COAN (Henry M.⁵, Ezra⁴, Gaylord³, Mulford², George¹) was born in Byron, New York, December 20, 1859, the daughter of Henry Martain and Mary Huntington (Meaching) Coan. Helen was an artist--a painter in oil, watercolor, and the "new technique" of watercolor-crayon. She was a pupil of the Art Students League of New York, of Frederick Freer, of William M. Case and of Dow. Her work, "Pomegranites," was exhibited at the World's Fair in 1893. At the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition held in Seattle in 1909 she won medals for oil and watercolor. At the San Diego Exposition in 1915 she won a medal and a diploma. Her work, "Capistrano Mission," was owned by the Daughters of the American Revolution, California Chapter, and presented by them to their headquarters in Washington, D. C.

Graphic magazines of February 3, 1906; April 20, 1907; October 17, 1908; and September 24, 1910, carried articles about Helen. I quote from the 1906 article, an interview the author, Catherine Robertson Hamlin, had with Helen:

A new style of painting known to the initiated as "water color crayon," is attracting the attention of artists, who find in the bold crayon strokes, with soft underlying tints of water colors, something they have sought, and which is capable of untold variation, and may be used for many purposes. Miss Helen E. Coan, who is the only artist in Los Angeles who is using the new medium, told me something of the process a few days ago, as I sat with her in the "attic studio" in the Cumnock School in South Figueroa Street. The studio takes in the whole top floor of the building, and resembles more the attic of a modern novel than the workshops of those who wield brush and pencil. Miss Coan is a dainty, little woman, and is filled with love of her vocation...

"Tell me something of the new system, please, Miss Coan," I urged, returning to the water color crayon.

"It is excellent for book illustrating," Miss Coan informed me. "It gives the necessary color, with the firm, broad lines that are needed to throw out the main figures. It is quite a recent process; combining the quality of charcoal with color gives a complex result we do not get separately. Jessie Wilcox Smith uses this medium in her charming pictures of children, and Jules Guerin is another artist who is fond of the novelty."

"Then it is confined to illustrating of various kinds?"

"No, it is used for all purposes where color or charcoal may be used. I may say that the pictures are selling so well that I have hardly any to show a visitor. After the work is done it is necessary to have the pictures put through a press, and in that way it is something like an etching,"...

In 1907 Helen opened her new studio at 204 N. Burlington Avenue in Los Angeles. In 1910 she opened an art school at the local YWCA. She had many exhibits of her work.

Her memberships included the California Art Club, the Newspaper Artist Association of New York, and the Press Club of Southern California. She died in Los Angeles October 14, 1938.

EZRA TITUS⁵ COAN (Ezra⁴, Gaylord³, Mulford², George¹) was born in Byron, New York, March 25, 1829, the son of Ezra and Fanny Maria (Hull) Coan. He was brought up on his father's farm until at age 14 he went to Albion where his older brother George was teaching school. He attended the academy.

He worked in a store until he was 21; and then he succeeded his employer, Thomas Fanning, in business. At about this time he changed the spelling of his last name by adding another n in an effort to secure correct pronunciation. His two children kept that spelling, but no one else among the Coans ever adopted it.

From 1850 to 1868 he continued in the mercantile business and then sold out. During the Civil War he was elected to the office of county treasurer and to Governor Morgan's Military Committee for the purpose of raising and organizing troops for the service. Ezra was secretary of the committee, and it was part of his responsibility to raise funds for the payment of bounties, for which county bonds were issued.

In 1869 he closed out his business, and with his family toured Europe for a year and a half. When he returned to Albion, he established a banking house, known as Coann's Bank; one of the stable financial institutions of the country. Ezra was a very successful business man. He was a staunch Republican, but he never sought public office.

February 10, 1852, he married Marcia H. Clement of Genesee, who was born in 1826 and died in March, 1899. Ezra died in 1900. Both Ezra and Marcia were buried in Mount Albion Cemetery, Albion, New York.

He operated it for awhile and then sold it to publish and edit the Albion Free Lance, a weekly publication.

He married Ethel James, who was born in 1877 and died in 1917. Pearl died in 1910. They were both buried in Mount Albion Cemetery, Albion, New York. On the top of Pearl's stone was engraved the word Dick. On the top of Ethel's stone was Mrs. Dick.

He was a first lieutenant and was believed to have fought in one of the Battles of Bull Run. He died of disease in Washington, D.C., September 12, 1862. He was buried in Mount Albion Cemetery, Albion, New York, where his name was recorded on a marble tablet inside the tower erected in 1880 in memory of The Orleans County men "who fell in defense of the Union." TITUS⁴ COAN (Gaylord³, Mulford², George¹) was born in Killingworth, Connecticut, February 1, 1801, the youngest child of Gaylord and Tamze (Nettleton) Coan. Of all the hundreds of descendants of the immigrant boys, Peter and George, who came to America in 1710, Titus is without question the most famous. From the age of four until twelve he attended the district school. He was then privately tutored, one of his teachers being the local pastor, the Reverend Asa King. In time he went to the academy in East Guilford, now Madison, Connecticut. From 1819 until 1826 he taught school in Saybrook, Killingworth, and Guilford. He joined the Militia and went from sergeant to second lieutenant to first lieutenant in three years. In 1826 he went to western New York where four of his brothers were established, and he taught school at Riga. On March 2, 1828, he joined the Presbyterian church where his oldest brother, George, was minister. Influenced by the revivals that followed the preaching of Charles G. Finney and Titus's cousin, Asahel Nettleton, the evangelist, Titus decided to study theology and on June 1, 1831, he entered the middle class at Auburn Theological Seminary. He was graduated there in 1833. On April 17, 1833, he was licensed by Cayuga County Presbytery as a minister of the gospel.

Even before his graduation and licensing he was invited by the Boston Board of Missions to go to Patagonia to see about establishing a mission there. He sailed from New York for the Strait of Magellan August 10, 1833, with one companion, Reverend Arms, on the schooner Mary Jane under Captain Clift. They landed in Patagonia November 15, 1833. After five months there among the natives where their lives were constantly in danger, they had been able to convey little or nothing of Christian teachings to the people; so they decided to return to the United States. The savages, however, had other ideas and meant to keep them. Through "gifts" of saddles, bridles, axes, tools, clothes which the two missionaries had, and through the help of an Indian leader who had come in contact with the outside world and had many times sailed out to meet whaling ships to trade with captains and crews, on March 9, 1834, the men got aboard the whaleship Talma, under the command of Captain Pendleton, en route to America. They arrived at New London, Connecticut, May 7, 1834, and Titus reported to Boston that conditions were unfavorable for establishing a mission in Patagonia at that time.

Apparently while they were looking for a ship to take them home, according to Titus's journal, on January 26, 1834, as they were passing out of the Strait of Magellan into the Atlantic, they sighted a large barque, but were unable to "speak her." Years later, on August 28, 1876, Titus added a note to this entry saying the the "barque" had been the "Exploring Ship Beagle." Charles Darwin was the official naturalist aboard the Beagle.

On November 3, 1834, Titus married Fidelia Church, whom he had met in New York State during his seminary days. She was born February 19, 1810, at Riga, New York, the daughter of Samuel and Abigail (Munson) Church. Samuel founded and named Churchville, New York. Fidelia was their youngest daughter and was thought to be the most beautiful. She early developed a taste for learning and was a student in the schools of Rochester, Palmyra, and Canandaigua. In 1833 she taught and studied in Rochester. She and Titus had been engaged for six years and were about to be married when he was sent to Patagonia. Many thought he would never return, and Fidelia had other suitors. When he did arrive home, he found her teaching in Mrs. Cooke's Female Seminary at Middlebury, Vermont, and taking lessons in Greek from Professor Kitchel. Shortly after they were married, the American Board suggested that they go to the mission field on the Hawaiian Islands; and on December 5, 1834, they sailed from Boston on the ship Hellespont. They arrived in Honolulu, via Cape Horn, on June 6. It always irked Titus that it took Fidelia and him 183 days to get from Boston to Honolulu, and he envisioned that someday the trip would be made much faster. In a letter to Captain S. F. DuPont of the United States Navy, dated June 7, 1850, he wrote:

Probably the time will come when our material corporeities may pass from these islands to New York in the matter of days, and our winged spirits in shorter time. How long will it be ere a train of fiery chariots will be seen crossing your western mountains and a line of smoky leviathans be described lashing our deep waters and tracing a rapid wake from the shores of western America to these sea-girt isles? How long will it be ere aerial horsemen, outstripping lightning, will announce upon the shores of the Pacific the thoughts, emotions, the rush, the wonders of the Orient shores?

Titus was not only a deeply religious man, but one who understood science as well.

In Honolulu Titus and his bride spent about a month at the home of the Reverend Hiram Bingham; and then they were assigned to Hilo, on the east coast of the island Hawaii. Here they were to make their home for the rest of their lives.

In his interesting account of a visit to the Sandwich Island in 1873, Charles Nordhoff gives the following sketch of Titus's life and work:

And in Hilo, when you go to visit the volcano, you will find Dr. Coan, one of the brightest and loveliest spirits of them all, the story of whose life in the Umato island, whose apostle he was, is as wonderful and as touching as that of any of the earlier apostles, and shows what great works unyielding faith and love can do in redeeming a savage people. When Dr. and Mrs. Coan came to the island of Hawaii its shores and woods were populous, and through their labors thousands of men and women were instructed in the truths of Christianity, inducted into civilized habits of life, and finally brought into the church. As you sail along the green coast of Hawaii from its northern point to Hilo, you will be surprised at the number of quaint little white churches which mark the distances almost with the regularity of milestones; if later you ride through this district or the one south of Hilo, you will see that for every church there is also a school house; you will see native children reading and writing as well as our own at home; you may hear them singing tunes familiar to our own Sunday schools; you will see the native man and woman sitting down to read their newspaper at the close of the day; and if you could talk with them, you would find they knew almost as much about our late war as you do, for they took an intense interest in the war of the rebellion. And you must remember that when, less than forty years ago, Dr. and Mrs. Coan came to Hilo, the people were naked savages with no church and but one school house in the district; without printed books or knowledge of reading. They flocked to hear the Gospel. Thousands removed from a distance to Hilo, where, in their rapid way, they built up a large town, and kept up surely the strangest protracted meeting ever held; and going back to their homes after many months they took with them knowledge and zest to build up Christian churches and schools of their own. Over these Dr. Coan has presided these many years, not only preaching regularly on Sundays and during the week at the large native church at Hilo, and in two or three neighboring churches, but visiting the more distant churches at intervals to examine and instruct the members and keep them all on the right track. He has seen a great population turned from darkness to light, a great part of it following his own blameless and loving life as an example, and very many living to old age steadfast and zealous Christians.

On December 1, 1982, the Reverend William Gaydos and a few parishioners of the Killingworth church held a service here in memory of the 100th anniversary of Titus's death. C. C. Potter of Guilford, a Coan descendant, saw in the newspaper this picture of Mr. Gaydos and David Tuckerman, a good friend of Mr. Potter's. He immediately called David on the phone and said: "Remove your hat; take your hands out of your pockets; and stand at attention when you are on hallowed ground!"

A joke? Yes. But underneath the humor lay the respect Coans and descendants all felt for the great missionary, Titus Coan. Courtesy Paula M. Frattini, New Haven Register.

Titus learned the Hawaiian language in a matter of months; he preached in and translated the Bible into the language of the natives. He was preacher, pastor, magistrate, doctor, teacher, guide, and friend to the whole population. He traveled throughout the islands and encountered every kind of hardship. When he could not go to the people, they came to him. Until 1849 when the mission board sent a physician, Titus was the only doctor. Describing his early days in Hawaii, he wrote in his book, Life in Hawaii:

In preaching the gospel to these poor people, I climb mountains and precipices, cross deep and dangerous ravines, ford or swim rapid rivers, travel from morning to night in drenching rain, endure the melting power of the tropical sun, endure weariness and painfulness. Thus I often travel from week to week preaching four and five and even eight times a day, and at night I lie down to sleep on the ground more weary than the mower and the reaper returned at night from the sultry harvest field. But my sleep is sweet, my heart is peaceful and my meditations are joyous.

The number of conversions from 1838 until 1840 was 7,000; while he received in all, up to the year 1882, 13,000 persons into the Hilo and Puna churches. Titus baptized people en masse. He was said to have seized a brush, similar to one used in plastering walls, and with this brush sprinkled them by the score, pronouncing over them the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit. The church at Hilo grew until it numbered thousands and was the largest Protestant church in the world.

Fidelia founded and conducted a seminary for young Hawaiian girls. She had a literary gift and translated many of the best English hymns into the Hawaiian language. The poet Longfellow asked for a copy of her translations, and wrote to her daughter a letter of thanks and high praise. She was said to be "a woman of fine mind and great charm of character; to her wise aid and counsel much of Dr. Coan's success was due."

Titus made a tremendous contribution to geology. Every opportunity he had, he visited and studied the great volcanoes of Hawaii, sometimes putting himself in real danger. No history of volcanoes was ever written but depended in large part on the data given in his published descriptions. Titus was particularly interested in Mauna Loa and its crater Kilauea, one of the largest active craters in the world. Kilauea had within its eight-mile circumference the fiery pit Halemaumau. July 2-5, 1850, Titus made sixteen trips to the crater and wrote an account of twenty-eight pages on what he saw. This excerpt is taken from that account:

We looked below us, upon the S. E. of the ridge. Within a stone's throw of us (we proved it by trial) a lake of liquid fire was tossing and splashing. The whole surface was not at once in action; a crust of hardened lava covered the fiery glow beneath, except at the ends of the lake, and a few places at the sides. There the molten rock was in a state of violent ebullition; rushing backward & forward, splashing against the confining walls of the lake and throwing its fiery spray into the air.

In 1870 Fidelia was not well, so they returned to the States for an eleven-month visit after an absence of thirty-six years. They consulted eminent physicians, but none of them could help her. The Congregational church in Killingworth gave them a gala welcome when Titus preached from the pulpit in this church of his youth. He also spent a week in New Haven and preached in the Center Church. During his visit he made 239 addresses in 20 different states. Wherever he went, he found that his fame as a missionary was well known; and every church was overflowing with people eager to hear him. In Washington, D. C., President Ulysses S. Grant invited him to the White House on two occasions for discussions.

Shortly after their return to Hawaii on September 29, 1872, at Hilo, Fidelia died. She was greatly loved. Years after her death a traveler who had known her at Hilo--Charles Warren Stoddard of the "South Sea Idylls"--met one of her children. "Are you a son of Fidelia Coan?" he said.

I hear a surge that laps and pleshes
Among long reeds that fringe a rippling shore;
The dim Air fills with drowsy haze
Pressing the mirror quiet surface O'er.
A water fowl with piping shrill
Stirring rippling ripples from his wings; his call Sends O'er the waves a circling flow;
The floating undulating fade and fall.

Now in the dusk and nightfall gray
That lone and startled Bird-note rings no more;
The pulsing ripples die away
Along the surfer's edge and speedy shore.

"Yes."

"She was a saint," said Mr. Stoddard.

In October, 1873, Titus married second Lydia Bingham, who was born in Honolulu, the daughter of Elder Bingham and granddaughter of Hiram Bingham, one of the earliest missionaries to the islands. Bingham was commissioned in Goshen, Connecticut, in 1819 to go to the islands.

Growing old did not bother Titus. He seemed to work harder and longer. He died December 1, 1882, at Hilo. The news spread like wildfire that the "St. Peter of Hawaii" had gone to his reward. Entire families of natives came from far and wide. Over 20,000 attended his funeral. He was buried in Homeland Cemetery in Hilo. His gravestone was very simple. As he wished, the word Aloha was inscribed on the base. The inscription on one side of the stone was in the Hawaiian language; on the other side, in English. He was buried on the highest point of this lovely burial ground in a large circle of graves reserved for early missionaries and their wives.

Collections of Titus's books, papers, letters, documents, etc., have been placed by his great grandchildren in the Library of Congress, Washington, D. C.; in the Lyman Museum, Hilo, Hawaii; in the Killingworth Historical Society, Killingworth, Connecticut; and in Killingworth Congregational Church.

On December 1, 1982, on the 100th anniversary of Titus's death, the Reverend William Gaydos and eight members of the Killingworth Congregational Church, where Titus was once a member, hiked a mile deep into the woods to the spot where Titus was born to conduct a memorial service. Titus's birthplace, overlooking a rolling hillside, was off Route 80 and marked by a large stone partly covered with moss and inscribed with his name and accomplishments. A cellar hole was all that was left of the homestead. Several crumbling stone walls still divided his father's farmland. At the service Mr. Gaydos discussed Titus's life and read from Titus's autobiography, Life In Hawaii--Mission Life and Labors. Mr. Gaydos said of the site: "To me it is one of the most special places in town." (Paula Frattini, "Church Renders Homage to Missionary's Memory," New Haven Register, December 2, 1982, p. 50.)

TITUS MUNSON⁵ COAN (Titus⁴, Gaylord³, Mulford², George¹) was born in Hilo, Hawaiian Islands, September 27, 1836, the son of the Reverend Titus and Fidelia (Church) Coan. He was descended on his mother's side from Thomas Munson, one of the founders and "governors" of New Haven, Connecticut. His parents were missionaries to the Hawaiian natives, and Titus received his early education on the islands at the Punahou School, the Royal School, and Oahu College in Honolulu. In 1856 he came to the United States on a New Bedford whaler which sailed around Cape Horn. He attended Yale College for a year and then went to Williams College in Williamstown, Massachusetts, where he was graduated in the Class of 1859. He was an excellent student and was elected to Phi Beta Kappa. He next took the course of medical study offered by the New York College of Physicians and Surgeons, now the Medical School of Columbia University. After graduating in 1861, he served two years as intern in the Randall's Island, Bellevue, and Blackwell's Island civil hospitals, and in the Central Park and David's Island military hospitals. In 1863 he offered his services to the Government and entered the army as Acting Assistant Surgeon in the Civil War. He was soon transferred to the navy with the same rank.

For over two years he saw active service with Admiral Farragut in the West Gulf Squadron and participated in the battles of Mobile Bay and Mississippi Sound. In 1865 he was attached to the flagship Brooklyn. He stayed in the naval service until the end of the war and then entered private practice in New York City.

On June 21, 1877, Titus married Léonie Pauline Morel, who was born in Besançon, Doubs, France, June 21, 1846. She worked in England as a governess and came to the United States seeking a brother she never found. She taught French in New York City. Titus and Léonie lived on East 21st Street near Gramercy Park. During his medical career he wrote many articles on medical and literary subjects. He was unusually gifted as an author, and his interests continued to grow in that direction. About 1880 he gave up the greater part of his medical practice and founded the New York Bureau of Revision of which he was managing director. The purpose of the bureau was to help authors in perfecting and publishing their work. In 1884 Williams College awarded him the degree of Master of Arts. Besides many essays and poems contributed to numerous magazines, Titus was the author of Ounces of Prevention, a book of essays on hygiene; "A Geographical Dictionary," part of Webster's International Dictionary (1892); "A Dictionary of Proper Names," in the Standard Dictionary (1895); The Climate of Hawaii (1901); editor, Topics of the Time, 6 volumes, (1883); and editor of Personal Recollections of the War of the Rebellion (1891).

PHILIP MUNSON⁶ COAN (Titus M.⁵, Titus⁴, Gaylord³, Mulford², George¹) was born in New York City May 14, 1879, the son of Titus Munson and Léonie Pauline Dorothe (Morel) Coan. At age five he traveled with his parents to France. He went to France a second time with his parents and brother Hamilton. While he was there, he attended the funeral of Victor Hugo. At this time the Coan parents had Philip's portrait painted; and during his sittings he met Oscar Wilde. To prepare for college he studied at Culver School for Boys in New York City, and was graduated from Columbia with a B.A. degree in 1900. He went to work on Wall Street for a brokerage house selling bonds. For his career after Wall Street, here is part of a letter he wrote his Yale friend, Professor Moore, who had told him of an opening teaching journalism at Yale. In this letter he wrote an excellent summary of his professional life from 1906 until July 30, 1913, the date of the letter. Although he never took the teaching position, he certainly was exceptionally well qualified for it.

...Newspaper work began with me in 1906, almost six years after graduation at Columbia College. I joined the staff of the Sun in April of the year of the San Francisco earthquake, after having persecuted the managing editor with applications for some months. During nine months with the paper, I did all the routine work of the beginner including playing substitute on the various news tricks--police stations and headquarters, courts (police and general sessions), ship news and other details. It came to my lot to write a moderate number of the humorous and picturesque news stories of which the newspaper was at that time making a great specialty.

In January 1907 I left the Sun because I was coaxed away by an offer of editorial work under Frank A. Munsey on his "Scrap Book," then a new monthly publication. There I stayed for some four months, and learned enough of magazine makeup, manuscript reading and editing and magazine habits in general to orient me fairly well in that line. On leaving the magazine, however, I came back to the Sun organization, this time to join the Evening Sun with whom I have continued since May 1907.

In 1907 I wrote for the newspaper daily humorous or picturesque news stories, extending over the latter part of the year and running into 1908. I was out reporting many of the big events, such as the runs on the banks in the 1907 panic. In 1908 I covered Taft for a fortnight on his New Haven trip, in the course of his nomination boom. A few weeks later I was dispatched to Oyster Bay, then the summer capital, and covered the President during a great part of his stay there. It was during 1908, I think that I had the good fortune to find the Boas girl, a runaway whose disappearance caused her relatives to offer a reward of several thousand dollars, for which I was technically in line, though not in fairness entitled to it. The incident meant an important beat to our paper in a sensational case that is locally well remembered.

In 1908, I covered the chief non-political stories of the year, in particular, the return of Peary from the Pole, which took me north as far as Labrador on one of the longest chases undertaken by newsggetters of the everyday brand in many years. On that occasion I sent by telegraph from Sydney, N. S. some 27,000 words, my longest single dispatch thus far.

While I have never covered a political convention, I have met a great many of the chief political figures of the east, and interviewed them. Col. Roosevelt knew me well enough to confide an important statement to me for presentation to other press representatives, on the occasion of his appearance as a witness before the Congressional Steel investigation. President Wilson I met first during his presidency at Princeton, where I interviewed him upon the conflict with his trustee opponents over the graduate school; later I met him again, in 1911, during the autumn preceding his nomination, while I was covering the Governors' Conference at Spring Lake, N. J.

While it is not easy to recall to mind all the men I have interviewed I might set down among the others the Mexican Ambassador de la Bana, later president of Mexico; Thomas A. Edison, Richard Cooker, Mayor Gaynor, Jacob H. Schiff, the late Wm. A. Harriman, the Russian statesman, Milyukoff, Pierre Loti, Anna H. Shaw, Governors McGovern of Wisconsin, Hannon of Ohio, Mann of Virginia, O'Neal of Alabama; Menotti Garibaldi, William Watson, William Butler Yates, etc.

Since 1910 when I first took up editorial work, my labors have been chiefly indoor and departmental. Beginning with that year, I did occasional editorial writing, interspersed with the preparation of a series of science notes, the origination and conducting of a column of "Replies to Readers" built on the entertainment basis, and highly successful; the making of special articles on important topics; the editing (in 1910) of the Saturday back page, in its day the most popular page of the Evening Sun; later the building up of a daily magazine page, with the problems of handling writers, composition, type, and makeup which this involved. Twice, and during a total of over two months in the past eight, I have acted as chief editorial writer, in full charge of the editorial force of six men. (Letter from Edward M. Coan Collection, Stonington, Maine).

Shortly after this letter was written Philip became chief editorial writer and served in that capacity until 1925 when he became an editorial writer on The Brooklyn Eagle. He edited several editions of Collier's Encyclopedia, coordinated a Federal historical and economic analysis of New Jersey, and headed the United States division of Funk & Wagnall's International Year Book. He spoke French fluently with an impeccable accent. His daughter-in-law, Barbara, said of him: "He was a wonderful, scholarly man with a marvelous sense of humor and much love for us all." He retired during World War II. "His hobbies included math, Greek, history, bird watching, camping, and trout fishing." (Philip B. Coan)

On June 15, 1910, Philip married Sarah Bryan Burr, who was born in Carbondale, Pennsylvania, June 24, 1883, the daughter of James Edward and Matilda Parsons (Bryan) Burr. Among Sarah's ancestors were the pre-revolutionary families of Burr, Steinman, and Conger. She was a graduate of Rye Seminary, Rye, New York. Philip and Sarah made their home in Montclair, New Jersey, where they were members of the Central Presbyterian Church. There Sarah was active in the Women's Guild, the Sunday School, and the Italian Mission. She was also a Grey Lady of the American Red Cross.

Sarah died at the age of 82 April 29, 1966, in Montclair where she had lived for 53 years. Philip died at the age of 88 April 22, 1968, in Montclair.

HARRIET FIDELIA⁵ COAN (Titus⁴, Gaylord³, Mulford², George¹) was born in Hilo, Hawaiian Islands, August 18, 1839, the daughter of Titus and Fidelia (Church) Coan. As a young girl she went back to the States to complete her education. She returned to the islands to enter upon what she believed to be her life's work--teaching there. She spent her life in this career; and as her obituary states, "as an educator she was always sought."

In 1905 she was operated on for cancer, and she never quite rallied from the effects of this operation. Nevertheless, she taught at the Union School until the close of the term in 1906. When she went into the hospital a week before she died, she calmly announced to her friends that she did not expect to see them again. She died July 23, 1906.

Her estate was valued at more than $10,000. Most of this she left to her sister Sarah. She also remembered her brother Titus, her nephew Raymond Coan, the Foreign Church, and the cemetery for maintenance of the Coan lot. In her will following the disposition of her property, she gave minute details as to how she wished her funeral conducted, even to the number of hacks to be engaged. The situation of her grave was carefully specified, and her executor was directed to purchase an inexpensive gravestone which was to be marked: "Harriet F. Coan, 1839-1906, Gone Home."

LUCY³ COAN (Mulford², George¹) was born in Guilford, Connecticut, in 1765 or 1766, the daughter of Mulford and Mary (Stone) Coan. On March 20, 1780, she married in Woodbury, William Warner, who was born in Judea, Connecticut, November 12, 1770, the son of Eliphaz and Mercy (Drinkwater) Warner. Eliphaz and Mercy came from Middletown, Connecticut, to Sandgate, Vermont, in 1776. He served as a soldier in the various alarms during the American Revolution. He was on the Proprietors Committee and laid out most of the first land surveys for Sandgate.

William was a farmer in Sandgate, and the Federal Census for Vermont, 1850, recorded him there with property valued at $1,000. That same census listed the William Warner & Co., a lumbering business, which no doubt belonged to him. It turned logs into boards by the use of water power, employed three hired hands, and paid a male laborer an average of $50 a month. The company produced 70,000 feet of boards and 30,000 feet of clapboards annually.

Lucy died in Sandgate October 2, 1815, in her 41st year. William married second Abigail Root, who died June 13, 1818, in her 34th year. He married third Prudence Nickerson by whom he had four children: James, Lucy Mercy, Ira N., and Ann. He died May 24, 1856, in Sandgate and was buried with his first two wives in the cemetery there.

SYLVANUS³ COAN (Mulford², George¹) was born October 28, 1778, and baptized December 6, 1778, in Guilford, Connecticut, Congregational Church. He was the son of Mulford and Mary (Stone) Coan. When Sylvanus was in his teens in 1794, the family moved to Woodbury. On November 8, 1798, in Roxbury, he married Ruanna Tuttle, who was born in Roxbury July 28, 1781. Sylvanus was a cooper and a farmer. He married second Lucy Ann Munger November 1, 1801. She was born in Woodbury, November 3, 1783, the daughter of John and Ann (Hough) Munger. According to Barbour Records, Lucy Ann Munger had a son John Reynolds, born January 28, 1801. In the biography of Albert Stone Coan, in D. Hamilton Hurd's History of Fairfield County, Connecticut (Philadelphia: J. W. Lewis & Co., 1881), op. p. 64, Sylvanus and Lucy were said to have had four children. Records show only three. Could John Reynolds have been the fourth? Lucy divorced Sylvanus; and he went West, taking his younger son Milo with him. The older boy, Albert, remained with his mother. On October 22, 1810, maybe in Western Canada (now the province of Ontario) he married third Polly Hough, who was born May 27, 1784. About 1815 Sylvanus went to New York State. Polly died July 21, 1819, aged 35.

On September 9, 1820, probably at Parish, New York, Sylvanus married fourth Frances (Fanny) Williams, who was born June 27, 1802. Sylvanus lived for the rest of his life at Parish where he was magistrate of the town for many years and a prominent member of the Baptist Church. Sylvanus died, aged 81, May 24, 1859, at Parish and was buried there in Bidwell Cemetery. Fanny died March 31, 1888.

NELSON T.⁴ COAN (Sylvanus³, Mulford², George¹) was born in Connecticut August 11, 1799, the son of Sylvanus and Ruanna (Tuttle) Coan. His mother died when he was about a year and a half old. The next record we have of him was found in Sandgate, Vermont, where his Aunt Lucy (Coan) Warner lived; so in all probability she brought him up. On November 7, 1830, Nelson married Nancy Remington in Sandgate, Vermont. She was born in Vermont about 1797. They lived in Sandgate where, according to the Federal Census for Vermont in 1850, Nelson was a mechanic; the Census in 1860, a miller. From September 16, 1853, until April 18, 1861, he was postmaster of Sandgate. According to a card file in Vital Records, Montpelier, Vermont, Nelson died in Sandgate March 20, 1864, aged 69. Either the date or the age is wrong. Either he died in 1864, aged 64; or he died in 1869, aged 69. These records have been copied, and maybe recopied, from the original; so errors do occur. Although two cemeteries were searched in Sandgate, his gravestone was not found.

ALBERT STONE⁴ COAN (Sylvanus³, Mulford², George¹) was born in Bridgewater, Litchfield County, Connecticut, August 11, 1803, the son of Sylvanus and Lucy Ann (Munger) Coan. When he was eight or nine years old, his father and mother were divorced; and his father went West. At the age of ten Albert was put out to work for Matthew Logan. He worked on the farm of Logan until he was eighteen or twenty years old when he commenced to learn the boot and shoe trade. He had little formal education, but worked at his trade winters and on the farm summers for the next twelve years. He then worked a farm on shares for six years when he purchased his own farm in Woodbury. In 1845 he purchased a farm in Trumbull.

On December 6, 1824, he married Sarah Ann Thomas, who was born March 19, 1803, and died May 29, 1839, aged 36. On January 1, 1840, he married second Abby B. Burgess, who was born in Morris, Litchfield County, Connecticut, May 10, 1809. According to the Barbour Collection, Church Records of Trumbull Congregational Church, Vol. 3, pp. 78 and 146, when Albert and his daughter Sarah Abigail were baptized May 13, 1849, and when Albert was admitted to the church, his name was Albert Sylvanus, not Albert Stone. He apparently changed the Sylvanus to Stone, since all other records list him as Albert Stone.

Albert was a life-long Democrat of the Jeffersonian school. He served as town assessor, a delegate to town and county conventions, and was a member of the State Legislature in 1868. He and Abby belonged to the Congregational Church of Trumbull Centre. Abby died June 23, 1886. Albert died in Shelton January 25, 1898, aged 95.

The following biography of Asahel Coan was written by Margaret S. Ruth:

ASAHEL⁴ COAN (Sylvanus³, Mulford², George¹) was born April 13, 1813, in West Canada, son of Sylvanus and Polly (Hough) Coan. He moved with his family to Parish, Oswego County, New York, in the mid-1820s. As he grew up, he helped his father Sylvanus Coan and his elder half-brother Milo clear the land for their farms, located a bit north of the village. Milo's home was near his, and great friends as they were all their lives, they now sleep peacefully near each other, surrounded by their families, in Bidwell Cemetery, about three miles northeast of the town. Despite his stern appearance in his portrait, Asahel was a gentle, kindly man with many friends in the town and county. For years he contributed articles to local newspapers in Parish, Mexico, and the county seat of Oswego. Many clippings, which were preserved by his granddaughter Nellie Keeler, revealed his sentimental nature, his lively inquiring mind, and his deep appreciation of history and man's relation to past, present and future. He may not have had a great deal of formal education, but he obviously read widely to be able to express so many thoughts so clearly, in an extensive vocabulary. Now and again his ideas varied somewhat from "small-town" tradition.

In 1875 he helped found The Old Settlers Association of Oswego County, which held annual gatherings (old fashioned picnics!) attended by as many as 500 persons at times. He submitted detailed reports of these meetings to the newspapers, several of which have been saved.

Longevity fascinated him. He wrote one article after another, reporting on the great age attained by individuals whom he knew in Oswego County. Discounting his flowery language (characteristic of his period) we easily discern his genuine concern for the tender loving care which very elderly persons ought to receive from family and friends.

He himself nearly reached the age of 82. He would have been pleased to read the statement in "Landmarks of Oswego County" (page 663) that when he died January 1, 1895, "he was the oldest correspondent of the 'Parish Mirror,' and one of the oldest citizens of the town."

On September 14, 1840, Asahel married Rosanna McLymond, who was born in 1818, daughter of Bruce McLymond from Scotland and his wife Anna. Rosanna died in Parish, New York, June 3, 1894. Asahel died there January 1, 1895. They were both buried in Bidwell Cemetery in Parish.

LIFE IN THE WOODS

"Hello, old settler, give us another wolf story", was the salutation we received the other day while passing the house of an old friend, an early settler of three score years. But not feeling exactly in a wolf story mood, we promised to tell a fish story. We are well aware of a disposition among the people to discount fish stories rather largely; whether this idea originated on account of the "great fish" mentioned by an ancient writer we can only conjecture. However, as we are the only survivor of our fishing party it will be difficult for outsiders to prove that our fish story needs much discount.

Early in the summer of 1824, with my father (Sylvanus Coan) and Judge Henry Williams we two boys wended our way from Stone hill through the woods by a line of marked trees about three miles to a pond near West Amboy, since known as "Coan Pond". At that time the primitive forest covered the larger part of Oswego County, the wild beast made its lair beneath its shade undisturbed by man; while the finny tribe in almost countless numbers sported beneath the waters. The croak of the bullfrog, the hoot of the owl, the long doleful howl of the wolf and occasionally the shrill shriek of the panther often made night fearful to the timid. But our fish story: We reached our point of destination about noon, near the shore among some lofty pines beside a sparkling spring. We found a fisherman's shanty, we gathered some hemlock brush for a bed, and had a very comfortable place to lodge for the night. And of course the next business in order was fishing.

The only boat was a log canoe with a carrying capacity of four or five men, but the old men not thinking it safe for all of us to embark on board at the same time concluded to leave us two boys on shore while they went on the pond. To this we demurred; we thought all the fun was on the pond. However, when the old men were off half a mile we rigged our fish tackle, perched ourselves on the trunk of a huge pine that had fallen half its length into the water. We didn't wait long in suspense; we soon "got a bite" and soon the scaley beauties began to accumulate along the shore on dry land, and in about three or four hours we caught 184 rock bass that weighed about a pound and a half each. But the secret of our success was we had struck a spawning bed where hundreds of fish might have been seen from any stand point along the shore for more than forty rods.

Towards evening the old men came up chuckling over their "big catch" of ten or fifteen pounds of small fish and one black bass that weighed about three pounds. But when they saw "our pile" more than four men could carry, they "caved in", and you can bet there was two big boys 'round 'bout that time--none of your small fry fishermen though neither of us had yet reached our teens. We built a camp fire, roasted some fish and what with provisions we had brought with us we had a splendid supper. O how we enjoyed life in those days. During the night our quiet repose was disturbed by a bear who put in a claim to a part of our fish, but the old judge soon decided the case: he drew a brand from the smouldering camp fire, and the way the fire flew among them trees was a new idea to bears, and Bruin made off double quick. And this was our first lesson in camp life. It was no use for them big boys to tell their big fish stories after that, we could beat them out of sight.

FRANJESKIA⁵ COAN (Asahel⁴, Sylvanus³, Mulford², George¹) was born in Parish, New York, August 21, 1842, daughter of Asahel and Rosanna (McLymond) Coan. On December 31, 1860, she married William Marvin Keeler, who was born March 6, 1837, son of Nathan Olmstead Keeler and his third wife Elizabeth (Henderson) Keeler. Franjeskia and William lived in a small house in Parish. During the school year to eke out the family income, they took in boarders--young people from outlying areas who wanted to attend the high school in Parish. She gained quite a reputation for her motherly care of these youngsters. After Franjeskia's death, William lived with their daughter Nellie, Mrs. Jacob Schumacher, in Parish until his tragic death. He was run over by the evening train at the town station. He was stone deaf and did not hear the train approaching.

Franjeskia died November 7, 1889; William October 13, 1903. They were both buried in Bidwell Cemetery in Parish.

On May 27, 1880, she married Jacob William Schumacher, who was born in Albany, New York, September 15, 1855, son of Andrew and Christina (Keck) Schumacher. Andrew and Christina were both born in Germany and came to the United States from the Black Forest in the early 1850s. Nellie and Jacob spent most of their married life in Parish where he had his own small factory for manufacturing cigars from domestic tobacco. He was an avid gardener and a devoted bee keeper. He loved fishing, especially in nearby Oneida Lake. When he retired from the cigar manufacturing business, Nellie and he lived with several of their daughters in Rochester and on Long Island.

Luckily for this genealogy, Nellie believed in never throwing anything away; and many of the pictures in this chapter have survived until the present because of her care. Jacob died October 30, 1925, on Long Island. Nellie died in Garden City, New York, April 4, 1941.

On October 3, 1905, she married Robert Harley Ruth, who was born June 17, 1880, in Houlton, Maine. His father and grandfather had large lumbering operations in the virgin forests of Northern Maine. Robert attended Ricker Academy in Houlton, Maine, and Eastman Business College at Poughkeepsie, New York, where he met Nora. He became a salesman for electrical manufacturers and in 1919 set up his own electrical contracting business in Rochester, New York.

Robert was descended from Scotch and Scotch-Irish immigrants. One of them was John Stewart (1738-1805) who fought with the "Black Watch," the 42nd Regiment of Highlanders, at the Battle of Montreal, 1760. He later settled on the Miramichi River in New Brunswick. (Robert Ruth's family is the

ROGER ALLAN RUTH⁸, son of Robert Harley and Nora May (Schumacher) Ruth, was born in Rutherford, New Jersey, April 29, 1913. From the time he was a young boy, he was always interested in mechanics and electricity. He worked for Eastman Kodak Company, Rochester, New York, as electrical engineer for 36 years and retired in 1971. He served in increasingly responsible capacities at Eastman. He assisted with the development of the first sound movie projector, and during World War II he helped produce the V. T. Fuse, one of the most crucial and decisive weapons the United States Army and Navy used to win the war in Europe and in the Pacific theater.

At Eastman Kodak Roger met Margaret Sayre Stallman, whom he married October 7, 1950. She was born May 17, 1911, at Salt Lake City, Utah, daughter of Dr. George Philip and Myra Willson (Rafter) Stallman. Dr. Stallman was an Army doctor, and during her childhood Margaret lived on various Army posts from the Philippine Islands to the East Coast of the United States. In 1932 she was graduated from Mount Holyoke College. She then did secretarial work; first, for a Rochester, New York, physician; and then for Eastman Kodak until her marriage in 1950.

On the service of her ancestor James Willson, Margaret joined the Daughters of the American Revolution. On his mother's line Roger was a life member of the Sons of the American Revolution, and served as president of the Rochester Chapter for three years. Both Margaret and Roger were interested in genealogy and traveled to many ancestral sites here and abroad. In addition, they both enjoyed stamp collecting and photography.

In 1882 they lived in Rochester on the shore of Lake Ontario near the mouth of the Genesee River. They often told their friends that their front yard stretched 55 miles, all the way to Canada. However, due to the earth's curvature, even on a clear day one could not see that far.

OLIVE GRACE SCHUMACHER⁷, daughter of Jacob William and Nellie May (Keeler) Schumacher, was born in Parish, New York, March 20, 1895. She was a secretary in downtown New York City and used to tell about the horrifying sway developed in the Woolworth Building in a high wind at the level of her office. Being the tallest building in the world at that time (except the Eiffel Tower in Paris), it was erected to withstand storms; so despite her fears she was perfectly safe.

On December 31, 1924, she married John Alfred Ewald, who was born December 22, 1901. They lived in Hempstead and Garden City, Long Island. John was just starting at the bottom of his lifetime career in the California Perfume Company, later known as Avon Products. He became firm president and chairman of the board.

They were divorced, and she married second on February 26, 1941, Carl D. Bumpus, who was born February 28, 1897. He was a lock-keeper on the New York State Barge Canal near Brewerton, New York. As their home was on a small farm nearby, Verna used to supply fresh eggs, vegetables, and other produce to owners of passing canal boats, an activity she greatly enjoyed which was appreciated by the water-dwellers.

Carl died September 25, 1973, in Holly Hill, Florida; Verna, September 23, 1977, in Daytona Beach.

JAY AUGUSTUS SCHUMACHER⁷, son of Jacob William and Nellie May (Keeler) Schumacher, was born September 6, 1902, in Parish, New York. He married Mrs. Marian (McCarty) Neitz on April 7, 1956. She was born September 23, 1909, in North Syracuse, New York. Jay was a set-up man and tool worker at the L. C. Smith plant in Syracuse. When it became Smith-

Corono Company and moved to Cortland, New York, Jay and Mar-ian commuted the 80 miles from their home in North Syracuse to Cortland and back every day rather than give up their friends and their garden. They made many hazardous trips early on winter mornings to punch in on time; and many long, cold trips home to a late supper after their days's work. In 1982 they had retired from work and from driving long distances, but not from gardening.

CONCLUSION

PRONUNCIATION OF COAN

by

Ruth Coan Fulton

No book on the Coans would be complete without mention of the correct pronunciation of the name. I questioned descendants of the main ancestral lines of Peter and George only to find they were not in agreement on this important matter.

Most of the descendants of George said the name was pronounced with an accent on the last syllable--Co-an'. Edward Morel⁷ Coan of Stonington, Maine, whose ancestor was George's grandson Gaylord³, wrote: "My father Philip Coan made the pronunciation (Co-an') clear to me at an early age. There has never been any other approved pronunciation, to my knowledge, in either my family or in my cousin's..."

Howard Radcliffe⁷ Coan of West Hartford, Connecticut, another descendant of Gaylord³, wrote: "Definitely on the second syllable! All the Coans I have known or still know use the 2nd syllable accent. Anything else means h between the vowels!"

Ezra Titus⁵ Coan (1829-1900), George's great grandson also through Gaylord³, added an extra n to his name spelling it Coann to secure correct pronunciation--an accent on the last syllable.

Three more of George's descendants, this time through his grandson Sylvanus³, Avery Howard⁷ Coan and Glenn Philipson⁸ Coan, Jr., both of St. Paul, Minnesota, and Margaret Ruth, wife of Roger Allan Ruth⁸ of Rochester, New York, all pronounced the name accenting the last syllable. Mrs. Ruth wrote: "All of Mother Ruth's relatives in New York State and the people we met in Connecticut called it Co-ann'."

Now what of Peter's line? Virginia⁸ Coan Wiles of Minerva, Ohio, a descendant of Peter's son Jacob² and author of History of the Coan Family of America, Vols. I and II, an authority on our family, said Coan was accented on the last syllable. Theodore Hunter Smith⁷ of Winter Park, Florida, also a descendant of Jacob² and an authority on Coan genealogy, said the name was Co-an'. He pointed out that the name of his ancestor, Jacob², was spelled Coann on the roster of men who served in Nathaniel Johnson's 2nd Company, 7th Regiment, in the Old French War. The name of Jacob's grandson, William⁴, was recorded Coann in the 1820 Federal Census of Adams County, Ohio. Both these names, Mr. Smith said, were written as the writer heard them; so Jacob² and William⁴ accented the last syllable.

Mrs. Norman Allison Coan of Vancouver, Washington, whose husband Norman⁷ is a descendant of Peter's grandson Augustus³, wrote: "Our uncle, Dr. Glenn Long⁶ Coan, was a stickler for pronunciation. He said Coan was like Quann." He definitely accented the last syllable. Mrs. Coan added:

"An interesting tid-bit--a girl's wedding account gave her name as Co-anne."

Clarence Chittenden Potter⁷, a descendant of Peter's son John and a resident of Guilford, Connecticut, wrote: "I can remember being told to go down to the Coan Lot and see if I could find any "craneberrys", and it sounded like 'Co' as in Cohabit (the original name of North Guilford) and 'An' as in Anaconda with accent on An!"

We have covered descendants of the main lines from George and Peter except for one--Peter's son Abraham². Three descendants of Captain Elisha³ Coan of Maine, Abraham's son, all were very emphatic about accenting the first syllable of Coan. I myself was carefully taught by my parents to say Co'-an. Manfred McClure⁷ of Boulder, Colorado, a descendant of Captain Elisha's grandson Alonzo⁵ Coan wrote that his mother, Edith Coan, always emphasized that the pronunciation of the Coan family name was Co'-an, accent on the first syllable. Prescott⁸ Coan of Sheffield, Massachusetts, another descendant of Captain Elisha through his grandson Robert Abbott⁵ Coan, said the first syllable should be stressed. Three Elisha descendants disagreed with the first three--Priscilla⁸ Coan Barnes of South Pasadena, Florida, a descendant of Captain Elisha's son Shubael⁴, Hannah Bond Zimmerman⁷ of Australia, a descendant of Captain Elisha's daughter Hannah⁴, and Ralph Gorman Coan, Jr., of Atherton, California, a descendant of Captain Elisha's son Abraham⁴, all accented the last syllable.

Another Coan line that accented the first syllable is one descended from Jacob² through his great, great grandson Benjamin Walker⁶ Coan. Mrs. Ralph William Coan, Sr., wife of Ralph⁷ of Urbandale, Iowa, wrote: "Our part of the family has always pronounced the name with an accent on the first syllable." Their family extends from Iowa to Texas and on to California. Nancy S.⁸ Coan of Washington, D. C., a descendant of George, wrote that she accented the last syllable, but her father Frank S. Coan accented the first.

Knowing I was having problems with the pronunciation of Coan, Frances C. (Smith) Coan⁸ of Kirkland, Washington, a Jacob descendant who married a Jacob² descendant, Eugene Carpenter⁸ Coan, suggested I talk on the phone to her mother-in-law, Mrs. Folwell Welles Coan of Minneapolis, Minnesota. When I called, Mrs. Folwell Coan said that to help people pronounce the name correctly, she frequently told them: "It's not like Joan; it's like Joanne." She continued by saying that when she was first married, she answered the telephone one day, "This is Mrs. Coan," mispronouncing the name. Her husband Folwell overheard her and corrected her. He then explained that at Hotchkiss and at Yale at the beginning of each term when his new instructors mispronounced his name, he would always stop after class and politely explain how to say Coan. He concluded by telling her, "When you have had the name as long as I have, you will fight for it."

Mrs. Coan said further that actually the name should be pronounced with an equal accent on both syllables--Co'-an'. But since in English all two-syllable words are accented on one syllable or the other, never on both, it is almost impossible to get people to say Coan with each syllable accented. To secure a more nearly correct pronunciation, most Coans accent the last syllable. When I told her I was taught to accent the first, she said I was probably more nearly right; but people, hearing the first syllable accented, would soon be saying, "Co-en," then "Co-un," and eventually "Cone."

Ralph Gorman⁷ Coan, Sr., of Lake Oswego, Oregon, a descendant of the Maine line through Captain Elisha, agreed with Mrs. Folwell Coan. He said the name should have equal accents on each syllable, but to secure a more nearly correct pronunciation, he himself accented the last syllable. Stuart F. G.⁸ Coan of Greenwich, Connecticut, a descendant of George, also supported Mrs. Folwell Coan and said the name should be pronounced Co'-ann' with equal accent on each syllable. He wrote: "all of us...have pronounced our name as above. And when my mother was in England about 1938, she found the name to be fairly common in East Anglia (Norwich). But she had no chance to do any research. It was pronounced as we do."

Accent on first syllable, accent on last syllable, accent on both syllables--there is one thing all the Coans and Coan descendants do have complete agreement on and that is how not to say Coan. It is not Co-hen, Co-han, Co-en, Cowan, Coon, Co-un, or Cone! We also stand together in our opinion that the correct pronunciation of Coan is very important; and in our own ways, like Folwell Welles Coan, we are all willing "to fight for it!"

ERRATA

Please attach (paste, staple or tape) these errata sheets in the back of the book to the pages left blank for this purpose. Correct in the text the errors, especially the factual ones. The reference line is determined by counting printed lines only. When the reference occurs in about the middle of a page, mid. is used in place of a line number. When f.b. occurs after a line number, the line has been determined by counting from the bottom of the page up. C. means caption.
